PREFACE.

The first German edition of this book was published at Berlin in 1890, being Volume I. in the series of Lehrbücher des Seminars für Orientalische Sprachen. As such it was dedicated to the memory of the Empress Augusta, to whose active interest the Seminar largely owed its existence.

Dr. Lange was for a number of years instructor in the German language at what was then the Preparatory School for the University (Daigaku Yobimon), in Tōkyō. Since that time all his energies have been devoted to the task of making his countrymen acquainted with the Japanese language and literature.

After I undertook the preparation of the English Edition, Dr. Lange sent me copious notes of corrections and additions gathered during his ten years' experience as a teacher. to him requires me to state that I have not been a close or faithful translator. He has given me entire liberty in dealing with the material contained in the Lehrbuch and in his manuscript notes, and I have felt justified in taking this liberty, for several reasons. In the first place his book was written with the needs of a German student in view, and while the needs of an English-speaking student are in the main the same, there are many cases in which an explanation intended for the one will not help the other. Secondly, Dr. Lange's notes have often been mere suggestions, very fruitful indeed, but not fully developed. And, finally, I felt that I had one advantage over the original author in that I used his text-book when I first learned my Japanese, and was thus in a position to test it as he could not. My subsequent experience in the use of the language has revealed omissions not so apparent to the author himself. cordingly my aim has been to recast all the material in such a way as to make it most helpful to the English-speaking student, examining the original text from time to time to make sure that nothing of value had been omitted. With such a method it was inevitable that I should mar much of Dr. Lange's work, but I trust that the gain exceeds the loss. The circumstances having precluded the submission of proofs to Dr. Lange, except in the case of the first thirty-two pages, he is not responsible for any errors.

The aim of the book is pedagogical rather than scientific; hence the combination of system and no-system and the numerous repetitions. The pedagogical principle has been applied, for example, in the study of words. When it seems likely to aid the memory of the student to indicate the origin of a word, this is done; but when the etymology is disputed or apt to be confusing nothing is said about it and the student must learn the word as a whole. The repetitions in most cases are not accidental but designed; for the student must pass through three stages to become master of an idiom. First he needs to be thoroughly convinced that there is such an idiom; secondly, he must learn how to use it, and, thirdly, after he has entirely forgotten its existence he needs to be reminded that he cannot get along very well without it.

The author of the most widely known colloquial grammar hitherto written in Japanese has seen fit to speak very disparagingly of the pioneer work done in this department of study by foreigners. He is right in thinking that a truly scientific grammar of the colloquial is yet to be written. But it must not be presumed that the foreign students of the colloquial have taken the methods of the compilers of nine out of ten of the English text-books which crowd the shelves of Japanese bookstores, every page of which reveals the fact that the English is derived from the inner consciousness of some one who did not think it worth while to consult an Englishman while the book was in In this book the sentences have all been taken preparation. from the mouths of Japanese and they have been repeatedly reviewed and criticised by Japanese. Not a single sentence has been inserted on the authority of a foreigner. tences to be translated from English into Japanese were first written out in Japanese and then translated into English with a view to retranslation.

Dr. Lange in his preface acknowledges his obligations to Mr. Tsurutarō Senga. At every step I have leaned heavily on my colleagues and friends, Mr. Tadashi Igarashi and Mr. Jirō Macda. The whole book has been examined and amended in manuscript by Mr. Iwae Irie, formerly our Mission's Teacher of Japanese.

Rev. Henry K. Miller has corrected the whole manuscript, and also applied his valuable experience to the reading of the proofs. To Mrs. Miller I am indebted for performing most of the labor connected with the preparation of the general vocabulary at the end.

To guard against misleading typographical errors I have had the printing done at Sendai under my own eyes. This work has been accomplished under great disadvantages, as a glance at the book will show. It will, however, not detract from the value of the work in the eyes of some to know that from beginning to end the composition has been done by a band of students working their way through college.

INTRODUCTION.

THE JAPANESE LANGUAGE.

The relation of the Japanese to other languages has not yet been satisfactorily determined. The attempt to discover an affinity with the Aryan languages a has, it must be said, not been successful; for the pronouns and numerals differ entirely, and the words that are identical or even similar are too few to justify the inference of a common origin. A comparison of Japanese roots with those of the geographically adjacent Altaic languages does not, in the opinion of those competent to judge, bring us any nearer to the solution of the problem. Nevertheless Japanese is usually regarded as belonging to this great group of Altaic languages, for the reason that it has in common with them the characteristic known as agglutination. That is, in Japanese, as in all agglutinative tongues, inflection in the ordinary sense is replaced by a loose attachment of particles to the stem as suffixes, while the stem itself remains comparatively unaffected. But it must be noted that the colloquial as compared with the classical Japanese seems to be in a state of transition from the agglutinative to the inflectional stage. Thus in the form natta "became" the stem of the verb and its termination are not so easily distinguishable as in the corresponding classical form nari-tari. In regard to syntax also the Japanese is very much like some of the languages that unquestionably belong to the Altaic group, e.g., the Manchurian.

SINICO-JAPANESE.

With Chinese the Japanese language proper has no relation whatever. In the former, words are properly monosyllabic and frequently end in consonants; in the latter they are mostly a See Transactions of the Asiatic Society of Japan, Vol. II., p. 199 ff.

polysyllabic, the syllables being uniformly composed of a vowel or of a simple consonant followed by a vowel. <sup>a</sup> The syntax too is utterly different.

Yet Chinese is of great importance in the study of Japanese, even of greater importance than Latin is in the study of English. Through the study of Chinese literature and the Buddhistic scriptures (which came to Japan in the form of Chinese translations), the importation of the Chinese arts and sciences, and the adoption of the ideographic script, it has come to pass that a great mass of Chinese words and expressions has found entrance into the Japanese language, in numerous cases even supplanting the native terms.

Accordingly modern Japanese is a mixture of native elements and words borrowed from the Chinese and possesses a rich vocabulary. For many ideas there are both Japanese and Chinese terms. Of the latter the greater number are not understood except in educated circles. Many, however, have become thoroughly naturalized; e. g., sen-taku laundry. b On the other hand the dictionaries are full of classical native words which are understood only by those who make their study a specialty.

The common use of words derived from the Chinese is due not simply to the natural liking for foreign terms, but much more to the fact that the demand for new words expressing new conceptions is most easily and conveniently met by forming compounds from the Chinese. These are often remarkable for conciseness. "Telegraph" is den-shin, from den lightning and shin tidings. Marconi has no sooner perfected his great invention than the Japanese have a new word ready for the a The only exception is n. But in genuine Japanese words, like shinan (classical future of shinu to die), the n is derived from mu. All other words ending in n are either imported from other languages or of onomatopoetic character.

b It rarely happens, however, that foreign terms are regularly inflected like genuine Japanese words. The rule is to regard them as substantives, adding surn (to do) to form verbs, na or no to form adjectives and ni to form adverbs. Sometimes a single word may serve all these purposes; e. g., teki-tō suitability, tekitō suru be suitable, tekitō na suitable, tekitō ni suitably. But we also have such regular verbs as tekitau, tekitatte oppose, from teki-tai; ryōru, ryotte cook, from ryō-ri; shikeru, shikette be stormy, from shi-ke; guchiru, guchitte be silly (rare), from gu-chi; tai-jiru, taijite subdue (rare), from tai-ji, and the adjective hidoi, from hi-dō.

dictionary; namely, mu-sen-den-shin (mu-sen without line). "Concrete" is  $y\bar{u}$ -kei (having form); "abstract," mu-kei. The exigencies of our own time have called forth an immense number of new scientific and philosophical terms with which the dictionary-makers have been quite unable to cope.

In order to speak correctly it is often important to know whether a word is of Japanese or of Chinese origin, especially in using the honorifics (Ch. XIII.) and the numerals. This distinction will be easy to make after a little practice. The Chinese vocables are very short. Monosyllables containing a long vowel or ending in n are generally of Chinese origin. These vocables usually occur not singly but in compounds, mostly of two components. There are, however, a few hybrid compounds (Ch. IX.).

The pronunciation of the words taken from the Chinese is very different from that now in vogue in China. b Originally derived from certain Chinese dialects, it has apparently suffered great phonetic changes in the course of time, so that the Chinese cannot understand it at all. The classical pronunciation now taken as the standard by educated people is the kan-on (lit. sound of Kan). Kan or Han was the name of the dynasties that reigned in the north from B. C. 206 to A. D. 264. c But many older words, especially those connected with Buddhism, are pronounced according to the go-on. Go or Wu, at the time when Chinese literature was introduced into Japan, about A. D. 300, was one of the three Chinese states and included the provinces south of Shanghai. More modern sounds are known as  $t\bar{o}$ -on,  $T\bar{o}$  or T and having been the dynasty reigning from 618 to 913. Excepting proper names, there are very few a Another case in point is that of the word teki (different from the teki's above), used in formal speech as a suffix to nouns derived from the Chinese. The rule is that before a Chinese word no particle is needed, but before a Japanese word no must be added; e. g., from ri-sō ideal and nin-gen man, risō-teki-ningen ideal man, but risō-teki no kuni ideal country.

b See Lange, Einführung in die japanische Schrift, p. 70 ff. and Chamberlain, "Introduction to the Study of Japanese Writing," p. 372 ff.

c Kan often means "China" in general, but, like almost all Chinese words, occurs only in compounds; e. g., kan-go Chinese words, kan-ji Chinese characters, kan-bun (for kan-bun) Chinese composition, etc. See also p. 122a.

words that follow the  $t\bar{o}on$ , the most common being an-don lamp (old style),  $ch\bar{o}$ -chin lantern, fu-ton cushion, tem-bin balance, fu-shin building operations, etc.

In a few words, such as nan south, the pronunciation has not varied. But in Mei-ji enlightened rule,  $my\bar{o}-nichi$  to-morrow (nichi day) and Min the Ming dynasty, the same word has three different pronunciations. So the character shan in Shan-hai Shanghai is  $sh\bar{o}$  in kanon and  $j\bar{o}$  in goon. Practically only the kanon and goon need be taken into the account, and the student need not trouble himself much about the differences between them. Usually the goon is distinguished from the kanon by association with old Buddhistic terms. Compare:

Goon	Kanon	Japanese	English
nin'	jin	hito	man, person
nichi	jitsu	hi	day
sai	sei	nishi	west
kin	kon	ima	now
in	on	koe, oto	voice, sound
$gyar{o}$	$kar{o}$	yuku	go
$my\bar{o}$	mei	na	name
$ky\bar{o}$	kei	miyako	capital
$s h ar{o}$	sei	tadashii	right motsu	butsu	mono	thing
mon	bun	fumi	letter .
ge	gwui	soto	outside
e	kwai		picture
ge	ka	shita	under gwatsu	getsu	tsuki	moon, month
riki	ryoku	chikara	power
AT	.1	1 1	3 . 3 . 3

Not infrequently one word may be pronounced in both ways without changing the sense; e. g.,  $T\bar{o}$ - $ky\bar{o}$  or  $T\bar{o}$ -kei (east capital). In most cases usage allows only one or the other. Thus we say sai- $ky\bar{o}$  west capital, i. e., Kyōto, but sei-nan southwest (lit. west south);  $my\bar{o}$ -ji family name (lit. name character), but sei-mei the full name (family name and personal name); ge-ka surgeon (lit. externalist), but gwai- $k\bar{o}ku$  foreign country;  $bimb\bar{o}$ -nin pauper, but gwaikoku-jin foreigner.

The tones or accents of the Chinese are disregarded, except in the composition of Chinese verses. This fact and phonetic decay have brought it to pass that ten, twenty or thirty characters may have exactly the same sound. This is the most distressing feature of the spoken Japanese language. Men of the same set or clique have no difficulty in understanding their own technical terms, but to the uninitiated, even though they be well educated, rare Chinese compounds convey no sense until the speaker by writing in the air or by explanation indicates what the ideograms are.

WORDS DERIVED FROM WESTERN LANGUAGES.

In comparison with the Chinese the number of words imported from the European languages is small. Thus we have from the Spanish and Portuguese biidoro (vidrio) glass (modern glass, garasu), kasuteira (castilla) sponge cake, kompeitō (confeito) candy; from the French, shabon (savon) soap, shappo (chapeau) hat; from the Dutch, kōhii (koṭtij) coffee, dontaku(zondag) holiday; from the German, chifusu(Typhus), torahōmu (Trachoma) granular eyelids, etc. Many words have lately come in from the English; e. g., baiorin violin, bōto boat, burashi brush, hankechi handkerchief, inki ink, katsuretsu cutlet, matchi match, naifu knife, peiji page, rampu lamp, ramune lemonade, shatsu shirt, shichū stew, sutekki stick, suteishon station, tonneru tunnel, etc. From the English through the French: bifuteki (bifteck) beefsteak. Buranketto blanket has become ketto. a

THE IDEOGRAPHIC SCRIPT.

As has been remarked, the Japanese have adopted the Chinese ideographic script, in which the characters are symbols not of sounds, but of ideas. They are like our Arabic numerals and mathematical signs, which are variously read in different languages, but have the same sense everywhere. To read Japanese texts readily one must master between four and five thousand characters. To accomplish this two or three years are required, even in the case of a bright student. But the attempt should be made. Every one who aspires to become so proa There are also a few Japanese words in European languages; e. g., the Spanish biombo, from byōbu screen, moxa (p. 145a), riksha, kimono, etc.

ficient as to be able to understand anything said in his presence and to express himself freely on any subject, must master the Chinese elements in the language. Generally the easiest way to do this is to learn the ideograms, and the easiest way to learn the ideograms is to learn how to write them. The attempt to learn to write beautifully like a native would be in most cases a waste of time, if not an impossible task, but at least the order of the strokes should be mastered.

But in the order of time the first and most important task is to get a firm hold on the grammatical structure and principal idioms of the language. The student who is ambitious to "master" the language is therefore advised to "divide," that is, to devote his first year to the study of the colloquial and postpone the study of the literary language and the characters to the second year. Printed helps of two kinds will be available, those in kana, the native syllabary, and those in rōmaji, the romanized form.

Kana.

The Japanese began at a very early date to use the ideograms phonetically, that is, to indicate sounds without regard to the proper sense of the characters. They called them kana, from kari-na borrowed name. This use of the ideograms continues to this day in the case of proper names. Thus America is written A-me-ri-ka (亞米利加) the characters meaning respectively: next, rice, gain, add.a In the same way the ideogram for "root," called in Japanese ne, is often substituted for the homonymous character ne (mi-ne) meaning "peak," as in Hako-ne and words like ya-ne roof (ya house).

Through this phonetic use of the Chinese ideograms there came into existence about A. D. 900 two syllabaries called kata-kana and hira-gana. A kata-kana (kata side) is written squarely, being in most cases a side or portion of a common character a The extreme of arbitrariness is reached in the case of some proper names that have been bodily imported from China, where the modern pronunciation approximates the original sound. But the Japanese conventional pronunciation is pretty far off sometimes; e. g., New York is written 對育 Chū·iku. Here the ideograms give neither sense nor sound.

having the sound represented by it; e. g.,  $\mathcal{T}(a)$  from  $\mathcal{F}$ ,  $\mathcal{A}(i)$  from  $\mathcal{F}$ ,  $\mathcal{A}(ka)$  from  $\mathcal{F}$ . The katakana are now used only in formal documents, in writing foreign names and interjections, in telegrams, etc. The hira-gana(hira level, ordinary) are characters written cursively and, in most cases, very much simplified; e. g.,  $\mathfrak{F}(a)$  from  $\mathfrak{F}$ ,  $\mathfrak{W}(i)$  from  $\mathfrak{V}$ ,  $\mathfrak{F}(u)$  from  $\mathfrak{F}$ ,  $\mathfrak{P}(ka)$  from  $\mathfrak{F}$ . Formerly there was a great variety of them, but in our own times the employment of movable types in printing and the policy of the Educational Department have had the effect of practically reducing the number in common use to 48, one for each sound.

In the following table we give the hiragana arranged in the order of the  $go j\bar{u}$  on "the fifty sounds." Under each hiragana is given the corresponding katakana and under that the equivalent in Roman letters.

	わヮ	らラ	やヤ	*	は	なナ	たタ	なサ	かカ	あア
	wa	ra	ya	ma	ha	na	ta	sa	ka	a る キ.	b y		みミ	ک ب	5 1	ちょ	しッ	45	ひイ
	wi	ri		mi	hi	ni	chi	shi	ki	i んン		るル	ゆュ	むム	ふっ	N N	つッ	すス	くり	うゥ
n		ru	yu	mu	fu	nu	tsu	su	ku	u
	名工	n		めメ	^ ~	ねチ	てテ	난 七	けケ	工工
	we	re		me	he	ne	te	se	ke	e
	をヲ	ろロ	よョ	多毛	没 水	01	43	う ツ	2 ==	たオ
	wo	ro	yo	mo	ho	no	to	80	ko	0

The columns are read in order beginning with the right: a, i, u, e, o; ka, ki, ku, ke, ko, etc. Most dictionaries now follow this order, the n being sometimes regarded as a variant of mu. It is to be observed that there is no yi, ye, or wu. To make the scheme complete the corresponding syllables from the first column are sometimes put into the vacant places. Wi, we, wo are scarcely distinguished in pronunciation from i, e, o. It is also to be noted that the Japanese do not say si, ti, tu, hu, but shi, chi, tsu, fu. The table is of great importance for the conjugation of the verb.

From the syllables in which the consonant is surd corresponding sonants are derived: from the k column, ga, gi, gu, ge, go (ガギググゴ); from the s column, za, ji, zu, ze, zo (ザジ ズゼゾ); from the t column, da, ji, zu, de, do (ダザッデ F). Such change in the sound is called nigori (lit. turbidness, impurity). The h column by nigori becomes ba, bi, bu, be, bo (メビブベボ); by what is called han-nigori (han half), pa, pi, pu, pe, po (バピッペボ). In Japanese writing the marks of nigori are often omitted.

There is another arrangement of the syllabary called iroha:

i ro ha ni ho he to chi ri nu ru wo wa ka yo ta re so tsu ne na ra mu u wi no o ku ya ma ke fu ko e te a sa ki yu me mi shi we hi mo se su

This is in the form of a stanza of poetry giving expression to Buddhistic sentiment:

Iro wa nioedo chirinuru wo; waga yo tare zo tsune naramu. Ui no okuyama kyō koete, asaki yume mishi, ei mo sezu.

Though the blossoms (hues) are fragrant they fall away; In this our world who will abide alway?

To-day I crossed the very mountain-recesses of mutability; And saw a shallow dream, nor was I intoxicated thereby.

Though these comparatively easy syllabaries have been in existence a thousand years, they have not supplanted the ideograms, but play only a minor role beside them. The Japanese syntax being so different from the Chinese, in ordinary Japanese composition the hiragana are interspersed among the characters to indicate modifiers, particles, terminations, etc.

Such composition is called kana-majiri, from majiru be mixed. Further, for the benefit of the uneducated, hiragana may be written to the right of the ideograms to indicate the pronunciation. This is called kana-tsuki, from tsuku be attached. It is thus possible to read most Japanese books without a knowledge of the ideograms. The traditional spelling corresponds to an ancient pronunciation which has been considerably modified in the course of time. In the case of native words the syllables of the h column have been most affected.

kaharu be changed is pronounced kawaru kahi shellfish ,, ,, kai if u say ,, ,, u mahe before ,, ,, mae hoho cheek ,, ,,  $h\bar{o}$

But it is in the pronunciation of the Chinese words that the greatest changes have occurred. Thus tou, tau, tafu are all pronounced  $t\bar{o}$  (not to speak of towo and toho in the case of native words); kiyau, kiyou, keu and kefu (see the iroha above) are all pronounced  $ky\bar{o}$ .  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$  in kana is spelled toukiyau. The Japanese have been so indifferent to this traditional spelling that even among educated people hardly one in ten knows how to spell correctly. There has been a natural tendency to choose the briefest forms, as keu for  $ky\bar{o}$ , seu for  $sh\bar{o}$ , teu for  $ch\bar{o}$ , etc. The Department of Education three years ago issued a regulation to the effect that sounds like  $t\bar{o}$  should invariably be written to—; sounds like  $ky\bar{o}$ , ki yo—, etc. This reform makes the kana spelling of the Chinese words almost as simple and phonetic as  $r\bar{o}maji$ . <sup>a</sup>

$R\bar{o}maji.$

The system of romanization adopted for this book is identical with that followed by Hepburn's and Brinkley's Dictionaries. A fair degree of uniformity has been secured through the efforts of the  $R\bar{o}ma-ji-kwai$  (ji letter, kwai association), a society organized by Japanese and foreigners in 1885 for the purpose a For example, even in the reformed kana the following must be written alike but pronounced differently: kiyō I will wear and kyō to-day; katsute previously and katte one's own convenience.

of effecting a substitution of the Roman script for the Chinese. 2

A committee appointed by the Educational Department to investigate the question of romanization submitted a tentative report three years ago. The system recommended differs very little from that now in use. The chief innovations are the substitution of si for shi and sya, syu, syo for sha, shu, sho, following the analogy of kya, kyu, kyo, etc. Further, the Committee would write ci, ca, cu, co for chi, cha, chu, cho, following presumably the analogy of Italian. The changes proposed have not been adopted in this book for the reason that the Educational Department has not yet reached a final decision in the matter. b $R\bar{o}maji$  is designed to represent phonetically the standard pronunciation of the present day. In reading  $r\bar{o}maji$  the general principle to be observed is that the vowels are pronounced as in German; the consonants, as in English.

PRONUNCIATION AND EUPHONY.

Vowels.—As might naturally be inferred, in the case of English-speaking people it is the vowels rather than the consonants that are hard to pronounce. c In English the vowels are largely sacrificed to the accent. In Japanese the reverse is true, a While much of the Japanese literature, being intended for the eye, is hardly intelligible without the ideograms, it is quite reasonable to expect that any conversation commonly understood through the ear should be intelligible when reduced to writing by means of an adequate phonetic system. But the full realization of the ideal of the Rōmajikwai must wait until the teachers, preachers and public speakers of Japan have by a process of natural selection evolved a vocabulary at once intelligible to their hearers and adequate to express thought on every subject, that is, until the spoken language becomes as satisfactory a medium of expression as the present written language is. Forces now at work in Japan will bring this about before very long.

b See Kwampō (Official Gazette), 5, Nov., 1900. The innovations proposed are comparatively unimportant. Others will be referred to incidentally. There are questions connected with romanization which press for an official solution and in most cases the suggestions of the Commitee are excellent. Its report deals largely with the question of the division of words. For instance, the Committee would write oagari nasai mase for o agari nasaimase. In regard to this question great confusion now prevails. It is to be regretted if the severe criticism with which the report met has had the effect of delaying the completion and adoption of an official system of romanization and its introduction into the schools.

c A vowel is called bo-in (mother sound); a consonant, shi-in (child sound), that is, the vowels govern the accent. What we call the long and short sounds of the vowels in English are really different sounds. In Japanese a short vowel has the same sound exactly as the corresponding long vowel, differing only as an eighth note in music differs from a quarter. <sup>a</sup>

The sounds of the (long) vowels are:

a	like	a	in	father	(ä)
i	"	i	,,	pique	(ē)
u	,,	u	. ,,	rude	$(\overline{00})$
$e_{.}$	"	е	,,	prey	$(\bar{\mathrm{a}})$
0	,,	0	,,	hope	(ō)

Long Vowels.— The long vowels are written  $\bar{a}$  (aa), ii ( $\bar{\imath}$ ),  $\bar{u}$  (uu), ei ( $\bar{e}$ ),  $\bar{o}$  (ou). There are practically no diphthongs. Au is ordinarily pronounced and written  $\bar{o}$ ; iu,  $y\bar{u}$ ; eu,  $y\bar{o}$ ; ou,  $\bar{o}$ . The combinations ai, oi and ui come nearest to being diphthongs. For the purpose of this discussion n is practically a vowel. In singing it may form a syllable by itself. It follows that an, in, un, en, on, kan, kin, kun, etc., are long sounds.

If one wishes to speak intelligibly, it is a matter of prime importance to distinguish long and short sounds. It is espe-

a There are exceptions. For a sound very much like the English short "a" see p. 448c. Before a double consonant or n followed by a consonant there is a natural tendency to modify vowels so as to resemble the English short vowels.

b li occurs almost exclusively at the end of adjectives, being a contraction of iki or ishi. Theoretically there is a difference between  $\bar{e}$  (chosen by the  $R\bar{o}maji$  Committee) and ei, but practically they are not distinguished and we write uniformly ei. In the same way  $\bar{o}$  might be written eu; and this is done in the case of a verb like you "get drunk." Verbs uniformly end in u. Accordingly we write kau "buy," rather than  $k\bar{o}$ , though the combination au is in the case of a Chinese word always written  $\bar{o}$ . For the same reason we write kuu eat, rather than  $k\bar{u}$ . The combination iu in the case of a Chinese word is written  $y\bar{u}$ , the rule having been that u (or fu) following a syllable ending in i makes a long sound, while yu makes a short one. (Thus shi yu results in shu, but shi u makes  $sh\bar{u}$ —in the reformed kaua written shi yu—). But in the case of the verb iu "say" we depart from the rule, since the stem is commonly pronounced ii. We should, however, write yuu if the stem were pronounced yui.

c In the northern provinces and vulgarly in Tōkyō ai is pronounced like ei; e. g., Sō ja nei for Sō ja nai That's not so. In Tōkyō ae and oe are often pronounced like ai and oi; e. g., kaeru return, kairu; koe voice, koi. We might add to the diphthongs au in kau as commonly pronounced in Tōkyō. In western Japan kau is kō.

cially important to distinguish o from  $\bar{o}$ . Next in importance is the distinction between u and  $\bar{u}$ . Compare:

oi nephew  $\bar{o}i$  many tori bird tōri thoroughfare koko here  $k\bar{o}$ - $k\bar{o}$  filial piety koto thing, affair  $k\bar{o}$ - $t\bar{o}$  high class toki time  $t\bar{o}$ -ki registration ho-hei infantry hō-hei artillerv yo-san estimate yō-san sericulture kuki stalk  $k\bar{u}$ -ki atmosphere yuki snow  $y\bar{u}$ -ki courage

To the Japanese ear the words in the one column are utterly different from those in the other. There are a few cases in which the length of a vowel is a matter of indifference. A final  $\bar{o}$  is often shortened; e. g.,  $s\bar{o}$  shite so doing, may be pronounced so shite;  $katapp\bar{o}$  one of the pair, katappo;  $hont\bar{o}$  reality, honto. Final short vowels are sometimes lengthened; e. g., sore  $j\bar{a}$ , for sore ja if that's the case.

SHORT VOWELS.—The following points deserve notice:

U in shu and ju is often pronounced i, especially in Tōkyō: e. g., shu-jin master becomes shijin; bi-jutsu fine arts, bijitsu. This is to be avoided as a corruption.<sup>a</sup> But the substitution of i for yu is not always bad; e. g., iku for yuku go, kami-ii for kami-yui hair dresser (p. 380a).

Initial u followed by ma is practically silent, uma horse being pronounced mma (p. 11b).

E in early  $r\bar{o}maji$  texts was generally written ye. This spelling has been retained in the case of only two words, ye "to" and yen the unit of currency. The  $R\bar{o}maji$  Committee would practically reverse this rule and write e for the postposition ye, but ye in other cases. The fact is that the pronunciation depends on the sound that precedes. The sound of yen is not en, as many foreigners pronounce it, nor is the y as distinct as in"yes."

O is sometimes corrupted so as to sound like u: e. g., hitotsu "one" becomes hitutsu; kom-ban this evening, kumban. This a In northern Japan people often reverse i and u, saying, for instance, sukosu or even shikosu for sukoshi a little.

pronunciation should be avoided. Yoi "good" is commonly pronounced ii.

As has been said, wo is practically pronounced o. It is so written except in the case of the particle wo (the  $R\bar{o}maji$  Commitee would write this also o), the pronunciation of which, like that of ye, depends on what goes before. The student must be on his guard in pronouncing a word like shio salt, in kana written shi ho. The w is hardly audible, but if the student is not careful he is apt to say shiyo, i. e., sho. In the same way ki-oku memory must be carefully distinguished from kiyoku purely and kyoku office.

When two vowels are brought together in compounds a y or w naturally creeps in; e. g., ba-ai case, becomes bayai or bawai. The Rōmaji Committee in such a case would write y after i or e, and w after u or o; e. g., tsukiyau, for tsuki-au associate; umeyawaseru, for ume-awaseru make up a deficiency; guwai-for gu-ai adjustment; owashi, for o ashi money. The Committee recommended that a list of such words be made, which, is an excellent suggestion.

Quiescent Vowels. — Words like kyoku, ryoku, etc., derived from the Chinese, were originally monosyllabic, though written with three kana: ki yo ku, ri yo ku. Accordingly in romanizing certain combinations the  $R\bar{o}majikwai$  treated i as silent; e. g., kyō (ke u, now ki yo —), etc. Many Japanese would go further and write, for example, kyok, ryok. In native words there are many other cases in which the weak vowels i and u are practically inaudible, but the Rōmajikwai did not venture to extend its principle to them, probably on account of the extreme difficulty of making rules to cover all cases. Not only does the pronunciation vary according to locality, individual idiosyncrasy, etc., but even the same word may be pronounced differently by the same person, depending on the nature of the context. Compare, for instance, nakute "there being none" and nak'te mo "though there are none." The addition of mo brings upon na and te a strong accent with the result that the u in ku disappears. A silent i or u is very apt to occur when ki, ku, shi, su, chi, tsu, hi, or fu precede any syllable of the k s, t, y and w (rarely m, n and r) series, especially when that syllable is accented. Final su ordinarily loses the vowel and becomes ss, and the vowel in final tsu, shi and chi is barely audi-English-speaking people are apt to go to extremes in clipping final vowels. The Romaji Committee has recommended that a table be made of words in which there are silent vowels. It would write taski for tasuki (cord to tie back the sleeves), dongri for donguri acorn, etc. The Japanese certainly do say taski, not tasuki. It is, however, impossible to decide all the cases without being more or less arbitrary. The plan of this book is to follow the spelling of the dictionaries, except in the Exercises, where apostrophes are used to indicate silent vowels. a Experience proves that this system is a valuable aid to correct pronunciation. But to avoid abuse we have been conservative. There are, for example, so many people who pronounce every vowel in watakushi that we do not feel justified in eliding the u, as the Committee does.

Consonants.—These will give the English-speaking student little trouble.

G when it does not stand at the beginning of a word is commonly pronounced like "ng" in "singing": Nagasaki, like Nangasaki; uguisu bush-warbler, like unguisu; kago basket or cage, like kango (to be distinguished carefully from kan-go Chinese word). In western Japan, however, g is pronounced exactly as in "ago." See p. 69a.

S before i becomes sh. In some parts of western Japan, as in the vicinity of  $\overline{O}$ saka and in Kyūshū, s in the syllable se is pronounced like "h" or, more exactly, like the German "ch"; e. g., omahen for omasen (dialectical) there is not. In  $T\overline{O}$ ky $\overline{O}$  se may become shi; hence the change of se-ou carry on the back (se back, ou carry) to shou.

Ji is formed by nigori from shi or chi. In the province of a Dr. Lange himself prefers to use the apostrophes throughout. The compiler of the English Edition has ventured to disagree with him in regard to this one point, on the ground that so long as the matter is not officially determined, great inconvenience in the use of dictionaries will result from any alteration of the present spelling. It seems, however, certain that the Japanese when they once take the matter in hand will elide more i's and u's than Dr. Lange or any other foreigner has thought of doing. The spelling will in turn react on the pronunciation.

Tosa the two sounds are distinguished, the former j being like "z"in "azure" and the latter like "g"in "age." In some places the former sound prevails, but in most parts of the country both p and p are pronounced p as in "jig."

Zu too should have two sounds, zu and dzu, from su and tsu, but the distinction is not generally observed and one or the other prevails.

T' before i becomes ch; before u, ts.

N is pronounced "ng" before sounds of the k series; before sounds of the h (b, p) and m series it becomes m: son-kei respect; sambyaku three hundred, from san three and hyaku hundred; sem-mon specialty, from sen special and mon gate, department. The  $R\bar{o}maji$  Committee in such cases would not change the n to m.

In some compounds the distinction between a final n and an initial n must be carefully observed. Compare gen-an original motion and ge-nan manservant.

H before i in Tōkyō and elsewhere is pronounced like sh, as in hito person. The student will do well to avoid this corruption.

F is not quite the same as the English "f," being formed by the two lips, not by the lower lip and the upper teeth. The study of foreign languages has, however, a tendency to make the f more like the English. The nigoried form of fu is bu, not vu. There is no v in Japanese. In the h series a labial sound, p or f, not h, characterized the syllables originally, and in some provinces there are still traces of this ancient pronunciation.

M before u has frequently been altered to b: e. g., eramu, erabu choose; samushii, sabishii lonely.

Y(ya, yu, yo) occurs largely in combination with other consonants. One must carefully distinguish  $my\bar{o}$  and  $miy\bar{o}$ , kyo-ku and kiyoku, etc. In parts of northern Japan y when not combined with another consonant is commonly corrupted to z or j.

R is not quite the same as the English "r," especially in the syllable ri. The tip of the tongue is held more closely to the upper gum. In many places, as in Satsuma, r sounds like d. It is extremely difficult for the Japanese to distinguish the English "1" and the English "r," their own r being an intermediate sound. The vulgar sometimes trill r; e. g.,  $berrab\bar{o}$  fool.

W after i or e sometimes becomes y; e. g., sorya, from sore wa as for that. Wa and wo occur largely in Chinese words combined with k and g; e. g., kwa-ji conflagration, gwai-koku foreign country. In some parts the distinction between kwa and ka, etc., is carefully observed, but is neglected in  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$ . The reformed kana and the Committee's  $r\bar{o}maji$  ignore it. But the w is retained in this book, for reasons already indicated.

There is no need of "q" or "x," the former being represented by kw and the latter by ks.

Double Consonants. — While the consonants in themselves are not so difficult, the student will need to be especially careful to distinguish single and double consonants. The double consonants are kk, ss (ssh), tt (tch, tts), nn, pp, mm. The best way to get them is to give a strong accent to the preceding syllable and then for a moment hold the vocal organs in the position required to pronounce the consonant in question. The second of the two will then sound distinct from the first. Distinguish carefully pairs like:

ika cuttle-fishikka how many days?dasu put forthdassu(ru) escape fromi- $sh\bar{o}$  clothesis- $sh\bar{o}$  one's whole lifekita [he] camekitta [he] cuti-chi positionit-chi unionana holeanna suchama nunam-ma shampooer

Consonants which are single in the literary language are frequently doubled in the colloquial; e. g., minna for mina all, onnaji for onaji same, mittsu for mitsu three, ammari for amari too, bakkari for bakari only, massugu for ma-sugu straight (adverb).

Excepting nn and nm, the first of two double consonants is in kana represented by tsu.  $Gakk\bar{o}$  school, from gaku and  $k\bar{o}$ , may be written either  $gakuk\bar{o}$  or  $gatsuk\bar{o}$ . The compound hattatsu development is sometimes pronounced hatsudatsu.

Nigori. — In a compound a the first consonant of the second member is liable to the change called nigori: [hair). b shiraga gray hair (shira = shiro stem of shiroi white, kami yakizakana baked fish (yaki stem of yaku roast, sakana fish). shinjin piety (shin faith, shin heart).

jinja Shinto temple (jin god, sha shrine).

pandane yeast (pan bread, tane seed). [pack).

kwanzume canned goods (kwan can, tsume stem of tsumeru tokidoki at times (toki time).

chikajika soon (chikai near).

sakurabana cherry blossom (sakura, hana).

shinjinbukai pious (shinjin piety, fukai deep).

Since the kana for wa in native words is ha, this may also by nigori become ba; e. g., wo wa becomes woba. Nigori is less common in Chinese than in native words, and less common in compound verbs than in compound nouns. There is a great deal of fluctuation in the usage, euphony being the only guide. Thus we say  $\overline{O}$ -hashi Great Bridge, but Megane-bashi Eyeglass Bridge (so named from its shape); either  $\overline{O}$ -saka or  $\overline{O}$ -zaka Great Slope; an-nai-sha or annaija guide; sai-han-sho or saibanjo court of justice. Nigori is not limited to compounds. The first consonants of some words which are commonly attached loosely to other words suffer nigori; e. g., bakari only, from hakaru consider. Kiri "only" may also be pronounced giri; kurai "about," gurai. Mutsukashii "difficult" is often pronounced muzukashii.

Han-nigori, that is, the change of h or f to p, occurs frequently in compounds from the Chinese when the first member ends in n. Thus fun be stirred and hatsu be aroused make fumpatsu enthusiasm; man be full and fuku stomach, mama The vowels suffer little or no change in composition. A final e in the first member of a compound is often changed to a. Thus from kane metal and mono thing we have kanamono hardware (but with hako box, kanebako money box); from sake liquor and ya house (p. 16), sakaya liquor dealer (but with nomi stem of nomu drink, sakenomi drunkard).

b In western Japan people say shirage, from ke, which also means hair.

c There are two sounds to the Chinese character for "god," shin and jin. Compare shin-gaku theology, from gaku learning, and jin-ja Shinto shrine. The Japanese, by the way, say Shin do, not Shinto.

puku satiety. From the native words omou think and hakaru consider we have omompakaru cogitate.

A preceding syllable coalescing with h or f may result in pp: kiri stem of kiru cut and fu (c) token make kippu ticket; tetsu iron and  $h\bar{o}$  barrel,  $tepp\bar{o}$  gun. For other examples see p. 69 ff. Of native origin is hipparu bring along, for hiki-haru. An h between vowels tends to become pp: e. g., akeppanasu from ake-hanasu leave open; mappira, from ma-hira earnestly. The adverbs yohodo very and yahari still are also pronounced yop-podo and yappari.

ACCENT. — As has been intimated, if the student will take care of the vowels, the accents will generally take care of themselves. Among the vowels there is as it were an order of pre-First there are the long sounds, then a, then o and e, and finally u and i. The stronger tend to draw the accent away from the weaker. Alternate syllables seem to pair off in the contest, the stronger pair winning. A combination tending to make a vowel quiescent may also affect the accent. When a difference between the vowels does not interfere, a word of three or four syllables is naturally accented on the first and third; e.g., anata you, hanahada very. The a before the causative ending seruor the potential ending reru is always accented. When a word is a compound, that fact naturally affects the accents. a In general it is to be remembered that accent is not so strong as in English. It is one of the disadvantages of the use of  $r\bar{o}maji$ that since the words look somewhat like English words the student is apt to give them English accents. To correct this tendency the student who wishes to acquire a natural pronunciation should do a great deal of reading aloud from the Japanese script under a Japanese teacher of the old school, if one can be found who is not afraid to criticise.

Kiri. — It is essential to good pronunciation to observe the a In western Japan homonymns are often distinguished by means of the accent. For example, hana flower has a marked accent on the first syllable as compared with hana nose. In the same way they distinguish hashi chopstick, hashi end, hashi bridge; kaki oyster, kaki persimmon and kaki fence; kami hair, kami paper and kami god, etc. The Japanese themselves are so much in doubt about these accents that the student can well afford to neglect them.

kiri (lit. cutting), or ku-giri (ku phrase), that is, not to pause in such a way as to cut off particles, etc., from preceding words to which they belong.

THE STANDARD COLLOQUIAL.

In English there is now only a slight difference between the language of an essay and that of everyday conversation. In Japanese the written language and the spoken language have for centuries been developing separately. Scholars absorbed in the study of the ideograms and the literary style associated with them, have been quite indifferent to their mother-tongue proper. Even now it is hard to find a Japanese with any sense of colloquial etymology or grammar. When asked about the origin and significance of a word your informant proceeds to discuss the ideograms used to write it. Ask him about the conjugation of a verb, and he gives you paradigms from the classical grammar which have little or no application to the matter in hand. The Japanese have fully caught the scientific spirit of the age and their scholars emulate the greatest western scientists in the investigation of bacteria and everything of that kind, but they have scarcely begun to make a serious scientific study of their own conversational language. On the other hand, of the few who are interested, some reveal their inherited prejudice against zoku-go (vulgar language) by limiting its province to the small talk of everyday life. 'The student cannot be too wary in accepting Japanese opinions about the colloquial. But it goes without saying that the language actually employed by the Japanese of the present day must be our standard.

It can no longer be said that the colloquial of Tōkyō is the standard. Tōkyō too has its dialectical peculiarities. We shall not go far wrong if we regard as the standard the language spoken in the higher educational institutions of the Empire. There is here a constant circulation and intermingling of teachers and students from all parts of the country, and it is here that the process of crystallization is going on most rapidly. This language of the schools, which will naturally be the language of the future, is being influenced both by the literary language and by English and other foreign languages. No obstacle should be placed in the way of the gradual assimilation of any needed material from the comparatively more terse and expressive literary language. The ideal of the Gem-bun-it-chi-kwai (gen speech, bun literature, it-chi union, kwai association) necessarily involves the modification of the colloquial, which in its present condition does very well for story-telling, but for other literary purposes is rather a clumsy instrument. Again, Japanese is being modified by the influence of English much as European languages have been influenced by Latin. The student will soon perceive that the speech of a Japanese versed in English is much clearer to him than that of a Japanese of the old school, even when both are speaking to their own people. As nearly all Japanese students are learning English or some other European tongue, the inference is obvious.

The development of the language has been most rapid around the centers Kyōto and Tōkyō. The most peculiar dialects are those of the northern and western extremities of Japan proper. These dialects in many points preserve more of the classical language than the standard colloquial. For example, the people of the north say yogambei "it may be good," from yokaru-beshi, thus preserving the classical beshi.

In the ports there is a good deal of pidgin-Japanese (Yoko-hama-kotoba), which is to be avoided; e. g., peke=dame bad, spoiled. The student ought also to be on his guard against the slang of the laboring classes.

PRACTICAL HINTS.

It would be well for the student before he begins work on this book to go through a briefer course of the nature of a primer, but there is no primer that can be fully recommended. To get a general idea of the genius of the language it is well at the outset to read rapidly a book like Chamberlain's "Handbook of Colloquial Japanese," not stopping to master the details. Imbrie's "English-Japanese Etymology" will be found helpful later on.

During the first year it will be a saving of time to employ as a teacher one who has a good knowledge of English. The teacher should be instructed when reading the Japanese sentences to vary them as much as possible. The student after translating into English should retranslate into Japanese. He will then be well prepared to take up the second set of exercises. the teacher knows no English, have a friend instruct him how to proceed. Read to him the Japanese sentences one by one and have him criticise the pronunciation. Let him then ask simple questions which require the student to give the substance of the sentence in his replies. Let the teacher repeat each answer, correcting it as he does so. Don't let him ask questions about the grammar or definitions of words. Then translate the English sentences and ask the teacher to correct the translations in the same way. In translation it should be the aim of the student to render the ideas of the original in as brief a form as possible, translation word for word being quite out of the question in nearly all cases. When learning words the student should try to form in his mind a vivid conception of the actual thing or act or relation expressed by it, without reference to English equivalents. The measure of one's progress is the degree in which the untranslatable elements of the language are mastered.

Two peculiarities of the Japanese must be kept constantly in mind. One is the absence of personification. Such a sentence as "War slays its thousands, while intemperance slays its tens of thousands" cannot be rendered into Japanese as it stands. The other peculiarity is the persistent consciousness of the relative rank of the speaker and the person addressed as shown in the choice of words and grammatical forms. For the same idea there may be two sets of expressions, one used when the subject is a despised person or one's humble self, the other being reserved for use when the subject is a person for whom one wishes to show respect or when it is necessary to guard one's own dignity in dealing with an inferior. It is not easy even for a native to observe the proper distinctions without being either rude or excessively polite. The Japanese are extraordinarily polite to foreigners, and foreigners are expected to speak a little more politely than a native under the same circumstances.

No progress is possible without the perpetration of ridiculous mistakes, and the time when one is still obviously "green" is the most opportune time for mistakes. The people are naturally generous and indulgent to newcomers. So the beginner is advised, whatever may have been his previous habit, to make it a rule to chatter about any and everything under the sun to anybody that will listen. As soon as he comes to feel sensitive about mistakes progress will be very difficult.

HELPS FOR FURTHER STUDY.

The student who has mastered this text-book should be familiar with the grammatical structure of the colloquial and be well acquainted with about five thousand words. practicable, even if it were desirable, to include more in a book of this character. In the selection the aim has been to gather a fully representative vocabulary of words that are in common use. Of the common words, for every one that has been taken one or two have been left. Words connected with one's special business or profession will be learned almost without effort. But if one aspires to be able to converse freely on any subject of common interest, at least double the number of words contained here will be needed. A vocabulary grows only by practice, but practice is dependent on observation, and to prepare one's self for exact observation printed books are indispensable. It is a common experience that an entirely strange word just learned from a book may be heard several times within a few hours afterwards.

Colloquial literature consists mostly of stories and speeches of various kinds. There are a few collections of extracts in  $r\bar{o}maji$ , of which the best are Plaut, Japanisches Lesebuch, Berlin, 1891; Benkyōka no Tomo, Hongkong, 1892, and the little monthly periodical Yachigusa published in Tōkyō, 1898—9.

In choosing books written in the Japanese script the beginner should avoid those in which the kana are small or badly printed. Before he undertakes to read poorly printed books or newspapers it is necessary thoroughly to master the kana by the use of the children's first two or three readers or other colloquial books in which the characters are printed large, if they can be found. The exercises and conversations in MacCauley's "Introductory Course in Japanese" satisfy this requirement, but unfortunately the hiragana are written from left to right, an unusual arrangement not easy even for Japanese to read.

Highly to be recommended, though the printing of the kana leaves much to be desired, are the Mukashi-banashi (ancient tales) and Otogi-banashi (entertaining tales) of Mr. Iwaya. In order to accustom the student to the style of these tales, one of them in romanized form has been appended to this book. Mr. Iwaya, whose nom de plume is Sazanami, also edits an interesting periodical called Shōnen Sekai (Young Folks' World).

Novels will also be very helpful. Older stories such as those of Enchō are not so well adapted to the needs of the student as those dealing with present conditions. For students who are interested in the conflict between old and new ideas in modern Japan the novels of Mr. Tokutomi (Hototogisu, Omoiide no Ki, Kuroshio) are recommended.

In almost any newspaper colloquial material may be found in the form of interviews, reports of addresses, etc., and the volume of literature written in the style of lectures is constantly increasing. But the student will need to remember that to make a genuine colloquial sentence more is required than to end it with de aru, de arimasu or de gozaimasu (beware of "colloquialized" books!); also that a man may be a fine literary writer and yet have a wretched style in speaking. The style of the interesting old sermons of which we have had samples in Shingaku Michi no Hanashi, or  $Ky\bar{u}\bar{o}$   $D\bar{o}wa$ , is of course antiquated.

In the study of colloquial grammar a beginnings have recently been made by Matsushita, Nihon Zokugo Bunten, Tōkyō, 1901; Maeha, Nihongoten, Tōkyō, 1901; Kanai, Nihon Zokugo Bunten, Tōkyō, 1901; Ishikawa, Hanashikotoba no Kisoku, Tōkyō, 1901; Irie, Nihon Zokugo Bumpōron, Sendai, 1902. Excepting the first and the last named, these books are themselves exa In this book the usual division of the parts of speech has been followed. In a scientific grammar this would probably have to be somewhat modified. Older grammars of the literary language divide all words into three classes: (1), ai-gen including nouns, pronouns, numerals, interjections; (2) yō-gen = hataraku kotoba (working words), including the verbs and adjectives, which are inflected, and (3) teniwoha, from te, ni, wo, ha (-wa), including particles and postpositions amples of the literary use of the colloquial. In the literature of the Gembun-itchi movement, such as Yamada's Bunrei and Sakai's Futsūbun, both published in Tōkyō. 1901, may be found illustrations of the colloquial as adapted for use in letters, documents, etc., and interesting discussions concerning colloquial style.

Brinkley's Japanese-English Dictionary is fuller and in many ways more satisfactory than its predecessor, Hepburn's. is disfigured by inconsistencies, omissions and bad typography generally, but is in substance reliable and an invaluable treasury to those who have to depend on  $r\bar{o}maji$ . The student will need to supplement it by one or more of the native go-jūon dictionaries, Otsuki's Genkai = Kotoba no Umi (gen word, kai sea), Tōkyō, 1891; Mozumi's Nihon Daijirin (dai great, ji word, rin forest), Tōkyō, 1894, or Ochiai's Kotoba no Izumi (izumi fountain). Tõkyō, 1899. Of these the first is said to be the most scholarly; the last, most comprehensive.

Among the desiderata are an English-Japanese dictionary, giving the Japanese words not only in ideograms but also in rōmaji, typographically distinguishing words in current colloquial use from others, and a classified dictionary of Sinico-Japanese compounds on the plan of Gubbins' Dictionary, which is now entirely out of date.

THE NOUN.a

CHAPTER I.

Generally speaking, the Japanese language has no article, no plural, and no gender.

1. There is an equivalent of the English "a certain," namely, aru (lit. existing): aru onna a certain woman. More recently this aru has come to be used also with plurals in the sense of "some." To the English article in its generic sense, as in "the cat" or "a cat" (speaking generally), corresponds the Japanese idiom: neko to iu mono what is called cat (neko cat, to particle of quotation, iu say, mono thing).

2. When there is need of bringing out the idea of plurality, the suffixes ra, b domo (from tomo companion),  $sh\bar{u}$  (c) or shu crowd, tachi (e) or dachi all, and gata (from kata side), may be employed. These are, with the exception of the first, used only with words denoting persons. The last is the most polite:

Hyakushō peasant; hyakushōdomo peasants.

Ko child; kodomo children.

Akindo merchant; akindoshū merchants.

Onna woman; onnashū women (of servant girls, etc.).

Oya parent; oyatachi parents.

Fu-jin (c) lady; fujingata ladies.

Many words may be made plural by doubling:

Kuni country; kuniguni countries.

Hito person; hitobito people.

Tokoro, sho (c) place; tokorodokoro, shosho various places. The plural may also be expressed by means of words used as prefixes meaning "many", "all," etc.

Bankoku all countries, from ban myriad.

Shokoku various countries (or provinces) from sho many.

a Jitsu-mei-shi true-name-word, or simply meishi.

b The suffix ra is in the colloquial used mostly with pronouns. The ideogram used to represent it is  $t\bar{o}$  class. Both ra and  $t\bar{o}$  may also have the sense of "etc."

c The words kodomo child, wakaishū young fellow (from wakai young), and tomodachi friend, have come to be used also in a singular sense. To make the plural sense of kodomo distinct, still another suffix must be added: kodomora kodomoshū, kodomotachi.

 $\mathbf{2}$

3. In the case of animals the masculine and feminine genders may be expressed by means of the prefixes o (on) and me (men); or, more commonly, by osu and mesu with the genitive particle no:

Inu dog; oinu (inu no osu); meinu (inu no mesu).

Tori fowl; ondori cock; mendori hen.

But it is to be observed that the Japanese usually leave the distinction unexpressed. For instance:

Tori ga nakimashita. The (or, a) cock crowed. Here it is not necessary to say specifically ondori.

tori bird, fowl.

When nouns are joined by the conjunction "and" or enumerated in a series which is brought to a conclusion, to "and" or mo "too" is affixed to each (-mo-mo=both—and). When the series is not closed, that is, when only a few specimens of a possible list are given, ya or dano is affixed to each. Ya is always, and to, except in formal speech, usually, omitted after the last word. However the asyndetic construction is not uncommon in Japanese.

CHAPTER II.

Relations like the cases in European languages are expressed by the particles ga (Nominative), no (Genitive), ni (Dative), and wo (Accusative). Further, what we call the subject in English is often distinguished by the particle wa. But this particle is also attached to the word that becomes in English the grammatical object; and it may be added to the particles no, ni, wo, de, and to other words. To explain fully and systematically the uses of wa and its relation to ga would only confuse the beginner at this stage. Reserving more particular rules for later occasions, we shall now endeavor to state the main principles from which they are derived.

1. Ga simply marks out the subject, excluding other things, while wa indicates that an important predicate is to follow.

Kore ga warui. This (not the others) is bad (warui is bad). Kore wa warui. This is BAD.

The former sentence answers the question, Which is bad? The latter is a reply to the question, What sort of a thing is this?

Who came? Dare ga kimashita ka. Tarō came. Tarō ga kimashita.

Where is Tarō? Tarō wa doko ni imasu ka.
 Tarō just came. Tarō wa tadaima kimashita.

It is a safe rule not to use wa when there is no occasion to think of two or more possible predicates. Hence in subordinate clauses the subject almost invariably requires ga.

Tarõ ga kimashita toki ni yuki ga futte imashita.

Snow was falling when (toki ni) Tarō came.

2. When subjects only are contrasted ga is affixed to both. When predicates are contrasted so as to put a word in one sentence in antithesis to a word in another, both require wa.

Zen wa (good) nase (do); aku wa (evil) nasu na (do not). Do good and not evil.

Note that wa, not wo, is attached here to what we should call the object. Logically zen and aku are subjects. It is a corollary of the above rule that wa may properly be used with the emphatic word in a negative sentence.

The foreigner often finds it hard to tell whether he ought to use wa or ga with the subject. There are cases in which wa only may be used, and other cases in which ga only is permissible; but often it depends on the point of view which is to be chosen. Sometimes in the same sentence either may be used with practically no difference in the sense. It may be in place also to warn the beginner that the usage is subject to considerable variations in the dialects.

utsukushii pretty, beautiful.
wakai young.
warui bad.
yoi good.
ano that (yonder). c

Adjectives similar to the above, ending in i, may be used attributively, in which case they precede the noun. They may also follow the noun as predicates, requiring no verb. It should be remembered, however, that the simple adjective is thus used only in familiar talk. See Ch. XI.

Exercises.

Kono ahiru to kiji wa umai. d Kono kiji wa umai, ano a Not to be confounded with koma, which now denotes a full grown male horse.

b Women usually say oishii.

c Kono and ano are used before nouns like adjectives.

d When several words are joined by to or ya, wa or ga is added only to the last.

ahiru mo umai. Shiroi inu. Ano utsukushii onna. Ano onna wa utsukushii. Kono hato wa shiroi; ano niwatori wa kuroi. Kono nezumi wa ōkii; ano nezumi wa chiisai. Ano uma wa hayai. Kono koushi wa ōkii. Ano inu wa osoroshii. Uguis' wa chiisai. Sh'ka ya usagi wa hayai. Komma dano koushi dano wa utsukushii.

This calf is small. That horse is swift. This duck is young. This ox is slow. This black cat is large. That colt is beautiful. That white dove. Sparrows are small. That fowl is large. Cranes are beautiful. This large hen. Both pheasants and pigeons are delicious. That horse is small. Doves are beautiful. Those calves are large. Duck is delicious. This horse is bad. This dog is black; that dog is white. A white dove is beautiful. Cranes are large.

CHAPTER III.

Wa does not designate a particular case. As we have intimated, it serves to isolate a word or expression, to make it conspicuous. Often it may be translated, "In regard to." It is used with especial frequency after words denoting time and place.

Konnichi wa (to-day) yoi o tenki desu.

It is fine weather to-day.

Konnichi wa implies at least a faint contrast with other times: else wa would not be used. Compare:

Konnichi kaerimashita. He returned to-day.

Konnichi wa kaerimasen. He does not return to-day.

The second sentence implies, "he may return later." After a word with wa beginning the sentence the grammatical subject naturally requires ga, unless a second contrast is emphasized.

Koko wa samusa ga tsuyoi. Here the cold is severe (strong). In case we wished to contrast the cold and the wind, it would be:

Koko wa samusa wa tsuyoku nai keredomo, kaze wa tsuyoi. Here the cold is not severe, but the wind is high.

a Wa or ga is usually omitted when mo is used.

A sentence like "The fox has a long tail," becomes:

Kitsune wa o ga nagai.

Here we observe that the subject with wa is grammatically disconnected from the sentence, while the predicate nagai (long) takes the subordinate subject o (tail) with ga.

Nihon wa yama ga öi. Japan is mountainous.

Literally: In regard to Japan, mountains are many. Grammatically  $yama\ ga\ \bar{o}i$  is a complete sentence, but the expression simply fills the place of an adjective. Many similar expressions have become idiomatic. The adjectives most commonly modified by subjects with ga in this way are yoi and its opposite warui:

kokoro-mochi ga yoi feeling is good=comfortable.
gen-ki ga yoi vitality is good=vigorous, vivacious, lively.
tsu-gō ga yoi circumstances are good=convenient.
yō-jin ga yoi caution is good=careful.
kuchi ga warui mouth is bad=sarcastic.
i-ji ga warui temper is bad=ill-natured.
sei ga takai stature is high=tall.
sei ga hikui stature is low=short.
ki ga mijikai spirit is short=quick-tempered.
yoku ga fukai desire is deep=avaricious.

In case an antithesis is involved ga may, of course, become wa.

He b is sarcastic. This child has a pretty face. Rats have long tails. Foxes and (ya) dogs are swift of foot; horses too are swift of foot. This dog has short ears; [his] tail also is short. This hare has black fur. Both doves and crows have short bills. He has short legs. She is careful. He is slow of foot. The duck has short legs.

CHAPTER IV.

The particle no with a noun corresponds to the genitive case, and is rendered sometimes by the English possessive, and sometimes by the preposition "of":

Tori no koe a bird's cry.

Nihon no ten-shi the Emperor of Japan.

Notice that the limiting noun together with no always precedes the word which it limits. This is one instance of the general rule that all modifiers precede the principal or governing word.

In the classical style ga performs the same function as no:

Kimi ga yo the lord's (Emperor's) reign.

a Ano otoko (that fellow) and ano onna are not elegant. Ano kata wa sei ga takai is better. Still more polite: Ano o kata wa o sei ga takō gozaimasu.

b Ano hito, ano kata, etc., may mean either "he" or "she."

As in other languages, the genitive may be explicative or appositional.

Otoko no ko boy.

Niwatori no mesu hen.

The eggs of this fish are large. The fur of this tiger is beautiful. The child (wa) of that Japanese is quick-tempered.

a Shikashi has a stronger adversative sense, while ga is weaker.

b In speaking of very common animals briefer forms are usual: komma, koushi, koneko, koinu, etc. Kittens and pups are also called nekogo and inukoro. Note that ko-tori means little bird, not young bird (see Ch. VIII.).

The eggs of this fowl are small. Veal is delicious. The donkey's ears are long. Whale's meat is unsavory. Pork is white. The whale has a strong tail./oThese kittens are pretty. His children (children of that man) are still young. This fish's fins are white. This dog's fur is black. This mouse's fur is white. This white hare's eyes are red. The head of the ox is large. The eyes of the flounder are small. The eggs of the carp are delicious. The head of the tai is delicious.

CHAPTER V.

Ni following a noun corresponds to the dative case.

Kodomo wa oya ni nite iru (imasu).

Children resemble [their] parents (Latin: parentibus). Notice that in such general statements wa is used, not ga.

The Japanese idiom resembles the Latin in another particular:

Ushi ni tsuno ga aru (arimasu).

To oxen are horns, i. e., Oxen have horns.

When a comparison is involved, wa may be added to ni; or we may say simply: Ushi wa tsuno ga aru. Oxen have horns. The construction with ni is preferred when there is a close relation between the objects, and especially when the parts of a person or thing are named.

Ningen ni te ga aru (arimasu). Men have hands.

Watakushi ni wa imoto ga nai (arimasen).a

I have no [younger] sister.

Other uses of ni will be explained later.

We add a few explanations concerning the use of verbs. In Japanese the verb always stands at the end of the sentence. In nite iru "are resembling" nite is the subordinate form of the verb niru "to resemble," and iru means "is" or "are." Iru, when it stands alone, that is, not with a subordinate form, differs from aru in being used only when the subject is a person or some other living thing. The short forms iru and aru are used only in speaking familiarly, as to members of one's own family or to intimate friends. In polite speech, whether to those of higher rank than ourselves, or to strangers, even if they be of a Ni is not required in: Anata wa kasa ga arimasu ka. Have you an umbrella?

lower rank, we must add to the concluding verb at least the suffixes masu (present), mashō (future or probable), mashita (past). These are added to the stem of the verb.

Ari-masu ari-mashō ari-mashita I-masu i- $mash\bar{o}$ i-mashita Will or may be Was, were. Is, are

There are two classes of verbs. In the one class the form used at the end of the sentence, the conclusive form, is derived by adding ru to the stem. In the other class the conclusive form substitutes u for the i of the stem. In the vocabularies verbs of the former class are distinguished by the use of the hyphen, thus: i-ru, ni-ru. In Hepburn's Dictionary verbs are arranged according to their stems, as i, ari; in Brinkley's, according to their conclusive forms, as iru, aru. is enecedes i'm gain mot in a Taku and san are the Chinese equivalents of sawa marsh and yama mountain.

b The wa after hane implies, of course, a contrast: It is not by the use of wings that the flea moves.

c In the following sentences the student should change familiar forms to polite.

shippo ga aru. Koi ni wa uruko ga aru. Ushi ni wa tsuno mo tsume mo aru. Kirigiris' ni wa hane mo aru. Neko ni wa hige ga aru. Kono kodomo wa yoku (very much) haha ni nite imas'. Saru wa hito ni nite iru. Okami wa inu ni nite iru. Ano inu wa kitsune ni nite imas'. Kono mushi ni wa hari ga aru.

The gardener planted a pine tree. Birds eat insects. Fishes also eat insects. Herons and (ya) cranes eat fish. I should like to have those cherry blossoms. The gardener gave the girl a flower. Did you plant this pine tree? No, the gardener planted[it]. The Japanese eat cereals (ya), fish and vegetables. Bush-warblers eat worms. Children often (yoku) catch butterflies. The mother gave the child some fruit. The cat catches mice. The farmer planted mulberry trees. Foxes catch chickens. Deer eat grass. I should like to have those plum blossoms. That child often (yoku) catches dragon-flies.

a This iie differs from the English "no" in that it denotes not so much an objec-tive contradiction as a mere difference of opinion. It amounts to: You are under a false impression.

b From two Chinese words meaning to put on the top of the head, i. e., receive respectfully.

c The familiar past tense is formed by adding to the stem.

d Ga indicates that emphasis rests on ano. The man that planted the trees is that gardener, not some one else. If still more emphasis were needed, we might say: Kono ki voo ueta hito voa ano nekiya desn.

e When brief mention is made of a single instance the simple subject commonly requires ga, while wa is used in general statements. The student should observe this distinction in the exercises to be translated into Japanese.

CHAPTER VII.

The predicative expressions given in Ch. III. may also be used attributively by substituting no for ga:

Anata no tokoro no jochū wa genki no ii (yoi) onna desu. Your maidservant(lit.m. of your place) is a lively woman.

Sei no takai hito desu. [He or she] is a tall person. Such expressions occur frequently in Japanese and may be variously translated:

Atama no ōkii sakana. A fish with a large head. Okii atama no sakana would be very wrong. Nor would it be euphonious to repeat a noun, thus: Ano onna wa genki no ii onna desu.

The reason why no may be substituted for ga is that ga was originally a genitive particle. See Ch. IV. As such ga is still used in the literary language and occurs in many proper names:

Ume-ga-tani plum-valley. Tsuru-ga-oka crane-hill.

The verb "is" or "are" after a predicate noun becomes de aru (contracted to da), de arimasu (contracted to desu), de gozarimasu (or de gozarimasu), the last being most polite and the first most familiar. Notice the difference between:

Matsu no ki ga arimasu. There are pine trees.

Matsu no ki desu (for de arimasu). They are pine trees.

Mr. Shimada is a cautious person. Odate is a tall wrestler. Sardines are oily fish. That pupil is an ill-natured child. Japan is a mountainous country. That farmer is an avaricious fellow. That sea-captain is unlucky. Orchids are sweet-scented flowers (flowers of good odor). Here (koko wa) frogs are numerous. The Ainu have long beards. Among (ni wa) Japanese long-bearded men are scarce. [She] is a sarcastic woman.

a Notice that  $\bar{o}i$  and sukunai cannot be used attributively like the English "many" and "few," except when limited by a noun with no; e. g., hone no  $\bar{o}i$  sakana a bony fish (hone bone).

b It would be more polite to say: Anatawa o kuchi no warui o kata de gozaimasu.

c The name of a girl. Sama or san is added to names of persons or to titles of important personages, such as tenshi sama Emperor, dama san master of the house. Sama is also used in certain polite phrases, such as o kage sama I owe my good fortune to you (kage shadow), go knrō sama I have caused you much trouble. In the case of girls o is always prefixed unless there are more than two syllables.

d Notice the circumstantiality of the expression. Shi is a disjunctive particle that marks the transition from one coördinate clause to another. In classical language the simple stem of the verb is used in such a position. Thus ari might be substituted in the above for arn shi. Shi makes the transition more distinct.

e Instead of repeating saru, we may say o no mijikai no mo aru.

f A river near Mount Fuji. g A river near Tokyo,

CHAPTER VIII.

Japanese resembles German in the facility with which compound nouns may be formed. Compounds derived from the Chinese are especially numerous.

1. The components may themselves be nouns:

sakana-ichi fish-market.

oya-yubi parent-finger, thumb.

soto-gawa outside. uchigawa inside.

uri-zane-gao melon-seed-face, i. e., beautiful face.

The following are of Chinese origin:

kwa-ji fire-affair, conflagration.

ba-sha horse-vehicle, wagon or carriage.

tetsu-dō iron-way, railroad.

den-ki lightning-spirit, electricity.

tetsudō-basha street car.

denki-tetsudō electric railroad.

2. One of the components may be an adjective:

ao-mono green things, vegetables, from aoi. waka-danna young master, from wakai.

Numerous compounds are formed by the use of the prefixes  $\bar{o}$  great and ko or o small:

ō-kaze great wind, typhoon.

ō-mizu great water, flood.

ō-atari great hit (in the theater or speculation).

ō-mugi barley.

ko-mugi wheat.

ko-yubi little finger.

ko-zutsumi parcel, from tsutsumi bundle.

 $ko\text{-}z\bar{o}$  little priest, apprentice, errand-boy.  $^{a}$ ko-goto little word, i. e., complaint, from koto word.

O-miya great shrine.

O-yama little mountain.

But it must not be presumed that such compounds may be formed at will, nor that a word forming a compound with one of the two prefixes may form one with the other also.

a Boys in former times had the hair closely cropped or shaved, like priests.

3. One of the components may be a verb. In genuine Chinese compounds an object-noun follows the verb that governs it, but in the case of pure Japanese words the object-noun precedes. This distinction, of course, does not apply where the verb is intransitive or where the noun is the principal component and the verb has the nature of a modifier.

hi-tsuke incendiary, from hi fire and tsuke-ru apply; but tsuke-bi incendiary fire.

mono-morai beggar (more commonly kojiki), from mono thing and morau receive; but morai-mono gift.

tate-kata style of building, from tate-ru build and kata mode; or tate-yō, from yō manner.a

sei-shi manufacture of paper, from sei make and shi paper. sha-shin photograph, from sha to copy and shin truth.

ji-shin earthquake, from ji earth and shin (intr.) to quake. Some nouns occurring in compounds are rarely, if ever, used alone; e. g., ya house, firm, tradesman. The Chinese ka (house) is in Japanese similarly used, but only of persons.

tonya (toi-ya) wholesale store, from tou inquire. kenchiku-ka architect, from ken-chiku building operations. fuhei-ka grumbler, from fu-hei dissatisfaction. tai-shok-ka gourmand, from tai great, shoku eat.

a From mei name, fame, and butsu = mono (same as motsu in kokumotsu). The word is applied to a product which is characteristic of a given locality and so comes to be associated with its name.

b Corresponds to ano, kono. Kono may be called the pronominal adjective of the first person, sono, of the second, and ano, of the third. See Ch. XIV.

c This verb is properly intransitive and impersonal. Watakushi wa wakarimasu. I understand. Wakarimasen. I don't know. In some localities wakarimasen also means: I cannot agree; it won't do; it is impossible.

d The beginner may find it difficult to distinguish  $m\bar{o}$  and mada. The latter is commonly associated with negative ideas and may be used alone in the sense of "not yet."  $Mada\ sammi$ . It is still cold, it is not yet warm.  $M\bar{o}$  means "still" only in such expressions as  $m\bar{o}$  hitoisu still one, one more.

e Words like this, corresponding to our prepositions, follow their nouns and should be called postpositions. See Chap. LXXVIII.

f The name of a bridge in Tokyō (hashi bridge). In the next sentence Kanda is the name of a district in the same city, from kami god and ta paddy-field.

g When an interrogative sentence is formed with a word like doko, the subject (or object) of the English sentence often takes wa. Ka may be omitted when interrogative pronouns or adverbs are used.

h Hei or hai is a mere interjection meaning that the speaker is attentive to the words which have been addressed to him. Sayā is used in the same way, when reflection is necessary before an answer can be given.

The conflagration (of) last night was trifling (chiisakatta), but the earthquake was severe (ōkikatta). f In Japan there are still few railroads. Are you going (do you go) to America? I do not yet know. This house is well built (manner of building is good). She is a foreigner (gwaikokujin). g Where (2) are you (1) going? h I am going to the bookseller's. The gardener is planting (uete imas') flowers. Does this photograph resemble me (watakushi ni)? Yes, it is a good likeness (well resembles you). There are many bookstores in New York.

a If kwaji were followed by wa, the natural implication would be that small fires were not infrequent.

b Hi wo tsuketa mono the person who started the fire. Verbs, like adjectives, modify nouns, there being no relative pronoun in Japanese.

c A village near Tokyo.

d A proverb, suggested by the frequency of conflagrations in Edo (old name of  $T\ddot{v}ky\ddot{v}$ ). The meaning is that conflagrations are the finest sights in  $T\ddot{o}ky\ddot{o}$ . Notice that the verb "to be" is often omitted in proverbs, for the sake of brevity.

e The name of a district in Tokyo, from asai thin and kusa grass.

f Adjectives, like verbs, may be conjugated.

g This term, like Seiyōjin, is practically limited to the European races.

h In speaking of another's going, eide desu is more polite than ikimasu.

CHAPTER IX.

1. There are also compounds in which Chinese and Japanese words occur together:

 $j\bar{o}$ -bukuro envelope, from  $j\bar{o}$  (c) letter and fukuro sack.  $j\bar{u}$ -bako set of lacquered boxes, from  $j\bar{u}$  (c) pile up and hako. moto-kin capital, principal, from moto basis and kin(c) money. yu-t $\bar{o}$  hot water vessel, from yu hot water and  $t\bar{o}$  (c) tub.

Such mixed words are called  $j\bar{u}bako-yomi$  or  $yut\bar{o}-yomi$ . Yomi means reading, or the pronunciation of the Chinese ideograms. If both characters in  $j\bar{u}bako$  were given the Chinese sound, they would read  $j\bar{u}-s\bar{o}$ ; if Japanese, kasane-bako. So  $yut\bar{o}$  is often read yu-oke and motokin, gwan-kin (c).

2. In many compounds the words retain their proper meaning and in translation must be separated by "and":

sai-shi (c) wife and child (ren), family.

ō-fuku (c) or iki-kaeri going and returning.

jō-ge (c) above and below (also ue-shita), up and down.

3. In some cases there have been changes in the sound:  $aki\bar{u}do$ , akindo merchant, from akinai trade and hito.  $nak\bar{o}do$  a go-between (in marriage), from naka middle and hito.

a De is a postposition. In the sense of "at" or "in" de differs from ni in that it is used to indicate the scene of an action, while ni simply marks the place where a thing or person exists. Tökyö ni tomodachi ga arimasn. I have a friend in Tokyo, but Tökyö de tomodachi ni aimashita. I met a friend in Tokyo.

b Oru or iru must be used in saying that a person or a living thing is in such and such a place. But: mise ga takusan arimasu. It is, however, permissible to use aru even of a living thing when it is in question whether such a thing exists or not. So it is correct to say: Kono kinjo ni o isha san wa arimasen ka. Is there no physician in this vicinity? But here orimasen would be more natural.

c An interrogative pronoun as subject always requires ga, never wa. The subject of the answer also requires ga.

This shoemaker is dear, but [he] is skilful. My tailor's house (uchi) is distant. My neighbor (tonuri) is a photographer. How much (2) are these envelopes (1)? These envelopes are cheap. Taking wife and children along he goes abroad (to foreign countries). The peasant is selling (utte imas') grain. The gardener is planting flowers. [I] received his photograph. Are these lacquered boxes dear or cheap? [They] are dear. Who has come? The shoemaker has come. Please give me [some] envelopes. In this vicinity (1) there are many (3) dealers in foreign goods (2). In this vicinity there are no hotels, but there are many restaurants. My tailor is skilful, but the shoemaker is unskilful. At this shop do [they] sell paper also? Last night at the hotel next door (tonari no) there was a fire. That fire was due to incendiarism. This photographer is skilful. In (ni wa) Berlin (1) there are many (3) good restaurants (2). Excursion tickets are cheap.

This year (1) there are many (3) incendiary fires (2). Where are you going? [I] am going to take a look at the snow. In summer the moonlight-views on the Sumida fare fine (good). In autumn the moonlight-views of  $\overline{O}$ ji are fine. The cold in (of) Germany is very severe. The heat on (of) the Indian Ocean ( $Indo-y\bar{o}$ ) is dreadful.

a The original sense of this word is, "which direction?" Anata wa dochira ye oide desu ka. Which way are you going?

b It is also correct to say dono kurai arimasu ka. Or we may say, Kono kawa wa dono kurai fukai ka, where kurai is used adverbially.

c In these two sentences haru and fuyu are used like adverbs. When given the emphatic position at the beginning of the sentence they naturally take wa.

d Notice the peculiar manner of expression. In such sentences the Japanese does not require a comparative form of the adjective.

e It is (desu), or, There are (arimasu), thirty meters.

f Sumidagawa is the name of a river that empties into Tokyo Bay at Tokyo.

CHAPTER XI. a

A sentence in which the predicate is an adjective ending in i, if the sentence is affirmative and of the present tense, needs no copula in familiar discourse:

Natsu wa hi ga nagai. In summer the days are long.

The copula must be used when the sentence is negative, or in a past or future tense. With forms of aru or nai the adjective takes the adverbial inflection by substituting the syllable ku for i. Such forms in ku coalesce with atta and  $ar\bar{o}$  in compounds like yokatta,  $yokar\bar{o}$ .

Fuyu wa hi ga nagaku nai (arimasen).

In winter the days are not long.

 $Y\bar{u}be~wa~samukatta~(samuku~arimashita).$

Last night it was cold.

Sore wa yoroshikarō (yoroshiku arimashō).

That may do very well (be right).

The most polite forms of the verb "to be" are gozarimasu, gozarimasen, gozarimashita, gozarimash $\bar{o}$ , usually contracted to gozaimasu, etc. When any of these forms of the verb is used the k in the adverbial form of the adjective is elided and contraction occurs. Thus.

nagaku	nagau	$nag\bar{o}$
shiroku	shirou	$shir \bar{o}$
waruku	waruu	$warar{u}$
yoroshiku	yoroshiu	$yoroshar{u}$

Between the familiar forms like ii (yoi) and the very polite forms like  $y\bar{o}$  gozaimasu a middle way may be taken by using desu. Thus: ii no desu, ii n' desu, ii desu, and so forth. Grammatically ii desu and the like are open to criticism, but among men it is becoming quite the fashion to add desu to adjectives in i. But one never says yoi de gozaimasu.

The adverbial form in ku is also used before the verb naru become, natta (narimashita) became,  $nar\bar{o}$  or naru d' $ar\bar{o}$  ( $narimash\bar{o}$ ) may become, naranai (narimasen) does not become.

a This chapter anticipates some points in the later and more complete discussion of adjectives, in order to enable the student to use them at once.

THE PRONOUN.a

CHAPTER XII.

The words corresponding to our personal pronouns are really nouns. They accordingly take the particles wa, ga, no, ni, wo. The genitive case (with no) corresponds to our possessive pronoun.

In speaking to another person one must use different words according to the real or supposed rank of the one addressed. It is, however, usual to regard a stranger of presumably equal rank as one's superior, and a stranger of lower rank as one's equal. As a general rule it is to be observed that personal pronouns are not used so much as in European languages and may be omitted when the context makes it clear which person is meant. This is especially true of pronouns of the third person; but those of the first and second persons, watakushi and anata, are often used in polite conversation even in cases where their absence would not involve ambiguity.

1. The pronouns of the first person are: watakushi, watashi polite.

ses-sha (lit. rude person) used by gentlemen of the old school. boku (lit. servant) used familiarly by men, as students, etc. ore, oira (ora) vulgar.

te-mae (lit. this side, from te hand, side, and mae front, presence) humble.

Watakushi may be further contracted into washi, but this is vulgar. With watakushi, etc., wa tends to lose the sound of w, thus: watashia or watasha. When the wa is very emphatic the a is made long: watashā. Ore is derived from onore self; oira from the plural onore-ra. The classical pronoun of the first person, ware, and the possessive waga (as in waga kuni) are not used in conversation, but occur in speeches.

a Dai-mei-shi representative-name-word.

b In sentences like "I will go too" the personal pronouns must, of course, be translated: Watakushi mo mairimashō.

c Compare the proverb waga ta ye mizu wo hiku to draw water to one's own paddy-field, i. e., "to look out for number one." Ware really means self, and in some dialects is used of the second or third person.

2. The pronouns of the second person are:

anata sama, anata formal, polite.

o-mae san, omae polite toward inferiors.

kimi (lit. lord) corresponding to boku.

ki-sama (from ki honorable) used in addressing one of the lower classes.

Anata is derived from ano kata that side, that person. It is still used occasionally in the third person. Compare the German Er as formerly used of the second person. Sonata is impolite. In law courts kisama is not permitted and sono  $h\bar{o}$  (from  $h\bar{o}$  (c) side) is used by judges. This in ordinary speech would be contemptuous.

With anata and other pronouns of the second person wa is often omitted. Anata  $d\bar{o}$  nasaimashita ka. What is the matter (lit. How have you done)? At times anata stands apart from the construction like a vocative or an interjection.

Notice that many of these pronouns which according to their etymology ought to be polite have in practice become familiar or vulgar. The classical nanji is never used in the colloquial. Foreigners should use anata generally, and in speaking to their own servants or to coolies omae.

3. For pronouns of the third person such expressions as the following may be used:

ano o kata, ano kata.

ano o hito, ano hito.

ano otoko, ano onna, ano ko less polite.

aitsu (ano yatsu), a koitsu, soitsu vulgar.

Of course, kono or sono may be substituted for ano in the above. The classical  $kare^b$  is often heard in public addresses. Other expressions for he, she, it, they, are  $muk\bar{o}$  yonder side and saki front, which frequently take de or de wa.

4. Plural pronouns are formed by the use of the suffixes gata, tachi, domo and ra, or by doubling:

a Yatsu is coming to be used more and more in the sense of mono thing or person. b Compare kare-kore this or that, about.

- (1) watakushidomo, a washira. bokura.
- (2) anatagata.
  omaesangata, omaetachi, omaera.
  kimitachi.
- (3) ano katagata. ano hitobito, ano hitotachi. arera.

Waga hai our company, is a familiar expression for "we," "us," among students. Sometimes it is used in a singular sense.

c I too will go (to him).

d Hai or hei often occurs in Japanese where we should not expect "yes" in English.

e Or, O namae wa nan to osshaimasu ka. Assuming previous acquaintance: Donata de irasshaimashita ka.

f Watanabe is the surname (myō-ji); Naoyoshi, the given name (na). The surname comes first in Japanese.

g Or, O ikutsu ni o nari nasaimasu ka. Naru here does not mean "to become" in an objective sense. Compare the English, "How much does it come to?"

h Shite is the subordinate form of suru to do. Shōbai wo suru to do business, i The name of a station between Tokyó and Yokohama celebrated for its temple of Köbő Daishi (Daishi sama).

(a mån of Chōshū). My wife is from the country (inaka no mono). My horse is still young (toshi ga wakai). Your (kimi no) riksha-man is very slow. Where (2) is he (1) going? [He] is going for a bath (yu ni). Who (2) is that gentleman (1)? [He] is my teacher. What is your name, please (Who are you)? My name is $\overline{O}mori.\overline{D}$ Are you (kimi 1) going to see the flowers to-day (2)? I too will go. You (temae) are a fool. Who are you (omae san)? I am Mr. Matsubara's servant. To what school (school of where) are you (1) going? In our country there are few railways, but in your country (o kuni) there are many. How old (o ikutsu 2) are you (1)? I am twenty. Is that your writing-brush? No, [it] belongs to the teacher (is the teacher's). His servant is from Tōkyō (a man of Tōkyō).

CHAPTER XIII.

In connection with the pronoun of the second person it is desirable to call attention to a peculiarity of the Japanese language which must be well understood if one is to speak properly. In polite conversation with a person (addressed as anata) one must be careful to avoid undue familiarity in referring to things which belong, or stand in any important relation, to the one addressed. Respect is indicated by prefixing to nouns of Japanese origin o (from on, still used in very formal speech) and go (rarely gyo) to Chinese words.

Anata no o me wa ikaga de gozaimasu ka.

How are your eyes?

Nan no go yō de gozaimasu ka (lit. Business of what is it?).

What are your commands? What do you wish?

The same rule is observed in speaking respectfully of a third person. Thus to a servant at the door:

a The name of a province at the western extremity of the main island. The original name is Nagato "long gate." Chō is the Chinese for "long," and  $sh\bar{u}$  is "country."

b Omori to mōshimasu. To is a particle indicating a quotation, and is sometimes translated by "that" but sometimes is untranslatable. Mairu to mōshimasu. [He] says that he is going. Kore wa nan to mōshimasu ka. What is this called? For another use of mōsu see the second sentence on p. 56 and p. 95 c.

Danna sama wa o uchi desu ka.ª

Is Mr.— (the master) at home?

The prefixes o and go may also be attached to adjectives, adverbs, numerals and verbs. Attention will be called to such instances later.

These prefixes have become inseparable parts of certain compounds:

go sho palace (of the Emperor).

go zen, go han cooked rice, meal.

- o tama-ya ancestral shrine, sepulcher (of princes).
- o ashi money.
- o hiya cold drinking water (woman's word).
- o naka abdomen, stomach.
- o shiroi face powder.

With certain words these honorifies are invariably used by women and children, though men may dispense with them.

o kwa-shi cake.

o bon trav.

o yu warm water.

o cha tea (but cha no ki).

o ten-ki weather.

o hi fire.

o ten-tō sama sun.

o tsuki sama moon.

Another prefix expressing respect, mi, occurs occasionally in compounds like:

mi-kado Emperor (obsolete), from kado gate.

mi-ya shrine, imperial prince, from ya house.

In o mi ashi, a woman's expression, we find both honorifies. Women may even be heard to say o mi o tsuke (o tsuke soup made of miso), o mi o hachi (o hachi a vessel to hold cooked rice, from hachi bowl).

Rules for the use of honorifics are impossible: one must simply observe the usage. Some words whose Chinese origin is forgotten take o instead of yo, like o cha, o tentō sama. Also:

a A more complete expression is o uchi de (ni) irasshaimasu ka. Irassharu is polite for iru. If Chinese words are used, this becomes: go zai-taku desu ka, zai being the equivalent of aru or iru.

- o dai-ji (lit. important matter). a o rei thanks.c
- o ka-gen state of health.b o se-ji civility, flattery.
- o ni-kai second floor, upstairs. o taku house.

Again, go may be used with a Japanese word; e. g., with mottomo reasonableness, d nengoro cordiality, or with the adverb yukkuri to leisurely.

With some words either o or go may be used:

- o tan-jō-bi or go tanjōbi birthday.
- o shoku-gyō or go shokugyō occupation.

Some words are never used with honorifics, as sen-sei teacher, shitsu-rei impoliteness or shik-kei disrespect (students' word). But: go bu-rei rudeness.

Sometimes euphony forbids the use of an honorific. Thus we never hear o oku san. In some instances only special words may be used with o and go. Thus we say not o atama, but o tsumuri.

In some cases it is usual to add the honorifics even when speaking to inferiors, as in  $Go \ ku-r\bar{o}$  Thanks for your trouble  $(\bar{o}ki \ ni \ go \ kur\bar{o} \ de \ atta)$ .

Vocabulary.

kami (sama) god. mi-ya sama imperial prince.

(o) mi-ya shrine.

danna (san) master.

- o tama-ya ancestral shrine, sepulcher (of a person of high rank).
- o hiya cold drinking water (women's word).

- (o) matsuri local religious festival.
- (o) tsumuri head.
- (o) yashiki mansion (including grounds).
- (o) kome rice.

toki time.

- (o) bon tray.
- (o) cha tea.

a O daiji ni nasai. Take good care of yourself (lit. Make it an important thing).

b From ka increase and gen decrease. But ki-gen temper, state of health, takes go only.

c O rei may be my thanks to another or another's thanks to me. O rei wo mō-shiagetai I wish to offer [you] my thanks. O rei nado ni wa oyobimasen. Thanks are unnecessary (lit. It does not extend to thanks and the like).

d Go mottomo de gozaimasu. You are quite right.

e Go yukkuri nasai. Don't be in a hurry to leave.

(o) taku residence, house.

(o)se-ji civility, flattery.

oide nasaru polite for iku, kuru(2, 3).

choito, chotto just a moment. kom-ban this evening. ichi-ban number one, most. tai-sō exceedingly, very.

ikaga how?

Exercises.

Danna sama! f uckiya ga mairimash'ta. Sō ka: nan no yō de kita ka. Oi, Gons'ke!s chotto koi(oide). Hei, danna sama, nan no go yō de gozaimas' ka. Cha wo motte koi. Go sho wa empō de yozaimas' ka. Iie, kono kinjo de yozaimas'. Toku-gawake noh o tamaya wa doko de yozaimas' ka. Tōkyō de wa a O teriki desu. It is fine weather.

b When a person comes by invitation to a dinner he says: Konnichi wa go chisō de gozaimasu. On taking his leave: Go chisō ni narimashita or Go chisō sama. On taking his leave:

c Kirci, kōdai, rippa, belong to the class of adjectives, mostly of Chinese derivation, which are really nouns, requiring in the attributive position the suffix na, and in the predicative position taking desu (de goznimasu). The first two are apt to mislead the foreigner because they end in i. Beware of saying: kōdai yashiki or Kono hana wa kirci.

d Dekimasu it can be done, one can do it.

e Koi is too rude a word for a beginner to use acceptably even in commanding servants. It is better to say: Motte oide nasai. Oide nasai is the imperative of oide nasaru.

f In addressing any one, the name is sufficient. A vocative particle is not needed.  $Y_{\theta}$  is often used after the divine Name in prayer, and  $y_{\theta}$  by men in calling their wives, and by parents in calling their children, by name.

g A name commonly given to men-servants.

h In compounds ke means house, family. Tokngawa is the name of a family whose representatives held the position of shōgun from 1603 until the abolition of the feudal system.

Shiba to Ueno ni arimas'. Nikkō no o tamaya wa rippa de gozaimas'. O matsuri ni wa hito ga kami sama ni mairimas'. Komban no o tsuki sama wa kirei des'. Konnichi wa ii o tenki de gozaimas'. Yūbe o tonari de go chisō ni natta (was entertained). Kyō no go zen wa mazui. Kyōto no o shiroi wa ii. Kono o shiroi wa nioi ga ii. Kore wa doko no o cha de gozaimas' ka. Uji no o cha de gozaimas'. O hiya wo ippai chōdai. O yu ga atsū gozaimas' ka. Kono o bon wa kirei de gozaimas'. Kono o sakana wa taisō oishiu gozaimas'. Kotoshi wa o kome ga yoku dekimash'ta. Anata no o taku wa dochira de gozaimas' ka. Watakushi no taku wa Shiba de gozaimas'. Ano akindo wa o seji ga ii.

Sir (danna san), Mr. Tanaka's rikshaman has come. What does he want (on what business came)? The imperial palace at (of) Kyōto is not at all (de wa nai) magnificent. Sir, what are your commands (what business is it)? Bring[some]rice(go zen). The sepulchers of the Tokugawa family are in the vicinity of [my]home. Then is your residence in Shiba? No, it is [in] Ueno. To-day the weather is bad. Are you going to see the flowers to-day? If the weather is fine (Tenki ga yokereba), I will go. Both the rice and the fish are delicious to-day(1). The tea of Uji is the best. Give me a cup(2) of tea(1). Is that cold or hot water (Is it cold water; is it hot water)? At (ni wa) the Kanda festival fish is dear. Is your residence far [from here]? No, it is [in] this vicinity. How (2) is your head (1)? How much (2) is this tobacco? It is only one yen. That prince's mansion is magnificent.

a The wa after de implies that there are also sepulchers in other places. Shiba and Ueno are names of parks in Tokyo.

b Nikko is a place north of Tokyo, the site of the mausolea of the first and third shoguns.

c A place south of Kyoto celebrated for its tea.

d De here does not mean "in". It marks Shiba as a predicate noun. Lit. In regard to my house—it is Shiba. Compare: Anata no o taku wa kono kinjo desu ka. It would also be correct to say: Shiba ni arimasu or kono kinjo ni arimasu.

e Wa is generally attached to de in a negative sentence. De wa is often contracted to ja.  $S\bar{o}$  ja nai. That isn't so,

CHAPTER XIV.

The demonstrative pronouns are:

exclude one who two kono, sono, ano adjectival.

kore, sore, are substantival.

Kono and kore have reference to persons or things connected with the speaker; sono and sore, to those connected with the person addressed; ano and are to those which are removed from both. Kono, sono, kore, sore, may also have reference to persons or things that have just been the subject of conversation.

Kono, sono, uno are often equivalent to kore no, etc.

Kane no kawari ni instead of money.

Sono kawari ni instead of that.

Hako no uchi ni inside the box.

Sono uchi ni inside that (also, within a short time).

Kono nochi (kono go) after this, hereafter.

Kore, sore, are are used with words like kurai, dake, hodo, though we might expect kono, etc. Thus: kore gurai (kono gurai is also proper), kore dake, kore hodo this much, to this extent. But kono hodo means "recently."

Kore, sore, are may denote a place or a time:

Kore kara from this point, henceforth, next.

Kore made until now. a Sore kara uchi ye kaerimashita.

After that I returned home.

Are kara Tōkyō made kisha de mairimashita.

Thence to Tokyo I went by train.

In the compounds kon-aida, ko-toski we have the demonstrative pronoun. But in kon-nen this year, kon-getsu this month, kon-nichi to-day, kon-ya to-night, etc., we have the Chinese equivalent of ima.

Vocabulary.

(Include demonstrative pronouns.)

pan (Latin: pauis) bread. func pen pen. haci fune ship, boat.

a In these examples koko, here, or ima, now, might be substituted for kore. Such words as koko and ima ought really to be included in a complete list of pronouns, hi-bachi fire-box. kotatsu quilt-warmer.a dai-jin minister of state. dō-butsu animal. dōbutsu-en zoological garden. ji-sho dictionary. mikan mandarin orange. soko that place, there. attakai, atatakai warm. ire-ru put into. iru is or are required, needed. iri-yō need (noun).b kawaru be changed, substituted.

kawari a substitute. kaeru return. mawaru turn, go round, travel about. yasumu rest, retire, sleep. yasumi vacation. kon-getsu this month. koro period of time. kono-goro recently. saku-jitsu yesterday. fu-dan(ni) usually, generally. tai-gai, tai-tei for the most part, almost. mata again. shikashi but (See p. 8a).

a A hibachi is a pot or box filled with ashes upon which charcoal is burned. A kotatsu is the same arranged so that it can be covered with a quilt and used for warming the feet and hands.

b Sore wa iriyō desu. That is needed.

c Used like kurai (See p. 22b). Itsu goro about when?

d Motte koi would be impolite. Instead of the simple imperative one may also use the subordinate form with the imperative of kure-ru give, with or without the honorific o, thus: motte kite (o)kure. More polite than kure is kudasai, the imperative of kudasaru.

Recently a Japanese minister of state went to Germany. Then he went (o mawari ni narimash'ta) to Russia.c Recently the weather has been (is) bad. Where (2) are you going next (1)? Next I am going home. Is that a good pen? No, [it] is a bad one. Then give [me] that writing-brush. Japanese generally eat bread? No, instead of that they eat rice (meshi). To-day the school takes a vacation (it is a rest). Is this a good school? Yes, [it] is a very good one. Do you need (o iriyō des' ka) this dictionary? No. I don't need it. Then please give [it] to me. Spring (of) this year is quite warm. Is there a zoological garden in Tōkyō (1)? Yes, there is (aru koto wa arimas'), but there are few (2) animals (1). This month (wa) the Japanese go a great deal (yoku) to see the flowers. Next I am going for a bath (yu). This flower is pretty; but [its] odor is bad. Is that a German (Doits' no) ship? No, it is a French (Frans' no) ship.

CHAPTER XV.

"The same" is to be rendered onaji (adverbial form: onajiku).

Sore wa onaji koto desu.d

That amounts to the same thing (is the same thing).

With some Chinese words compounds are formed by means of  $d\bar{o}$ , the Chinese equivalent of onaji.

a Notice the peculiar manner of expression.

b Kii or Ki-shū (Compare Choshu p. 30a) is the name of a province on the coast between Tokyo and Osaka, nearer the latter city. This sentence is taken from a popular song. Mikambune is compounded of mikan and fune.

c The stem of the verb treated as a noun, with the honorific o prefixed, is used with nasaru or ni naru when speaking respectfully of others, as above.

d Onaji mono would be concrete, meaning the identical object, or, inexactly, an object of the same class. Onaji koto (often pronounced onashi koto) means rather the same idea.

 $d\bar{o}$ -koku = onaji kuni the same province.

 $d\bar{o}$ - $d\bar{o}$  = onaji michi the same road.

 $d\bar{o}$ -nen=onaji toshi the same year.a

 $d\bar{o}$ -i,  $d\bar{o}$ -setsu the same opinion.

 $d\bar{o}$ - $y\bar{o}$  the same manner.

dō-kyū-sei (lit. same class pupil) a classmate.

"As" in "the same as" is to be rendered to.

Kore wa are to onaji mono desu.

This is the same as that, or,

Kore mo are mo onaji mono desu.

This and that are the same.

Watakushi mo anata to dösetsu desu.

I too am of the same opinion with you.

"Snch" may be variously rendered:

kō iu, kayō na, kō iu yō na, kono yō na, konna.b sō iu, sayō na, sō iu yō na, uno yō na, sonna.c

ā iu, ā iu yō na, ano yō na, anna.

The contracted forms konna, sonna, anna used attributively are often contemptuous. With ni they are also used adverbially in the sense of "so".

Sonna ni mutsukashiku arimasen.

It is not so difficult [as all that].

Here  $s\bar{o}$  may be substituted for sonna ni.

Vocabulary.

koku (c) country (only in composition).

satsu (c) card, note, paper money.

a In the sense of "the same age" onaji toshi is contracted to onaidoshi.

b Kō in yō would be literally: thus say manner. Na is the adjectival suffix. Compare kōdai na yashiki or kirei na hana.

c Kô has reference usually to what is to follow in the course of the conversation; sō, to what precedes.

yō(c)manner.a i-mi meaning, purport. sho-sei, gaku-sei student. shō-kin specie. gwaikoku-go foreign languages. b iu sav. chiku-shō beast. a Much used in such expressions as: Ano kedomo wa iji ga warui yō desu. That child seems to be ill-natured.

b Compare Nihon-go Japanese language, and zoku-go colloquial.

c Compare dochi, dochi, dochira (p. 23a). Similarly: sochi, sochi, sochira; achi, achi, achira. The ra here is the same as the sign of the plural. These words are like nouns and may be used with postpositions. Kochira ye oide nasai. Come this way. Achi kochi here and there.

d Oru is synonymous with iru. See Ch. V.

e By adding nikui to the stems of verbs many compound adjectives like this are formed. The opposite of nikui or katai (gatai) is yasui or yei. Thus: chee gatai, oboc yasui, wakari-yasui, wakari-yasui, wakari-yoi, etc.

f Twice. See Ch. X., Vocabulary.

This character means the same (is the same meaning) as that character. Nihon and Nippon (to wa) are the same thing. Edo and Tōkyō are the same place. He (1) came by the same ship (3) as you (2). The length is different, but the price is the same. That character has this  $(k\bar{o}\ iu)$  meaning. Such a word is very hard to remember. There are many such difficult characters. Cold (3) as severe (2) as this (1) is rare. In  $(ni\ wa)$  Japan (1) there are few (5) such (2) high (3) houses (4). That farmer is a man (mono) of the same province as I. This tree is [of] the same height as that tree. In  $(de\ wa)$  Japan such fish are cheap. My children and [my] neighbor's  $(tonari\ no)$  children are of the same age. Those children are uncommonly ill-natured (Such ill-natured children are uncommon). Saikyō is the same thing as Kyōto, for but the meaning of the names is different.

a In some such cases either aru or iru (oru) may be used. It depends on whether one thinks more of the place or of the person.

b Or O tomo (του) itashimashō, or Go dōhan itashimashō, frem han (c) to accompany.

c Is the kyō in Kyōto the same as the kyō in Tōkyō?

d It's a beastly way of acting. In inu chikushō we have an instance of the asyndetic construction. With words like  $d\bar{\nu}p\bar{\nu}$  the particle  $t\bar{\nu}$  is often omitted.

e "Ship" is in Chinese sen. Accordingly: do-sen.

f Sai-kyō west capital, in distinction from To-kyō east capital. In Kyōto, kyō is the same—capital—and to is likewise capital or a chief city. Compare to-kwai city, metropolis.

CHAPTER XVI.

The following serve as interrogative pronouns (gimon-dai-meishi).<sup>a</sup> dare who?

nani, nan what?

dore which? (substantival).

dono which? (adjectival).

dochi, dotchi, dochira which? (of the two, or of a very limited number), where?

dō iu, dō iu yō na, dono yō na, donna of what kind? what sort of a...?

A plural is formed by doubling. Thus: dare dare, dore dore, nani nani. b

The substantival forms take the same particles (ga, no, ni, wo, de, etc.) as nouns. Observe that ga, not wa, occurs usually with interrogative pronouns.

Dare ga mairimashita ka. Who came?

Kore wa dare no mono desu ka. Whose is this? In this last mono may be omitted.

Nani may be used like an adjective.

Nani hito (nampito) de gozaimaskō ka.

What sort of a man may he be?

Nan nin arimasu ka.

How many persons are there?

Nan da ka, nan desu ka is frequently used as an expletive. The Japanese often say "how?" where we should say "what?"

a Doko where? and itsu when? might also with propriety be included in this list, as they are parsed just like nouns or pronouns.

b These words are closely joined in pronunciation and an almost inaudible n creeps in: darendare, dorendare. But the two parts are kept distinct in the exclamation:

Dore dore Where is it? This last is often a mere interjection expressing surprise.

c In Nani wa do narimashita ka How about that matter? we havean apparent exception; but nani here is really used indefinitely, like our "what-do-you-call-it", referring to a thing or person whose name is momentarily forgotten by the speaker. We have a real exception in Dare wa kite dare wa kimasen ka Who came and who did not come?

Dō itashimashō ka What shall I do? But:

Omae wa nani wo suru ka What are you doing?

Dore, like nani, may in certain connections be used like an adjective. Thus: dore gurai, dore dake, dore hodo are equivalent to dono gurai, etc., "how much?" See Ch. XIV.

Instead of dono we find doko no or dochira no, when the place or source is the object of inquiry.

Omae wa doko no gakkō ye ikimasu ka.

To what school are you going?

 $D\bar{o}$  iu, donna, etc., inquire after the nature of a thing.  $D\bar{o}$ shita (lit. how did?) is used in the same way. Observe further the very frequent idiem nan to iu (lit. what say?) which inquires after the name, but in many cases is practically synonymous with do iu.

Are wa do iu (do shita) hito desu ka.

What kind of a man is he?

(Kono sakana wa nan to iimasu ka.

Kore wa nan to iu sakana desu ka.

What do you call this fish? or, What fish is this?

Which day? (of the month) is nan nichi or ikka, from iku how many.a

CHAPTER XVII.

Interrogative pronouns may be made indefinite (fujō-daimeishi) by adding the particles ka, mo, de mo. Thus:

N. dare ka dare mo dare de mo

G. dare ka no dare no-mo dare no-de mo

D. dare ka ni dare ni mo b dare ni de mo

A. dareka (wo) dare (wo) mo dare de mo

Dare ka is vague and means "some one," "somebody;" in questions, "any one," "anybody." Dare mo is comprehensive: "any one," "every one." It is mostly used with negative expressions, in which case it must be translated "no one." Dare de mo is likewise universal, but it individualizes ("any one you please"), and is more commonly used with affirmative predicates.

a A harbor on the coast of the province of Ise.

b Compare: Dare ni mo kikimasen. He inquires (lit. hears) of no one. ni kiite mo sō iu hanashi desu. Such is the story, ask whom you will,

Has any one come?

Every one knows it.

No one has come (comes).

Any one at all may come.

Not a single one can come.

Dare ka kimashita ka.

Dare mo kimasen.

Dare de mo kite yoroshii.

Dare de mo koraremasen.

Dare mo shitte imasu.

Dare de mo shitte imasu.

Every one (though he be a fool) knows it.

Donata ka, etc., would be more polite.

Similar forms may be derived from nani, dore, dochira, do-ko, itsu, ikura, dono—, donna—. <sup>a</sup> They are very common in the colloquial.

Dore ka motte kimaskō ka. Shall I bring one of them?

Dore mo motte kite kudasai. Bring them every one, please.

Dore de mo motte kite kudasai. Bring any one of them, please.

Itsu mo no tōri gakkō ye ikimashita.

I went to school as usual.

Itsu de mo yō gozaimasu. Any time will do.

Donna hon ni mo machigai ga arimasu.

Every book has its mistakes.

Are wa donna hon de mo yomimasu.

He reads any book.

Donna kimono de mo yoroshii. Any clothes will do.

The last sentence is equivalent to: Donna kimono wo kite mo yoroshii. The particle mo with the subordinate form of the verb has concessive force, as will be explained more fully later. The fuller form of de mo is de atte mo, from aru.

But notice that the de in de mo often has the sense of at, with, etc.

Doko no gakkō de mo kono hon wo mochiite orimasu.

They use this book in every school.

For de mo we may substitute to mo in certain connections.b

Nan to iimashita ka. What did he say?

Nan to mo iimasen. He said nothing at all.

a Compare  $d\tilde{\sigma}$  ka somehow or other,  $d\tilde{\sigma}$  mo in every way, no matter how one tries (an exceedingly common expletive),  $d\tilde{\sigma}$  de mo any way you please; also  $d\tilde{\sigma}$  ka  $k\tilde{\sigma}$  ka in one way or another, i. e., with difficulty.  $D\tilde{\sigma}$  ka  $k\tilde{\sigma}$  ka dekimashita. We did manage to get it done.

b This to me and tome together in the emphatic ryōhō tomo, both, are not to be confounded.

It is interesting to compare:

Nani mo nai. There's nothing.

Nan de mo nai. It's nothing at all.

Nan to mo nai. It makes no difference to me.

For ka, zo may be substituted, and thus  $nan\ zo$  is equivalent to  $nani\ ka$ .

In certain idioms nani without any particle may be used as an indefinite pronoun. Thus: nani kara nani made "the whole business." Notice also the very emphatic nani mo ka(ni)mo everything (with emphasis on "every") and nan de mo ka(n) de mo.

A common expression for "a certain person" is dare sore. This is used to designate a person in a supposed ease, or one whose name it is inconvenient to give, and is equivalent to our "blank" or "Mr. So-and-so." It corresponds to the more literary form nanigashi, or nan no taregashi (soregashi).

"Somebody" may be rendered simply by hito. "Something" is similarly rendered by mono.

Hito to hanashi wo shite orimashita.

Was speaking with somebody.

Mono wo iu to say something.

With adjectives "something" is to be rendered by mono (concrete) and koto (abstract).

Kuroi mono something black.

Nani ka warui koto something bad, bad behavior.

Dare ka kita; dare ka toritsugi wo shiro.

a A newspaper is properly called shimbun-shi, from shi paper.

b Notice that bakari and dake follow the words which they modify, ga and wo being usually omitted. Dake differs from bakari in that it sets the limit more definitely. Ichi yen bakari about one yen. Ichi yen dake not more than one yen. But they are frequently interchangeable.

e The master of the house may say koi to his own servants; but the lady of the house may not.

d Here, as is quite common in negative sentences, the present stands for the past. Notice that the servant Gonske in his reply uses not kurn, but the polite verb mairu.

e The original meaning of dekirn is "come forth", "be produced". It is to be translated variously, depending on the context. Ano hito wa dekinai. He can't do it. Dekimasu nara if possible. Mo shitaku ga dekimashita. The preparations are now complete, everything is ready. The person is properly put in the dative case. Watakushi ni wa hanashi ga dekimasen. Do you know any one (2) among these people(1)? Yes, I know all (mina sama wo zonjite imas'). Does every one (2) use this dictionary (1)? Only scholars use [it]. Among these curios which do you like? I like them all. Every one praises the ancestral shrines at Nikkō. Which [of the two] is better? Either will do (is good). This servant is not worth anything. There is a school in every village. This dictionary is not worth anything.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In cases where we use such pronominal words as "every", "all," "many," "other," etc., in Japanese the tendency is to use adverbial forms.

"Every one," if referring to persons, may be rendered by mei-mei, or mem-men, from mei name and men face, or by tende ni.

a This is the desiderative form of the verb tabe-ru. It means, I want to eat, I have an appetite for....

With words denoting time "every" becomes mai (c):

mai-nichi (mai-jitsu) every day.

mai-asa, mai-ban every morning, every evening. mai-nen (mai-toshi) every year.

But with words denoting place the construction explained in the previous chapter is used:

Doko no mura ni mo in every village.

"All" is mina (minna) or nokorazu. These words, like meimei, etc., are commonly used adverbially, and immediately precede the verb. In some constructions they are to be translated "wholly" or "entirely." Nokorazu is properly the negative subordinate form of the verb nokoru meaning "not (none) being left." Mina sama (san), much used in speaking of a company, is truly pronominal.

"Many" is  $\bar{o}i$  and "few" is sukunai; but these words, as has been said before, can be used only in the predicative position. The idea of "many" may be expressed in a different way by the use of the adverb  $\bar{o}ku$  numerously:

Hitobito ga õku atsumarimashita.

Many people assembled.

For  $\bar{o}ku$  we may substitute  $\bar{o}$ -zei (limited to persons), takusan, or tanto (persons and things). These words are really nouns used adverbially. From these are derived the adjectival  $\bar{o}ku$ no, ōzei no, takusan no or takusan na.

"Another" is hoka no, ta (e) no, betsu (e) no, betsu na. Thus: hoka no isha, ta no isha, betsu no isha another physician. But the Japanese often use the adverbial form hoka ni where we use the adjective. The same idea is expressed by  $m\bar{o}$  with a numeral:  $m\bar{o}$  hitotsu no hanashi another story. "The other" is often  $muk\bar{o}$  no the opposite one. The one..... the other..... is  $katapp\bar{o}$ ...... $katapp\bar{o}$ ...... Instead of hoka no hito one may say simply hito:

Kore wa hito no mono desu.

This belongs to another person.

To Chinese words ta or betsu is prefixed without no, as in ta-nin another person (not a relative), ta-ken another prefecture bes-shitsu another room,

A peculiar expression is, Hoka de wa (de mo) arimasen ga... .... I just want to say that...... (lit. It is nothing else whatever; but.....). This is used in broaching the subject about which one wishes more particularly to speak.

a In the sense of town  $ch\bar{o}$  is used only in composition, as in  $ch\bar{o}$ -nai within the town. Technically the government determines the application of the term machi or  $ch\bar{o}$  in the sense of town; but popularly it is applied to any collection of houses which includes merchants' shops.

a Mukōjima is a place near Tokyo celebrated for its cherry-blossoms. Shimau to finish is often attached to the subordinate form of a verb, as in this sentence. Chitte shimaimashita (lit. falling they ended) they have fallen and are all at an end.

b Mina san is vocative. Konnichi wa is a common greeting like our, "How do you do?" It is elliptical for: Konncihi wa yoi o tenki desu, or the like.

c Since there is a contrast between akagane and hoka no kane, we should expect wa with both; but the former takes ga because wa precedes. It would also be correct to say akagane wa.

d Toshi no ichi is a street-fair held toward the end of the year. Here one buys things needed for the New Year's celebrations. Kui ni iku to go to buy. When the nature of the purchases to be made is not stated, one may say indefinitely, kaimono ni iku.

e A common expression for this is: Gakkō ga maru-yake deshita ka.

f Either tonari ni kyaku ga özei orimasu or özei kyaku ga orimasu (imasu) will do. Using desu, the sentence becomes tonari no kyaku ga özei deşu,

In England (Eikoku) there is much iron. Recently many Japanese have been (are) going to Germany.

CHAPTER XIX.

There are in Japanese no relative pronouns (kwankei-dai-meishi). Where we use a relative clause the Japanese simply prefix the verb of the relative clause to the noun or pronoun which in English would be the antecedent. As has been intimated before (p. 18 b), Japanese verbs may be used just like adjectives. In the translations of the following examples notice the different cases of the relative pronoun.

Yaketa ie the house that was burned.

Yane no yaketa ie the house whose roof was burned.

Uekiya no ueta ki the tree that the gardener planted.

Shiranai hito a man whom I do not know.

Suzuki to iu hito a man whom [they] call Suzuki.

Na no aru hito a man who has a name (reputation).

Fune wo koshiraeru tokoro a place at which they build ships.

Mi no naru ki a tree on which fruit is produced.

But by changing the voice we may obtain similar adjectival constructions in English, thus: the tree planted by the gardener, an unknown man, a man named Suzuki, a fruit-bearing tree, etc. In Japanese the use of the passive is limited to a few special cases. For this reason English passive participles and relative clauses with passive verbs are usually to be rendered by active verbs in Japanese.

Notice that the subject of the relative clause takes no. We have here the same substitution of no for ga as in the examples given in Ch. VII. In longer clauses ga also may be used.

a The question may be rendered more elegantly go zen-shō deshita ka, zenshō being the Chinese equivalent of maruyake. In the answer we observe a peculiar use of made in the sense of "even."

When the English antecedent is indefinite or the indefinite relative "what" occurs, the Japanese uses an attributive verb with mono or koto. Mono is used also of persons synonymously with hito. In certain connections no may also be substituted for mono or koto.<sup>2</sup>

Hōritsu wo okasu mono one who violates the law.

 $Kin\bar{o}\ mita\ koto\ what\ [I]\ saw\ yesterday.$

Anata no ossharu no wa go mottomo d $\epsilon$ su.

What you say is quite true.

We have observed in the examples given above that the indicative form of the verb, like the participle in English, is used adjectively. Hence many of our adjectives must be translated by the use of verbs. Further, in relative clauses, as in dependent clauses generally, the present often stands for other tenses. Thus:

Aru hi Furubekki to in gwaikoku no o kata ni aimashita. One day I met a foreign gentleman named Verbeck.

Here there is no occasion to change aru and iu to the past tense. Indeed they have practically become adjectives.

The idiom to iu often serves to turn a whole sentence into a relative clause, in which case it is not translated.

Ano kata ga kondo Kōtōgakkō ni kita to iu Seiyōjin desu ka. Is that the foreigner that came to the Higher School recently?

As in the German, long and involved clauses may be used to modify nouns. Sometimes a noun may be directly limited by a succession of attributive verbs; but such multiplication of coördinate relative clauses is to be avoided. It is, however, quite natural to attach two or more verbs to one noun if all but the last are in the subordinate form.

Ima ume no ki ni tomatte naite iru tori wa uguisu desu. The bird that is sitting(now)on the plum-tree and singing is a bush-warbler.

a This use of koto with an attributive verb is to be distinguished from another, more abstract, use of the same construction, as in: Aru koto wa aru ga (lit. As far as existing is concerned, it exists but.....) There is such a thing, but..... Tabeta koto ga aru I have eaten it before. Kiita koto ga (wa) nai I have never heard it. Notice that mono also may be used in an abstract sense, as in Dō shita mon' deshō. What is to be done? Compare: Dō shita koto deshō. What is the matter?

CHAPTER XX.

The word "self" has several equivalents in the literary language, but in the colloquial is usually rendered by ji-bun, from ji self and bun part, or by the rather more literary form ji-shin, from shin body or self. In "I myself," "you yourself," etc., "myself," "yourself," etc., are to be rendered by  $jibun\ de\ (kara)$ , usually put in the adverbial position. In speaking respectfully to or of a person the honorific go is prefixed.

Jibun no mono wo jibun de kowashimashita.

He himself broke his own things.

Go jibun de oide nasaimashita. He came himself.

Jibun kara nanotte demashita.

He introduced himself (telling his name came forward).

Jibun may also be used as a simple personal pronoun, taking the particles wa, ga, no, ni, wo and various postpositions. There are also plural forms, such as jibuntachi, jibundomo, jibunra.

Jibun wa Tōkyō ye itte kazoku wa Kamakura ni nokoshite okimashō.

He himself will go (lit. going) to Tōkyō and leave (lit. leaving will put) his family in Kamakura.

Jibuntachi ga warui node arimasen ka.

Are not they themselves in the wrong?

These examples might also be construed in the first person, according to the context.

Notice the use of ji in expressions derived from the Chinese, such as:

Ji-bun no dekiru koto wo ji-man shite iru.

He prides himself on his ability (man pride).

Ji-satsu suru to kill one's self, from satsu kill.

Ji-gō ji-toku (lit. self-act self-get).

A man's sin brings its own punishment.

The following idioms should also be noted in this connection:

Karada wo aray to wash one's self.

a It is an unsettled question among Japanese grammarians whether adverbs or adverbial expressions should always immediately precede the verb or not. Ordinarily jibun' de is placed between the verb and its object, but in some cases it more naturally precedes the object.

Kimono wo kiru to dress one's self.

Koshi wo kakeru to seat one's self (on a chair or other raised object).

Mi wo kakusu to hide one's self.a

Mi-nage wo suru to drown one's self, from nage-ru to cast.

Ware (mi) wo wasureru to forget one's self.

The mi which occurs in the last few examples enters into the very common idiom mi-no-ue (lit. upon self) which means: one's personal fortunes, "fate."

Mi-no-ue-banashi wo suru to talk about one's personal situation.

"One another," "mutually," is rendered by the adverbial tagai ni. In addition there may be added to the stem of the verb the auxiliary au to meet.

Tagai ni tasuke-au. They help one another.

-Togai ni hore-au. They fall in love with each other.

Notice the use of the Chinese  $d\bar{o}$ -shi, from  $d\bar{o}$  same, together, and shi man, in: Tomodachi  $d\bar{o}$ shi de hanashi wo suru (lit. Friends among themselves speaking do) They hold a conversation just among themselves as friends.

a The idiom mi wo kakusu is commonly used of a debtor hiding from his creditors, or of a hermit. "To hide one's self" is more commonly expressed by the passive verb kakure-ru to be hidden.

b Oyaji may be used contemptuously of any old man. It may also be used in speaking humbly of one's own father. In speaking of the father of a second person, use the polite Chinese equivalent of oyaji, go shim-pu (sama). The most suitable term for ordinary purposes is chichi or chichi-oya.

b In this case uchi de may be better than jibun de. The adjective "home-made' becomes in Japanese te-sei no hand-made (a case of yutō-yomi), as in tesei no jōbuku-ro home-made envelopes.

THE NUMERAL.ª

CHAPTER XXI.

The Japanese language has two series of numerals. One consists of native Japanese words; the other is borrowed from the Chinese. The native Japanese numerals in common use are:

hitotsu onemutsu sixfutatsu twonanatsu sevenmitsu threeyatsu eightyotsu fourkokonotsu nineitsutsu five $t\bar{o}$  ten

Those of two syllables are commonly pronounced with stress on the t: mittsu, yottsu, muttsu, yattsu.

These numerals are used only for things, not for persons. They usually follow the noun. In case they precede the noun, they naturally take the particle no.

Tokei futatsu, futatsu no tokei two clocks.

Mō hitotsu kotoba qa arimasu There is one more word.

In telling the age of a child these numerals may be used alone, the word for "year" being understood.

Hitotsu may also be used as a kind of expletive in the sense of our "once."

Hitotsu yatte go ran nasai Try it once (lit. one doing see). The native numerals above "ten" are mostly obsolete, but some of them still occur in certain connections. Thus the old word for "twenty" appears in hatachi twenty years old and hatsuka twenty days or the twentieth day. "Thirty," "forty", etc., would be mi-so, yo-so, i-so, mu-so, etc. Of these, miso is still used in misoka the last day of the month according to the old calendar. Momo one hundred occurs in the classical momo tose one hundred years. Ya-o eight hundred appears in the familiar yao-ya greengrocer; chi one thousand, in Chi-shima thousand isles (the Kuriles), and yorozu a myriad, in yorozu-ya dealer in miscellaneous articles, jack-of-all-trades.

a The verbs ochi-ru to fall down (of things in general) and chiru (of blossoms and leaves) should not be confused. The subordinate forms are respectively ochite and chitte. Note also that we say furu, not cchiru, of things which fall from above, like rain, snow or volcanic ash.

b O nari nasaru is more polite than narimasu.

c Entering is possible, i. e., can enter. Our " can " is often to be translated by the use of this idiom.

.CHAPTER XXII.

In combination with certain words, mostly of native origin, the numerals ending in tsu(and ikutsu) lose that termination, while  $t\bar{o}$  becomes to, thus:  $hito\ tsuki$ ,  $futa\ tsuki$ ,  $mi\ tsuki$ , etc.,  $kokono\ tsuki$ ,  $to\ tsuki$ , from tsuki month. Some of these words are:

a In Japanese one always says, not " is five," nor " makes five, " but " becomes five."

b Notice that arimasu without de is used in such enumerations.

c In combination with the subordinate form of a verb, iru or oru must be used even when the subject is not a living thing.

Note also: hito-suji ni earnestly, from suji line, hito-kuchi ni at one mouthful, in a word, hito-me ni at a glance, b hito-omoi ni at the impulse of the moment (omoi thought), hito ashi one step, hito iki one breath. Distinguish:

futa-go twins.

futatsu ni naru kodomo a child two years old.

futari no kodomo two children.

"Triplets" is mitsu-go. c Distinguish also:

mi kumi three sets.

mitsu-gumi a set of three pieces.

Certain numerals are combined with ka (old word for day) as follows:

mikka	$_{ m three}$	"	"	third	"
yokka	$\mathbf{four}$	"	"	fourth	"

a Hito tōri de wa nai It's unusual. Hito tōri is much used as an adverb meaning "in the main." Ano hon wa hito-tōri yomimashita I have read the book in a general way (or, once through).

b Hito-me de wakarimashita I perceived it immediately. Yama kara wachi wo hito-me ni mi-orosu to take a view of a town from a mountain (mi-orosu to look down).

c Mitsugo has another meaning in the proverb: Mitsugo no tamashii hyaku made The soul of child three years old [remains the same] until [it becomes] a hundred years old.

kokonoka nine days, the ninth day tōka ten days, the tenth day

hatsuka twenty days, the twentieth day

One day, or the first day, is ichi nichi (c). The last day of the month according to the old calendar is misoka; and the last day of the last month, ō-misoka: but the thirtieth is now usually called  $san j\bar{u}$  nichi (c). Distinguish:

itsuka five days, the fifth day.

itsu ka at some time.

ikka, from iku ka, how many days, which day? (of the month). In counting persons the following forms derived from native numerals may be used:

hitori one person; hitori de alone.a futari two persons; futari de two together.

yottari four persons.

ikutari how many persons?

To these the honorific o is often prefixed. For other numbers the Chinese san nin, go nin, etc., are used. The form mitari is obsolete in the colloquial. One may also say: ichi nin, ni nin iku nin; but not shi nin for four persons, because shi-nin means also a dead person, from shi death.

Notice that in such combinations as chawan hito kumi, kodomo futari, the nouns chawan and kodomo take the particles ga, wo, etc. Words like hito kumi and futari usually do not take ga or wo.

In rapid counting the native numbers are abbreviated to hi, fu, mi, yo, itsu, mu, nana, ya, kono, tō.

c This proverb alludes to the third and fifth of the five great festivals, which are called go sekku. At the third festival, which occurs on the fifth day of the fifth month (old style), it is customary to decorate the house with sweet flags, and at the fifth festival, on the ninth of the ninth month, chrysanthemums are exhibited. The proverb has reference to things that come too late to be of any use.

c One may also say: Yokohama to Sanf'ranshis'ko no aida wa hatsuka gurai kakarimasu.

Some people pronounce shichi as though it were written hi-chi; in combination ku may be pronounced  $ky\bar{u}$ .

The most common terms used in measurements and their equivalents, are here inserted for the sake of convenience.

The Japanese foot-rule is called sashi, or mono-sashi, from sasu to point, measure. The ordinary kane-zashi, so called because carpenters' rules are made of kane metal, takes as a unit the shaku, which is equivalent to 11.93 inches or .30303 meter.

 $10 \ bu = 1 \ sun$

 $\sim 10 sun = 1 shaku$

 $\sim 6 shaku=1 ken=2 yards almost$

 $60 \ ken = 1 \ ch\bar{o} \ \nu$

 $36 ch\bar{o} = 1 \tilde{ri} = 2.44 \text{ miles}$

For surfaces the unit is the tsubo,—one ken (six shaku) square.

 $\sqrt{30} \ tsubo=1 \ se \ (se-bu)$

 $10 \ se = 1 \ tan (tam-bu)$

10  $tan = 1 ch\bar{o} (ch\bar{o}-bu) = 2.45 acres$

a An alternative pronunciation for man is ban; but ban is used, not in the exact sense of "ten thousand," but only in an indefinite sense like our "myriad." Notice the familiar expressions ban-zai (sai year) Live forever! Hurrah! semban arigatō, semban go kurō many thanks! Compare also: man-ichi ten thousand to one, i. e., by a bare chance, bamban certainly.

b The kujira-zashi, so called because it was originally made of whale-bone, is longer by one fourth and is used for measuring dry goods. Both the kanezashi and the kujirazashi are now usually made of bamboo,

For capacity the unit is the  $sh\bar{o}$ , equivalent to 1.588 quart or 1.804 liter.

10 shaku (seki) = 1
$$g\bar{o}^a$$
 10 sh $\bar{o}$  = 1 to 10  $g\bar{o}$  = 1 sh $\bar{o}$  10 to = 1 koku

For weight the unit is the mom-me b=.1325 ounce or 3.7565 grams. After multiples of  $j\bar{u}$  and hyaku it is usual to say simply me. One pound avoirdupois is about 120 me.

$$\sim 160 me = 1 kin$$

 $\sim 1000 \text{ mom-me} = 1 \text{ kwan (kwam-me)} = 8\frac{1}{4} \text{ pounds}$

For money the unit is the yen, equal to about 50 American cents.

$$10 \ rin = 1 \ sen \quad 100 \ sen = 1 \ yen$$

For "hour," "minute," "second," the terms are ji, fun,  $by\bar{o}$ .

These terms are all of Chinese origin except tsubo and se, which take the Japanese numerals, thus: hito se, futa se, mi se, etc.

In asking for the number or amount of any of these units, prefix nan, or iku. This iku is ikutsu, which has lost the ending tsu, like the Japanese numerals. But in cases where iku and ichi are liable to be confused, nan is better.

Up to "ten" the Chinese numerals are used almost exclusively with words of Chinese origin. Beyond "ten" they are used also with words of Japanese origin. Thus:  $j\bar{u}$  ichi tsubo,  $j\bar{u}$  ni tsubo, etc. They always precede the nouns which they limit. In some combinations euphonic changes occur.

Ichi (itsu) unites with words beginning with h(f), s(sh), t(ch) and k:

ichi hen becomes ippen one time, once ichi fun ,, ippun ichi sun ,, issun ichi shō ,, isshō ichi tan ,, ittan ichi chō ,, itchō ichi kin ,, ikkin a This  $g\bar{v}$  differs from go five not only in the length of the vowel but also in the sound of the g, which is more nasal in the case of  $g\bar{v}$   $(ng\bar{v})$ .

b Here me is the word for "eye." In this connection it refers to the notches on the scales, and hence means the measure of weight.

But we say: ichi koku (of rice). Ikkoku, or ikkakoku, means "one country."

Jū produces similar changes: jippen, jippun, jissun, jisshō, jittan, jitchō, jikkin.

San (as also man and nan) naturally causes nigori in the succeeding consonants: samben, sampun, sanzun, sandan, sangin. Since both  $sh\bar{o}$  and  $ch\bar{o}$  through nigori become  $j\bar{o}$ , it is customary to distinguish them thus:  $sanj\bar{o}$  for  $san sh\bar{o}$ , but  $san ch\bar{o}$ .

Roku (as also hyaku) coalesces with h (f), as in roppen, roppun.

Hachi is irregular:

hachi hen, but happyaku.

hachi fun.

hassun, hassen, etc.

hasshō, hasshaku, etc.

hattan, hatto.

hatchō.

hachi kin, but hakkakoku eight countries.

If hachi hen, hachi kin, were contracted to happen, hakkin, they could hardly be distinguished from hyappen, hyakkin.

Business men to avoid mistakes generally use nana instead of shichi.

For similar reasons shi is displaced by yo in the following combinations:

yo ban number four.
yo mai (or shi mai) four flat things. (See Ch. XXVI.)

yo dai four vehicles. yo nen four years.

yo do four times, or degrees. yo nin (yo mei) four persons.

 $yoj\bar{o} \ (j\bar{o}=10 \ shaku).$   $yo(n) \ rin.$

yo jo four mats. yon sen (or shi sen). yo yen.

Notice: ichi nichi (jitsu) a whole day, maru ichi nen a whole year, ichi ji for a while, ittan once (tan morning).<sup>a</sup>

Small approximate numbers like our "two or three," "three or four," etc., are expressed asyndetically:

Ni san nen two or three years.

a This last is used only in cases where we employ "once" with the perfect tense as in Ittan shō-chi shita koto wa kesshite i-yakn (wo) itashimasen Having once agreed to a thing, I will never break my promise. Compare ichi ji in Ano hito wa ichi ji (wa) kwai-sha no yaku-in deshita He was at one time an official in the company.

Futa koto mi koto two or three words, a brief speech.

Shi go nin four or five persons.

Nana yatsu no kodomo a child seven or eight years old.

a The words jō-tō, chū-tō, ka-tō (ka being an alternative reading of the character ge) in the sense of "first class," "medium," "low class," are constantly used, with a variety of applications. Recently, however, the officials have changed the names of the classes of railway passengers to itto, nito, santo.

b Dai-myō means literally "great name." This title was given to a feudal lord whose estate yielded him an income of at least 10,000 koku of rice a year. daimyos now belong to the kwa-zoku (nobility). Remember that with man koku suffers nigori, thus: ni mangoku.

c Watakushi no oi ni atarimasu [He] is my nephew. In a sentence like this ni atarimasu has practically the same sense as de arimasu.

d Lit. one life risk life. The subordinate form of naru, natte, is usually added: Isshökemmei ni natte hataraku to work with all one's might.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1. The Japanese calendar has been made to correspond to our Gregorian calendar in every respect except that the Japanese reckon years, not from the birth of Christ, but by periods  $(nen-g\bar{o})$ . It used to be customary to create a new period whenever a great event occurred; but at the time of the Restoration it was decided that henceforth  $neng\bar{o}$  should correspond to the reigns of the Emperors. The first year of the present period, Mei-ji, was 1868. Hence, to find the year of Meiji one must subtract 1867 from the Christian year. The year 1902 thus becomes:

a  $\Lambda$  romantic little rocky island near Yokohama. The e meaning bay, is identical with the e in Edo (bay-gate).

b A place near Yokohama (lit. gate-mound).

c In old Japan such a question could hardly be asked, as people had a superstitious dread of weighing themselves.

d The Tenryugawa rises in Lake Suwa in the province of Shinano and flows through the province of Totomi.

Meiji sanj $\bar{u}$  go nen. The first year of a period is called gwannen; thus the year 1868 is Meiji gwannen.

As a mere matter of interest, we add a list of the periods between 1830 and 1868, together with the years of the Christian era to which their first years correspond:

 Tem-po 1830
 Man-en 1860

 Kō-kwa 1844
 Bun-kyū 1861

 Ka-ei 1848
 Gen-ji 1864

 An-sei 1854
 Kei-ō 1865

When giving a year of the Christian era use the word seireki "western calendar." Thus the year 1888 is called seireki sen happyaku hachi jū hachi nen.

A person's age may be stated by adding sai, another word for "year," to the number. Thus: issai, sansai, hassai, jissai. But in the colloquial it is usual to employ the simple numeral without sai. In stating the age of a child below ten the Japanese numerals are preferred. But in giving the ages of animals sai is commonly used. A horse five years old is called, not itsutsu ni naru uma, but go sai ko. Ko here is the same as the word meaning "child."

2. The names of the months are formed from the Chinese numerals and gwatsu. The reading getsu is less common, except in the case of ichi getsu January. Another name for this month is  $sh\bar{o}$ -gwatsu, from  $sh\bar{o}$  right. (Compare  $sh\bar{o}$ -go noon).

"One month" is ikkagetsu, from ichi kagetsu; "two months," nikagetsu, etc. This ka, which is the same as the ka in ikkakoku, is much used in such enumerations, being placed between the numeral and the noun. It means "a piece" or "unit."

3. In specifying the day of the month, nichi (jitsu) is used with the Chinese numerals, except in those cases where forms like futsuka, mikka, etc., are still available. So the "18th of January" is ichi getsu no  $j\bar{u}$  hachi nichi. Notice that the 14th and 24th are called  $j\bar{u}$  yokka and ni  $j\bar{u}$  yokka. The old name for the first day of the month is tsuitachi, from tsuki moon or month and tatsu rise, because in the old calendar the month began with the new moon. The 1st of January is called gwan-jitsu.

In dates the order is the exact reverse of the English. The "3rd of November, 1852" becomes:  $sen\ happyaku\ go\ j\bar{u}\ ni\ nen\ ju\ ichi\ gwatsu\ mikka,$

We add a table of the days of the month.

 $ichi \ nichi \ (jitsu)$  1st jū roku nichi 16th jū shichi nichi 17th tsuitachi jū hachi nichi 18th futsuka 2nd mikka 3rd jū ku nichi 19th uokka 4th hatsuka 20th itsuka 5th ni jū ichi nichi 21st muika 6th ni jū ninchi 22nd nanuka (nanoka) 7th ni jū sanichi 23rd ni jū yokka 24th  $y\bar{o}ka$  8th ni jū go nichi 25th kokonoka 9th tōka 10th ni jū roku nichi 26th ni jū shichi nichi 27th jū ichi nichi 11th ni jū hachi nichi 28th  $j\bar{u}$  ninchi 12th jū sanichi 13th ni jū ku nichi 29th jū yokka 14th san jū nichi 30th jū go nichi 15th san jū ichi nichi 31st

4. As has been intimated before, the Japanese do not think so much of the days of the week as we do. The names of the week-days all have the suffix  $y\bar{o}-bi$ , from  $y\bar{o}$  (c) light, luminary, and hi day. They are:  $nichi-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $getsu-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $hiva-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $sui-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $moku-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $kin-y\bar{o}bi$ ,  $do-y\bar{o}bi$ . The prefixes mean, respectively, sun, moon, fire, water, wood, metal, earth,—the names of the seven planets  $(shichi-y\bar{o})$ . Final bi is often omitted:  $nichi-y\bar{o}$ ,  $getsu-y\bar{o}$ , etc. "One week" is  $issh\bar{u}$ , from  $sh\bar{u}$  revolution. "Which day?" (of the week) is  $nani\ y\bar{o}bi$ .

5. Hours of the day are indicated by adding ji (time) to the Chinese numerals:  $ichi\ ji$ ,  $ni\ ji$ ,  $san\ ji$ ,  $yo\ ji$ , etc. The word fun (minute) combines with the numerals thus: ippun,  $ni\ fun$ , sampun,  $shi\ fun$ , roppun,  $hachi\ fun$ , jippun.

ichi ji jū go fun sugi a quarter past one.

ichi ji han half past one.

ni ji jū go fun mae a quarter of two.

Nan ji (nandoki) desu ka. What time is it?

Kisha wa nan ji ni demasu ka.

[At] what time does the train leave?

In stating the length of time in hours add kan: ichi ji kan, ni ji kan, yo ji kan, nan ji kan, etc. This kan is the Chinese equivalent of aida interval.

The same idiom may be used in stating the length of time in years, months, or days, thus: roku nen kan (also rokkanen kan), rokkagetsu kan, muika kan, etc. Notice also:

Sanganichi no aida wa doko de mo zōni a wo tabemasu. For three days (after New Year's) zōni is eaten everywhere.

a Dai issei Wir'her'm' tei is Wilhelm I. For dai issei see Ch. XXIX. Tei means "sovereign." "King" is  $k \tau v \bar{v}$  or  $\bar{v}$  (sama). The Emperor of Japan is called ten-shi heaven-son or tenn $\bar{v}$ , from ten- $\bar{v}$  heaven-king. The general term for "emperor" is  $k \tau v \bar{v}$ -tei. In speaking of exalted personages, go tanj $\bar{v}$  in naru is equivalent to o umare nasaru, and o kakure ni naru to o shini nasaru. Notice that with words denoting time the postposition, if needed at all, must be ni. What was said about the distinction between ni and de (p. 20a) applies to places only.

b The name of a bridge in Tokyo. It is a case of jūbako-yomi, shin being the Chinese for "new." At Shimbashi is the terminal station of the railway between Tokyo and Yokohama.

c With suru, wo is commonly omitted; but with the more formal itasu, unless the object is stated, it is better to use wo. Keiko wo may be contracted to keikō.

d The name of a village on the Nakasendō. For the ga see p. 13. Seki means a barrier between two feudal fiefs, a place where travellers in former times had to show their passports, while hara means wilderness. Sekigahara was the scene of a great battle in which Ieyasu, the founder of the last line of shoguns, won a decisive victory over his enemies.

Taikō sama a died, according to (de) the European calendar, in the year 1598. When (toki ni) Taikō died his child (ko no) Hideyori was six years old. The Restoration began in (from) the year 1868. At that time the Emperor was (de irasshaimash'ta) seventeen years old. b At what hour do you usually retire (o yasumi nasaimas' ka)? I usually retire at eleven o'clock. The train for Kobe (Kobe ye iku kisha) leaves at ten o'clock. What time is it now  $(m\bar{o})$ ? It is probably  $(desh\bar{o})$ about (goro) four o'clock. Now (konogoro) the sun rises (deru) at about eight o'clock. The festival of Suitengu is [on] the 5th of January. The festival of Kompira is on the 10th of January. The anniversary of the death of Gongen sama c is the 17th of April. Ieyasu was born in 1542. The festival of the. dead begins on (from) the 13th of the 7th month. The summer vacation of the university continues (is) seventy days. I study German one hour every day. At what hour does your teacher come? He comes [in the] morning at eight o'clock. Nobunaga died at the age of  $\lceil de \rceil$  48 years. This year is the 35th  $\lceil \text{year} \rceil$  of Meiji. What day (of the week) is to-day?

a  $Tai-k\bar{v}$  in ancient times designated a retired kwam-paku (prime minister). It is especially the title of Hideyoshi, who, though a man of low birth, attained to the position of kwampaku.

b Irasshaimashita is a contraction of irassharimashita, as nasaimashita is of nasarimashita and gozaimashita of gozarimashita. As the Emperor was born in 1852, he really was fifteen or sixteen years of age at the time of the Restoration. But the Japanese count the year of one's birth as a whole year and after the next New Year's day say that the child is in his second year or two years old. In speaking of a person's age seventeen years counted in the Japanese fashion is kazoe-doshi de ju shichi (kazoe-ru reckon, toshi year). In other connections, as in answering the question how many years one has been in the country, say de-iri ju shichi nen or ashi-kake ju shichi nen (ashi wo kakeru to straddle). Exactly seventeen years is maru ju shichi nen (maru circle).

c Gon-gen is a Buddhistic word meaning "temporary manifestation," i. e., re-incarnation of Buddha. In Tokyo this title is applied with especial frequency to Ieyasu, who is called specifically tōshō-gongen (tō east, shō illumine).

CHAPTER XXV.

The four arithmetical processes, —addition, subtraction, multiplication and division are called collectively ka-gen- $j\bar{o}$ -jo.

ka = kuwae - ru add.  $j\bar{o} = kake - ru$  multiply.

gen = hiku subtract. jo = waru divide.

The verb yose-ru "bring together" may be substituted for ku-waeru, thus:

21 to 31 wo yoseru to, 52 ni narimasu.

In the multiplication table (ku-ku) a few euphonic changes occur. It is here added, merely for purposes of reference.

Notice the change of san to sabu in sabu roku and compare  $Sabu-r\bar{o}$ , a common personal name (lit. three man). The sound n is often interchangeable with mu and this again with bu.

Fractions are expressed by means of bu portion, which before no is pronounced bun:

sambun no ni two thirds.

hachibun no san three eighths.

Percentage is expressed by the units wari and bu (or shu): ichi wari go bu 15%.

Once, twice, etc., are rendered by means of do, hen, or tabi. In the same sense kicai "turn" is often used, but this is not strictly colloquial.

ichi do, ippen, hito tabi once.

san do, samben, mi tabi three times yo do, shi hen, yo tabi four times.

 $j\bar{u}$  do, jippen, to tabi ten times.

Double, treble, etc., are rendered by the aid of the compound  $s\bar{o}$ -bai, or simply bai.

ni sōbai twice as many (much).

sanzōbai (sambai) three times as many.

hassōbai (hachi bai) eight times as many.

CHAPTER XXVI.

In counting objects it is usual to make use of so-called numeral auxiliaries or numeratives, which designate the nature of the unit.

Hako shichi ko seven boxes.b

This ko, by the way, is an alternative pronunciation of the character read ka in ikkagetsu. Words of this kind are rare in English, but there are analogies in such expressions as "two suits of clothes" or "three head of cattle."

In the colloquial most of the numeratives are of Chinese origin, but there are a few native words still in use:

Kami hito hashira one god, from hashira post.

Hato futa tsugai two pairs of pigeons.

Koya mi mune three shanties, from mune ridge (of roof).

Zashiki yo ma four rooms, from ma space.

Tansu itsu sao five bureaus, from sao pole.c

a As wari is of the nature of an auxiliary, wo is not required.

b Nana hako would be rather "seven boxfuls."

c Japanese bureaus have handles at both ends near the top, arranged so that they may be suspended from a pole and thus easily carried,

Obi mu suji six girdles, from suji line.

Yōfuku nana kumi seven suits of (European) clothes, from kumu to join.

Kimono ya kasane eight suits of (Japanese) clothes, from kasane-ru to lay one over another.

Yoroi kokono soroi nine sets of armor, from sorou to be in order, be a complete set.

Notice that the numeral with its auxiliary takes the same position in a sentence as a simple numeral, that is, it follows its noun. Analogous to futatsu no tokei is hito hashira no kami; but such reversal of the order is allowable only in certain cases. Moreover, in the examples given above the use of the simple numerals hitotsu, futatsu, etc., would not be wrong.

In this and the two following chapters a list of the most common numeratives is given.

1. For objects that are long in proportion to their width—sticks, trees, pencils, documents, needles, teeth, folding fans  $(\bar{o}gi)$ , swords,<sup>a</sup> and the like: hon.

ippon, sambon, shi hon, roppon, hachi hon, jippon, hyappon, nambon, iku hon.

2. For objects that are broad and flat — paper, clothes, rugs, boards, dishes, coins and the like: mai.

ichi mai, sammai, yo mai or shi mai, roku mai, hachi mai, jū mai, hyaku mai, nammai, iku mai.

Note also hammai half a sheet, as in a Japanese book.

3. For animals of all kinds: hiki.

ippiki, sambiki, shi hiki, roppiki, hachi hiki, jippiki, hyappiki, nambiki, iku hiki.

For larger quadrupeds  $t\bar{o}$  (head) may also be used. For birds the specific term is wa (feather).

ichi wa (ippa), samba, shi wa, roppa, hachi wa, jippa, hyappa, namba, iku wa.

There is also a specific term for fishes—bi (tail)—but this is not common in the colloquial and would sound pedantic. In counting fishes mai and hon are often used, according to the shape.

a The specific numerative for swords is furi: katana hito furi, etc.

4. For persons: nin (man).

ichi nin (hitori), ni nin, (futari), san nin, yo nin (yottari), roku nin, hachi nin, jū nin, nan nin, iku nin (ikutari). A rather classical and yet not uncommon synonym is mei (name).

a The wood of the kiri tree is highly prized, being used to make bureaus, clogs, etc.

b The native word for "match" is suri-tsuke-gi (lit. rub-kindle-wood).

c Synonymous with toki. At the end of a clause toki ni or jibun ni is equivalent to "when."

d A now common synonymn for shimmotsu is okuri-mono. Another common term, o miyage, denotes, strictly speaking, a present brought by a person on his return from a journey.

e Naichi-zakkyo was a very familiar word in 1899, when the new treaties went into operation. Nai-chi, or nai-koku, is the opposite of gwai-koku. Compare nai-gwai-jin natives and foreigners.

f Agemasu I give it to you. Ageru may be added to the subordinate form of verbs that denote actions done for the benefit of the person addressed. Shimbun wo youde agemasu [I will] read the newspaper for you.

g Henceforth in the vocabularies subordinate forms of difficult verbs will be indicated in this way. The familiar past tense may then be formed by substituting a for e.

h Compare  $aky\bar{u}do$  (p. 19).

tasukaru, tasukatte be saved, escape with one's life.
tatakau, tatakatte to fight.
tatakai a fight, battle, war.

a From son injury, loss, and suru. Compare zonzuru (p. 48). But "to lose," as in business, is son suru.

b Lit. having caught with hook and line, I came. The verb kuru is used like shimau (p. 52a) as an auxiliary.

c Such inversion of the natural order may be allowed when the clause with kara is not too long. With a negative verb ichi mai mo is analogous to dare mo, nani mo, etc. (Ch. XVII). Motte is the subordinate form of the verb motsu.

d From shi four, to head (of horses) and hiki, stem of hiku to draw. Compare ninimbiki, used of a riksha drawn by two men.

e By adding deshita to a negative verb a negative past tense may be formed. A future may be formed similarly by adding deshō.

CHAPTER XXVII.

5. For places and lots(of ground): sho(place) with ka (Compare ikkagetsu p. 74).

ikkasho, sangasho, shikasho, rokkasho, hakkasho, jikkasho, nangasho.c

For houses, shops, and also temples ken (eaves) is commonly used.

ikken, sangen, shi ken, rokken, hachi ken, jikken, nangen.

a The subordinate form of desu.

b A narrow bridge near Ueno in Tokyo, originally made of three boards. Sakura Sogoro on the occasion when he handed his petition to the Shogun (for which offense he suffered the penalty of crucifixion) hid under this bridge.

c It is better not to say iku-ka-sho. With numeratives that begin with k, iku is to be avoided, for the obvious reason that confusion with ichi is likely to result.

The unit here is not necessarily one building, but rather the building or group of buildings occupied by one household.<sup>a</sup>

6. For ships:  $s\bar{o}$  (boat).

 $iss\bar{o}, sanz\bar{o}, shi\ s\bar{o}, roku\ s\bar{o}, hass\bar{o}, jiss\bar{o}, nanz\bar{o}, iku\ s\bar{o}.$

7. For vehicles: dai (a stand, base). "Four vehicles" is yo dai. Specifically for heavy wagons and coaches, etc.,  $ry\bar{o}$  (pair of wheels) may be used. For rikshas the commonest term is  $ch\bar{o}$  (to hold).

itchō, san chō, shi chō, roku chō, hatchō, nan chō, iku chō.

8. For chairs: kyaku (leg).

ikkyaku, san kyaku, shi kyaku, rokkyaku, hakkyaku, jikkyaku, nan kyaku.

9. For books: satsu(ticket, label, list). issatsu, san satsu, hassatsu, jissatsu, etc.

Rather more classical is kwan (roll), which in composition with numerals is modified like ken. For complete sets of volumes the numerative is bu (department, group).

10. For letters and documents:  $ts\bar{u}$  (= $t\bar{o}ri$  p. 64a).  $itts\bar{u}$ ,  $san\ ts\bar{u}$ ,  $hatts\bar{u}$ ,  $jitts\bar{u}$ , etc.

But most people use hon rather than  $ts\bar{u}$ . One letter may also be designated  $ipp\bar{u}$ , from  $f\bar{u}$  seal.

g Nerareru is the potential form of the verb neru. Neraremasen can't sleep. h Moraitai is the desiderative form of the verb morau and means "should like to receive." Koshiracte moraitai. [I] desire to have made. This use of the subordinate form with moraitai or (more politely) itadakitai is a very common idiom, sot (ōzakenomi); he drinks a shō every day. Please have a whiff (ippuku) of tobacco! I have three pairs of boots; but one pair has become useless (yaku ni tatanaku narimash'ta). Won't you have a cup of toso? He is an extraordinary (taihen na) drinker; in just a little while (chotto no ma ni) he drank ten glasses of beer. He drinks two or three cups of coffee every morning.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Ordinals ( $junjo-s\bar{u}shi$ ) are formed by the prefix dai (c) "order" or by the suffixes ban (c) "number," me (p. 69b) or bamme. Both dai and ban may be used with one and the same numeral, as in dai hyaku ni  $j\bar{u}$  go ban the 125th. With the native numerals me only is used. With the numeral auxiliaries me is the most common.

a When volumes of a book are subdivided, the portions are designated thus: ichi (or ni) no jō first (or second) volume, first part, ichi (or ni) no gō first (or second) volume, second part.

b The general term for "dolls" is nin-gyō, from nin person and kyō form. The term hima or hina-ningyō denotes properly the dolls which are formally arranged and displayed at the girls' festival on the 3rd day of the 3rd month. But even ordinary playing with dolls is called hina-asobi, from asobi to play, while a puppet-show is called ningyō-shibai, from shibai drama.

e National flags and standards are called hata or kok-ki. Nobori are vertically long and are fastened both at the top and on one side. They may be seen at temples and theatres, and are also displayed at the boys' festival on the 5th day of the 5th month.

d Shuppan suru to publish. Shuppan ni naru to be published (of a book).

e To adopt is yōshi ni suru or yōshi ni morau. An adopted daughter may also be called yō-jo.

f Policemen or patrolmen are jun-sa; the police stations on the streets are kō-ban (sho).

g The go-sekku are: the New Year's festival on the 7th of the 1st month; the girls' festival, on the 3rd of the 3rd; the boys' festival, on the 5th of the 5th; the star festival, on the 7th of the 7th; and the chrysanthemum festival, on the 9th of the 9th. See p. 66 c.

a This is often attached to verbs, as in Asu Tökyö ye iku tsumori desu It is [my] intention to go to Tokyo to-morrow. But tsumori often denotes simply one's opinion of one's self: Ano hito wa gakusha na tsumori de orimasu He thinks he is a scholar. Here na is a contraction of naru (originally ni aru) the literary equivalent of de aru. One may also say gakusha no tsumori de oru.

b Yoritomo of the Minamoto family (Gen-ji) conquered the Taira family (Hei ke) about the end of the XII. Century, and was the first shogun in whose family the office became hereditary.

c  $M\bar{o}su$  means "to say," but often, as in this case, it is a mere auxiliary attached to the stem of a verb. It is used principally in the first person when the object of the verb is a person of higher rank or a stranger of the same rank as the speaker. The honorific o may not be omitted in this construction.

In the above it means a section of a long street, often, but not necessarily, marked off by means of prominent cross-streets  $(yoko-ch\bar{o} \text{ or } yoko-machi)$ . These sections may have different names or may be distinguished as  $itch\bar{o}me$ , ni  $ch\bar{o}me$ , etc. Ginza (lit. silver-seat, i. e., mint) is the name of a portion of the principal street of Tokyo.

b This phrase is used when one is first introduced to a person. Hajimemashite would be still more polite than hajimete. O me ni kakaru is the most polite expression for "to meet," (lit. be hung on honorable eyes. Comp. p. 44a).

d The word tsukue applies only to the low native tables.

e "After he gave up the office of shōgun" is rendered shōgun-shoku wo yamete kara. This shoku means "occupation," "office" (in shoku-gyō). But in the colloquial one may say simply shōgun wo yamete kara. Shizuoka is the principal city of the province of Suruga, on the coast between Tokyo and Osaka.

The second shōgun of the Tokugawa line is called (to mōshimas') Hidetada. Jimmu Tennō was (is) the first Emperor of Japan.<sup>a</sup> Takauji is the first shōgun of the Ashikaga line. # THE ADJECTIVE. 3

CHAPTER XXX.

In classical Japanese genuine adjectives are inflected by means of the three terminations ki, ku and shi, as in the following example:

Kono chiisaki ki wa hana mo utsukushiku mi mo amashi. The blossom of this little tree is beautiful and its fruit is sweet.

The attributive form ended in ki; the predicative, in shi. In the colloquial both these terminations have been reduced to i. But shi still appears in yoshi "good," "all right!" and nashib "there is none," while in formal speeches the ending ki is heard The form in ku is now commonly used as an quite often. adverb and is called the adverbial form. But in the example given above utsukushiku is evidently predicative and may properly be called the connective form as contrasted with amashi, which is conclusive, i. e., ends the sentence. Compare: O no nagai saru mo ari o no mijikai no mo aru (p. 14d), where ari is connective and aru is conclusive. Such use of the form in ku would now sound oratorical. In ordinary conversation we should say: Kono chiisai ki wa hana mo utsukushii shi mi mo amai, or, Kono chiisai ki wa hana mo utsukushikute mi mo amai. The classical terminations occur with especial frequency in proverbs.

It has been remarked (pp. 4, 24) that a predicate adjective ending in i needs no copula in familiar discourse, if the sentence is affirmative and in the present tense; and that atta and  $ar\bar{o}$  may be united with the adverbial form of the adjective in compounds like yokatta,  $yokar\bar{o}$ . We now add a paradigm of these and similar inflections produced by combination with forms of aru to be:

a Kei-yō-shi, from kei-yō figure (of speech), metaphor.

b Notice also the peculiar idiom nashi ni in Kane nashi ni wa nani mo dekima-sen One can't do anything without money.

Present yoi is good

Past yokatta was good

Probable, or Future yokarō probably is good, will be good Conditional yokereba a if [it] is good, if [it] should be good

Probable Past yokattarō probably was (might have been) good.

Past Conditional yokattara(ba) if [it] has (had) been good

Alternative yokattari being at times good

Yoi darō, yoi deshō may be substituted for yokarō; yoi nara (ba), for yokereba; yokatta darō, yokatta deshō, for yokatta-rō; yokatta nara(ba), for yokattara(ba).

A concessive form—yokeredo(mo) "though [it] is good"—might have been included in this list, but it is practically obsolete as far as the colloquial is concerned. It is now replaced by yoi keredomo, ii kedo, etc., adding keredomo (p. 8a), keredo, or ke(n)do to the simple present form.

The form yokereba is derived from areba (as also yokeredo from aredo). It may be further contracted to yokerea, yokerya.

O tenki ga yokereba undōkwai wa omoshirokarō.

If the weather is fine, the sports (excursion) will likely be interesting.

O tenki ga yokattara undōkwai wa motto omoshirokattarō.

If the weather had been fine, the sports might have been more interesting.

The past conditional is past only with reference to the verb of the apodosis. Often yokattara is practically synonymous with yokereba.

Kagen ga yokattara kanarazu mairimashō.

If[I] feel well, [I] will surely come.

Alternative forms are used most commonly in pairs, and often with shite, thus:

O tenki wa yokattari warukattari ikkō sadamarimasen.

The weather, being now favorable and again unfavorable, is not at all settled (lit. one direction is not determined).

a One may also say yoku(m)ba, but this inflection cannot be applied to other adjectives except nai and desideratives like tabetai.

Ano hito wa kigen ga yokattari warukattari(shite) chōdo kodomo no yō desu.

Sometimes he is in a good humor and sometimes not,—just like a child.

Atsukattari samukattari shite komarimasu.

There being so much variation of heat and cold, one does not know what to do (lit. is perplexed).

The word nai"not existent" is also inflected like an adjective.

nai is not (none)

nakatta was not (none)

nakarō probably is not (none), will not be, will be none.

. nakereba a if it is not, if it should not be, etc.

nakattarō probably was not, might not have been.

nakattara (ba) if it has (had) not been.

nakattari at times not being

By joining these with the adverbial form of an adjective a paradigm of negative inflections may be formed, thus: yoku nai, yoku nakata, yoku nakarō, yoku nakereba, etc. In the same manner negative verbs may be inflected: wakaranai is not to be understood, wakaranakatta, wakaranakarō, wakaranakereba, etc. But wakaranai darō is more common than wakaranakarō. So also desideratives like tabetai "desire to eat" may be inflected. Details will be given under the head of "The Verb."

In polite discourse, especially at the end of a sentence or principal clause, instead of the plain forms given above, the contracted adverbial form with gozaimasu(p. 24) is required. In this case many adjectives take the honorific o:b

O atsū gozaimasu. It is warm.

O isogashiu gozaimashō. You are probably busy. Observe that naku is not contracted to  $n\bar{o}$  except in certain dialects: it is customary to say not  $n\bar{o}$  gozaimasu but gozaimasen. But tabetai becomes  $tabet\bar{o}$  gozaimasu.

It has already been remarked (p. 24) that there is a tendency to say ii desu, omoshiroi desu, etc., thus avoiding the faa Also naku(m)ba, as in O iya de nakuba If [you] do not dislike [it].

b The honorific o may be prefixed to yoroshikereba also: O yoroshikereba if you like; likewise to yokereba; but, if one wishes to speak politely, in this connection yoroshii is better than yoi. O yō gozaimasu nara(ba) is perfectly polite.

miliarity of the plain adjective on the one hand, and the stiff formality of gozaimasu on the other. But ii deshita is never heard. Yet ii n' deshita is not uncommon. Whatever may be said about the past and present tenses, expressions like ii deshō are indisputably correct. Thus:

Mutsukashii deshō is probably difficult.

Yoku nai deshō is probably not good.

As regards politeness these are intermediate between mutsuka-shikarō and mutsukashiu gozaimashō, yoku nakarō and yō gozaimasumai.

The subordinate form is obtained by adding te to the adverbial form; e. g., yasukute, from yasui, itakute, from itai, omoshirokute, from omoshiroi; so also nakute, wakaranakute, tabetakute. These are often pronounced yasukutte, itakutte, omoshirokutte, etc.

This subordinate form has several uses.

(1.) When one subject has two predicate adjectives the first is subordinated to the second.

Washinton no machi wa hirokute kirei desu.

The streets of Washington are broad and clean.

(2.) A clause with a predicate adjective may be subordinated to another clause. In this case the former describes a circumstance or condition, which is usually at the same time a cause.

Ashi ga itakute deraremasen.

As my feet hurt, I can't go out.

Kurakute ashimoto ga miemasen.

It is so dark that I cannot see where I am going (ashimoto that which is about the feet).

Samukute shiyō ga nai.

It is unbearably cold (lit. being cold, there is no way of doing).

To state the cause explicitly, one must say itai kara, etc. To state the result explicitly, hodo may be added: Kurakute ashimoto ga mienai hodo desu.

(3.) Of two clauses involving a contrast the first may be subordinated to the second.

Shim-mai wa umakute ko-mai wa mazui.

New rice is delicious, [but] old rice is unpalatable.

(4.) When wa is added to the subordinate form it is made emphatic. In most cases it then has a conditional sense and is often followed by a negative word like ikemasen or narimasen or by a verb like komarimasu "[am] perplexed." The te wa is commonly contracted to cha.

Omokucha ikemasen It mustn't be heavy. Nakucha narimasen [I] must have [it].

These forms may also be pronounced omokutcha, nakutcha.

(5.) The addition of mo to the subordinate form gives it a concessive sense.

yasukute mo though it may be cheap.

itakute mo though it may hurt.

ōkute mo (ōku to mo, ōku mo) at the greatest.

sukunakute mo (sukunaku to mo, sukunaku mo) at least.

a This is the usual formula on meeting a friend after a long separation. Frequently only the first word of the sentence is used. For hisashiku we may substitute shibaraku.

b Here also we have a very common phrase. More fully expressed it would be o kokoroyasuku o majiwari (or tsuki-at) wo negaimasu, or o kokoroyasuku shite kudasaru yō ni negaimasu (lit. I desire that you will please do familiarly) I hope we may become well acquainted. Kudasaru to condescend is the verb from which the imperative kudasai is derived (p. 37d). In shite kudasaru yō ni negaimasu we have a still higher degree of politeness than in shite kudasai.

c Fully expressed this would be something like yoroshiku nasatte kudasaru yō ni negaimasu (lit. I desire that you will do favorably) Please deal kindly with me. Nasatte or nastte is the subordinate form of nasaru, the polite equivalent of suru to do, from which the imperative nasai is derived. In Satō san ni yoroshiku negaimasu the word "to say" is understood: Satō san ni yoroshiku itte kudasaru yō ni negaimasu (lit. I desire that you will please speak favorably to Mr. Sato) Please remember me kindly to Mr. Sato. Itte is the subordinate form of iu to say. One may say more briefly, Satō san ni yoroshiku itte kudasai or simply Satō san ni yoroshiku, or, if the circumstances make the meaning plain, yoroshiku negaimasu.

d Hito is often used as here in the sense of character.

e It was fortunate that you were not hurt.

f In this sentence the conditional inflection is used simply in lieu of a connective: It is neither good nor bad.

g Many words, little sense. The original meaning of shina (p. 19) is substance. h This may be translated kaze ga nakute or kaze ga arimasen deshita kara. Best, perhaps, would be kaze ga nai no de, which conveys the idea of cause more distinctly than the first and not so expressly as the second. The Japanese naturally prefer a hazy expression, and kara indicates the relation of cause and effect with a degree of precision not required in such a sentence.

CHAPTER XXXI.

In the classical language the attributive form of the adjective may be used as a noun, a word like hito, mono, kata or  $h\bar{o}$  (c) being understood; e. g., tadashiki righteousness, from tadashi (coll. tadashii). Such a form in ki sometimes occurs in speeches, as in the phrase hanahadashiki ni itatte wa "in an extreme case" (lit. reaching to extreme). Compare yoshi ashi good and evil, i. e., qualities, characteristics.

In the following instances adjectives in the colloquial form are used as substantives:

Atsui samui heat and cold.

a Ashi is contracted from ashishi, the literary equivalent of warui. Excepting ashishi, adjectives whose stems end in shi are inflected thus: yoroshiki, yoroshiku, yoroshi. Notice that in Brinkley's Dictionary adjectives are arranged according to their conclusive forms, but not consistently.

Amai mo karai mo shitte oru.

He is a man of insight (lit. knows both sweet and bitter).

Kane no aru nai mo shiranai de iru.ª

He doesn't know whether he has money or not.

The stem of an adjective may be used as a noun:

taka the amount, from takai high.

ara offal (of fish), from arai coarse. b shiro the white, from shiroi.

kuro the black (of dogs or of the stones used in playing go, a game like checkers).

Notice the expression omoshiro hambun half in jest.

The stem may also occur in compounds.

(1.) It may be united with another adjective:

furu-kusai trite, antiquated, obsolete, from furui old and kusai (lit. malodorous).

hoso-nagai slim, from hosoi slender and nagai long.

usu-gurai dimly lighted, gloomy, from usui thin and ku-rai dark.

(2.) The stem may be combined with the verb sugiru to exceed: taka-sugiru it is too high (dear). It is usual pleonastically to prefix amari, thus:

Amari atsusugimasu it is too hot.

(3.) The stem may enter into combination with a noun (Compare p. 15):

aka-nasu tomato, from akai red and nasu egg-plant kuro-shio the Japan Current, from kuroi black, dark and shio salt, brine, tide, current.

shira-uwo name of a small white fish, from shira=shiro and uwo fish.

usu-cha a drink made of a small quantity of very strong tea (in cha-no-yu).

The drink made by taking a larger quantity of weaker tea is koi cha, not ko-cha.

a One way of making the negative subordinate form of a verb is to add de to a negative form. Thus shiranai de iru corresponds to the positive shitte iru.

b Ara also means "defect": ara wo in to criticise. Ara ga wakarimasen No defect is perceptible.

To this class belong compounds with  $s\bar{o}$  "appearance:" a  $T\bar{o}-s\bar{o}$  desu. It seems far. Compare: Toi  $s\bar{o}$  desu. It is said to be far.  $S\bar{o}$  na (or da)  $s\bar{o}$  desu So it is said (For na compare p. 95a) From yoi and nai are derived the irregular forms  $yosas\bar{o}$  desu it seems good and  $nasas\bar{o}$  desu there seems to be none, or (with an adjective) it does not seem. Notice  $kawai-s\bar{o}$  desu is pitiable or  $kawai-s\bar{o}$  na hito desu is a pitiable case (person), from kawaii lovely.

Chikai yō de taihen tōi desu. It seems near, but is very far.

Mō o mezame ni natta yō desu. He seems now to be awake.

b The points of the compass are here given in the Japanese order. The four points are called collectively tō-zai-nam-boku, from tō, sai, nan, hoku(c).

a Lit. become not existent. With suru a corresponding active verb may be formed: Kyonen kodomo wo san niu naku shimashita Last year [1] lost three children

b From the stem of this verb may be formed such nouns as tsuke-mono pickle, shio-zuke salt pickle, kasu-zuke (kasu the dregs of sake), miso-zuke, etc.

c See p. 92lı

d Here kite wa has a conditional sense. Compare omokute wa, etc. (p. 102).

e Aa simply helps to express doubt and is not to be translated.

g Translate: white as snow (lit. white after the manner of snow).

h Hitori de arukemasen cannot walk alone. From verbs of the first class described on page 10 the potential form may be derived by substituting e-ru or are-ru for the u of the conclusive form, thus: aruke-ru or arukare-ru, from aruku. Verbs of the second class substitute rare-ru for ru: derare-ru, from de-ru.

Because the bath (yu) is too tepid, I wish you would heat it more. Skating seems difficult. She is very clever, it is said. It does not seem cold to-day. That child, both parents being dead (nakunatte), is to be pitied (kawais $\bar{o}$ ). This tai is too dear at (de wa) one yen. The pupils will forget everything (all), because the summer vacation is too long.

CHAPTER XXXII.

An adjective may be derived from a noun by adding rashii. This usually means "having the appearance of," but frequently it denotes a real quality, like our suffixes "ish," "ly," etc.

yakusha-rashii resembling an actor. shosei-rashii resembling a student. otona-rashii resembling an adult.

hontō-rashii sounding like the truth, plausible.

uso-rashiisounding like a lie. $s\bar{o}$ -rashiiapparently so.

baka-rashii foolish, looking like a fool. kodomo-rashii childish, looking like a child.

otoko-rashii manly.

This rashii may even be added to verbs; e. g., kimatta-rashii apparently decided, from kimatta it has been decided. It may be added to the stem of an adjective; e. g., niku-rashii, from nikui detestable, kawai-rashii, from kawaii charming, beloved.

a It may perhaps rain (lit. It may rain?—one cannot know). This ka mo shire-masen, like ka to omoimasu, is much used to round off sentences. In the former the ka is strongly accented.

b Use here wa. Grammatically "the cold" is, at least in English, in a dependent clause, but it is the logical subject.

c Motto taite moraitai. With taku, furo ni hi wo is understood (furo bath). To heat the water is yu wo wakasu (wakasu cause to boil). One may also say furo wo wakasu or furo wo tate-ru.

If there is any difference in the sense, kawai-rashii is more objective than kawaii.

The suffix gamashii also denotes a resemblance, or a quality described by the word to which it is attached:

tanin-gamashii behaving like a stranger, distant.

katte-gamashii apparently inconsiderate, from katte one's own convenience.

sashi-de-gamashii intruding, impertinent. shitte-iru-qamashii pretending to know.

These words are used in a bad sense. Thus tanin-gamashii is an epithet applied to one who really is a relative or was a friend, but acts as though he were not (for ta-nin see p. 50). The word katte-gamashii is a term applied apologetically to one's own conduct:

Amari kattegamashii koto wo mōshiagemasu ga.....

Excuse the presumption, but.....

Kisama sonna shitteirugamashii koto wo iu mon' ja nai.

You have no business to be talking about things you don't understand.

An adjective may be a compound derived from a noun and an adjective:

na-dakai famous, from na name and takai high.

shio-karai salty, from shio salt and karai acrid.

shinjin-bukai pious, from shin-jin piety and fukai deep. aburakkoi fatty, from abura fat and koi dense, thick.

te-arai violent, from te hand and arai rough.

Notice especially the frequent use in compounds of the adjective kusai malodorous, offensive. It indicates that the idea expressed by the word with which it is combined is distasteful or disgusting:

mendō-kusai, mendokusai vexatious, from mendō trouble. inaka-kusai rustic, from inaka country.

jijii-kusai, from jijii old man.

seiyō-kusai (an epithet applied to unwelcome importations from western countries).

Attention has already been called (p. 40 e) to the formation of adjectives from the stem of a verb and yasui (yoi) or nikui (katai):

oboe-yasui (yoi) easy to remember. wakari-yasui (yoi) easy to understand. wakari-nikui hard to understand. kokoroe-qatai hard to perceive, strange.

The following are similarly formed:

machi-dōi long in coming, from matsu to wait and tōi far. mawari-dōi circuitous, from mawaru to go around.

kiki-gurushii disagreeable to hear.

mi-gurushii ugly.

The verbal auxiliary beki (beku, beshi), which occurs frequently in the literary language (e. g., yuku beshi may go, or, should go) is sometimes heard in the colloquial, especially before hazu. This noun hazu ("fitness") often follows a verb, meaning in such a connection "ought."

Kore kara wa attaka ni naru hazu desu.

It ought to grow warmer from this time on.

Kodomo wa oya no iu koto wo kiku beki hazu da.

Children ought to obey their parents (lit. hear what the parents say).

Notice that beki is suffixed to the conclusive form of verbs, not to the stem. But in the case of verbs whose stem ends in e it may be attached either to the stem or to the conclusive form thus: age-beki or ageru beki (classical: agu-beki).

a A contrast with kan-gakusha (Chinese scholar) is implied.

b Equivalent to this is na no aru or  $y\bar{u}$ -mei na from the Chinese  $y\bar{u}$ =aru and mei=na.

c Like ato de (p. 59) this may be used as a conjunction, but only after a past verb. When it is used as a conjunction, ni may be omitted. Both ato de and nochi ni are used also as adverbs. The former is rather more common in the colloquial than the latter.

d With adverbs these are synonymous. But standing alone naru beku (wa) or naru dake means "if at all possible," while dekiru dake means "as much as possible." Naru beku (dake) mairimashō. Dekiru dake itashimashō.

That girl is like an adult.  $Kw\bar{o}b\bar{o}\ Daishi$  was a very famous Buddhist priest.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A great many words that are really substantives are used as adjectives. In the attributive position they take the suffix na, a contraction of naru (ni aru=de aru); in the predicative position they take da, desu, de gozaimasu (See p. 34c). The particles ni and de may also be affixed. The form with ni is a Either: a famous university professor, or, a professor of a famous university.

b This no is equivalent to koto.

c The Mon-to (mon gate, i, e., school, to followers) sect is commonly called Shin (truth) sect. Like Protestant Christians, it emphasizes salvation by faith rather than by works. Its founder was Shinran Shonin. See Murray's Hand-book, List of Celebrated Personages. In this sentence hō side with shinjinbukai gives the sense of comparatively pious,—pious as compared with other sects.

d Founded by Kwobo Daishi, who spent his last days there.

adverbial; that with de corresponds to the subordinate form.

To this class belong many words ending in ka, such as:

akiraka na clear, evident.

nigiyaka na thronged, bustling, lively.

shizuka na quiet, calm, slow.

The stems of a few adjectives in i are combined with na (ni, de, desu) in the same manner:

attaka na warm, from attakai.

komaka na fine, minute, from komakai.

yawaraka na soft, tender, from yawarakai.

makka na deep red, from makkai (ma real, akai red).

ōki na great, from ōkii.

chiisa na small, from chiisai.

okashi na ridiculous, from okashii.

But it is to be observed that the last three are not combined with ni, de, desu, except in the case of the adverb  $\bar{o}ki$  ni greatly, very. The regular inflections of the forms in i are used instead.

Other words of native origin are likewise made to serve as adjectives:

baka na foolish.

iya na disagreeable.

sakan na flourishing, prosperous.

suki na agreeable, favorite.

mono-zuki na curious, meddlesome.

Most of the adjectives of this class are compounds derived from the Chinese:

chō-hō na convenient, useful, valuable.

kek-kō na grand, splendid, capital.

nyū-wa na gentle, amiable.

ri-kō na clever, smart.

shikkei na disrespectful, rude.

shin-setsu na kind, careful.

 $sh\bar{o}$ -jiki na honest, artless.

fu-shōjiki na dishonest.

tai-sō na large, magnificent.

taku-san na many.

zan-nen na regrettable,

Simple Chinese words may also be used in this way:

hen na strange, peculiar, dubious.

myō na strange, wonderful, admirable.

To the same class belong  $y\bar{o}$  na (Compare  $kay\bar{o}$  na, etc., p. 39):

Anata no yō na hito a person like you.

Instead of no  $y\bar{o}$  na one may say mita  $y\bar{o}$  na (mi-ru see), often contracted to mitai na:

Bōzu (wo) mita yō na hito a man looking like a priest.

Kuma (wo) mitai na otoko a fellow looking like a bear. Observe also sō na, which is added to the stems of adjectives and verbs:

Kashiko-sō na (rikō-sō na)hito a clever-looking person.

Ame ga furi-sō desu. It seems to be raining.

Ame ga furi-sō na mon' desu. We shall likely have rain.

Deki-sō na mon' desu. It seems practicable.

The effect of adding mon' in the last two sentences is to bring out the subjective aspect of the idea, suggesting the hope that it will rain or that the plan may be accomplished.

a Like our English word "fearful," hazukashii may be either objective (dreadful, shameful) or subjective (afraid, ashamed). But, while in English the context makes it plain which sense is intended, the Japanese seem to be hardly aware of the distinction.

b This properly means sitting in Japanese fashion. "To sit on a chair" is isu ni koshi wo kake-ru (p. 58). To unbend the limbs and stretch them out on the floor as foreigners generally do is hiza wo kuzusu (hiza knee).

b Notice the polite form of dekimashō. One may even hear o ari nasaru for aru. c The daimyō of Kaga, a province on the coast of the Sea of Japan, held a fief which yielded annually an income of more than a million koku of rice.

d Kame-ido "tortoise-well" is the site of a famous shrine in honor of Sugawara Michizane in Tokyo.

e Translate  $rik\bar{o}$  na  $y\bar{o}$  desu or  $rik\bar{o}$ -s $\bar{o}$  desu. S $\bar{o}$  in the sense of "appearance" is immediately affixed to adjectives of the class described in this chapter; riko na (da) s $\bar{o}$  desu would mean: "He is said to be clever."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Many adjectives are formed by means of the particle no:

migi no the right.

ue no the upper.

shita no the lower.

tsugi no the next (kono tsugi no next to this).

makoto no true.

moto no original.

mukashi no ancient.

nama no raw, uncooked.

nami no common, ordinary.

atari-mae no usual, ordinary.

Adjectival expressions denoting time, place or material, formed by adding no to substantives, are especially numerous:

konogoro no recent.

asoko no yonder.

Nihon no Japanese.

Amerika no American.a

ki no wooden.

kane no metallic.

The stems of common adjectives are occasionally used with the postposition no:

Aka no meshi (go zen) rice cooked with red beans.

Shiro no kinu-ito white silk thread.

The stems of verbs may be turned into adjectives in the same way. Notice especially compounds with tate.

owari no, shimai no the last.

kane-mochi no rich.

ki-tate no just arrived, from kuru to come.

kumi-tate no fresh (of water), from kumu to draw (water). taki-tate no fresh (of cooked rice), from taku to cook (rice). umi-tate no fresh (of eggs), from umu to lay.

a In some connections the no may be omitted, as in Nihon seifu the Japanese Government, Doitsu tei the German Emperor (but Doitsu no tenshi).

b Observe also mizu shirazu no tanin a stranger whom I never saw and don't know.

Technical adjectives like "scientific," "botanical," etc., are formed by the addition of  $j\bar{o}$  (c) = ue above, i. e., concerning (compare the German  $\bar{u}ber$ ). For example,  $gakumon-j\bar{o}$  means what pertains to learning:

Gakumonjō kara in naraba to speak scientifically.

gakumonjō no scientific.

 $shoku-butsu-gaku-j\bar{o}$  no botanical (shoku=ue-ru, butsu thing) dō-butsu-gaku-jō no zoölogical.

i-gaku-jō no medical.

Most of the words which with no form adjectives, as described above, may be used as nouns:

Watakushi wa niku no nama wo konomimusen.a

I do not like raw meat.

Kanemochi wa shiwai. The rich are stingy.

The adverbial form, the subordinate form and the predicative form are derived by adding ni, de and da (desu), respectively.

With some words either no or na may be used:

hadaka no or hadaka na naked.

kanemochi no or kanemochi na rich.

wazuka no or wazuka na little, trifling.

a  $Fujiy\bar{n}$  is commonly pronounced  $fuj\bar{n}$ . The word  $jiy\bar{n}$  in the Japanese mind generally signifies the possession of ample means, and  $fujiy\bar{n}$ , accordingly, means the lack of facilities or conveniences.

CHAPTER XXXV.

As has been intimated previously (pp. 6, 13), the functions of an adjective may be performed by short clauses, such as  $ya-ma\ ga\ \bar{o}i$  mountainous,  $kuchi\ ga\ warui$  sareastic, etc., which in the attributive position become  $yama\ no\ \bar{o}i$ ,  $kuchi\ no\ warui$ , etc. Such expressions are very common in Japanese:

ishi no ōi stony. machigai no ōi inaccurate (opp. nai). jin-kō no ōi populous (opp. sukunai). kao (ki-ryō) no ii beautiful (opp. warui). shiawase no ii (or shiawase na) fortunate " un no ii lucky ,, ben, benzetsu no ii eloquent ,, ben-ri no ii (or benri na) convenient, useful tsu-go no ii convenient, suitable ,, yō-jin no ii cautious " kon-jō no ii good-natured i-ji no warui ill-natured, obstinate gen-ki no ii (or genki na) vigorous (opp. nai). ashi no hayai swift (of an animal). nagare no hayai ,, (of a river). ki no hayai prompt, sensitive. ki no noroi phlegmatic (noroi sluggish). ki no nagai patient. ki no mijikai irritable. ki no tsuyoi determined to win, courageous. ki no yowai easily yielding, cowardly (yowai weak).

a The polite term to be used here is agaru. But if a common word is used, it must be iku, not kuru. Foreigners often puzzle the Japanese by using kuru in such cases, ki no ōkii valiant, magnanimous. ki no chiisai timid, pusillanimous. sei no takai tall (opp. hikui). kiri no fukai foggy (kiri fog). yoku no fukai avarieious (opp. nai). me no ckikai near-sighted. mimi no tōi deaf.

So also instead of na-dakai (p. 110), one may say na no takai; instead of shinjin-bukai, shinjin no fukai.

The opposites of some of the expressions given above may be formed by means of fu (bu) or mu-negative prefixes derived from the Chinese:

fu-shiawase na unfortunate.

fu-un na unlucky.

fu-benri na inconvenient.a

fu-tsugō na inconvenient, improper, wrong.

bu-kiryō (fu-kiryō) na homely.

bu-yōjin (fu-yōjin) na careless, unsafe.

mu-yoku na unselfish.

Compare fu-shōjiki na dishonest (p. 114), fu-shinsetsu na unkind, bu-rei na impolite (p. 33), mu-byō na healthy. b

Vocabulary.

funa a fish resembling a carp. hatake a plot of cultivated hakama loose trousers, divided skirt. c ground, field, garden.d ina rock.

a "Inconvenient" is more commonly fu-ben na. But fu-ben na (different character) might also mean "not eloquent," though the more common word is totsuben na from totsu (c) to stammer.

b From yo need (in iri-yo) is derived fu-yo or mu-yo unnecessary. The latter also serves as a sort of negative imperative, as in the notice posted up in the Hongwanji Temple in Tokyo: Hiru-ne muyō Midday naps forbidden! Another negative prefix, mi, means "not yet": mi-juku not yet ripe. Compare fu-shinja unbeliever and mi-shinja one not yet a believer.

c Worn by gentleman in full dress. There are special names for certain varieties, such as uma-nori-bakama used formerly by samurai when riding on horseback, naga-bakama the trailing kind used at court, etc. The hakama now in vogue among school-girls are simply plaited skirts.

a Translate: after recovering somewhat (p. 96c).

b The idiom to in mono wa corresponds to our article "the."

c We should say: "the government has erected." The Japanese idiom is: "on the part of the government [they] have erected." When speaking of what is done by societies, corporations, etc., this is the usual construction.

d Imperative from yaru to send: fune two yaru to move a ship forward. In Japanese, quotations are usually given in the form of direct discourse, the dependence of the phrase on the principal verb being denoted simply by the particle to. In the case of imperatives a phrase may be changed into indirect discourse by the use of yō ni: shizuka ni fune two yaru yō ni iitsukemashita (comp. p. 104bc). A polite command quoted by the person to whom it was addressed is changed into the impolite form: Dete koi to mōshimashita He said I should come out.

g Translate: "for working." When the postposition tame is added to verbs, no is not required.

The maidservant through carelessness (being careless) started a conflagration. She is homely, but her character is good (hito ga ii). The Bridge of Seta is a very famous bridge.<sup>a</sup>

CHAPTER XXXVI.

In the chapter on relative pronouns (p. 53) it has been observed that in Japanese a verb may modify a noun like an adjective. It follows that many English adjectives are represented in Japanese by verbal expressions:

deki-ru possible, feasible (opp. dekinai). b namake-ru, namakete iru lazy.

wakaru intelligent.

ben-kyō suru (shite iru) diligent (opp. fu-benkyō na).

Expressions like gaku-mon ga aru may perform the office of an attributive adjective by changing the ga to no  $\circ$  (Compare the previous chapter):

kagiri no aru limited, from kagiri limit.

tsumi no aru guilty, from tsumi crime, sin.

sai no aru talented, from sai ability.

jim-bō no aru popular, from jim-bō popularity.

These may be turned into their opposites by substituting nai for aru.

Observe also the following combinations:

kusuri ni naru curative, nutritions.

tame ni naru beneficial, advantageous.

doku ni naru poisonous, noxious, from doku (c) poison.

gai ni naru injurious, from gai injury.

a A bridge over the Lake of \overline{O}mi at the point where it empties its waters into the river called (at the lower end of its course) Yodogawa.

b With the adverb yoku, dekiru also means "capable": yoku dekiru hito an able man, ongaku no yoku dekiru hito a man well versed in music, a capable musician. But yoku dekite iru means "well made" (of a thing).

c The no is omitted in some cases, thus: tai-mō aru hito an ambitious person, fumbetsu aru hito a discreet person, gi-ri aru kyōdai a step-brother or brother in law, from gi-ri right, obligation, me ni tatsu (medatsu) conspicuous.

uaku ni tatsu useful.

Most of the verbs that serve as adjectives, if denoting a condition, are used in the past tense when attributive, and in the subordinate form with i-ru or oru when predicative (p. 89b):

aita vacant, from aku open (intr.).

hiraketa civilized, from hirake-ru be opened.

futotta fleshy, stout, from futoru become stout.

yaseta lean, emaciated, from yase-ru become lean.

ikita live, alive, from iki-ru survive.

shinda dead, from shinu die.a

kawatta different, from kawaru be changed.

kumotta cloudy, from kumoru be clouded.

shareta stylish, witty, from share-ru be elegant.

sorotta complete, from sorou be uniform.

yogoreta dirty, from yogore-ru be soiled.

iki-sugita conceited, from iku go and sugi-ru exceed.

komi-itta complicated, from komu be crowded, and iru enter.

iri-kunda complicated, from iru enter and kumu knit together.

ochi-tsuita calm, composed, sane, from ochi-ru fall and tsuku arrive.

wakari-kitta obvious, from wakaru and kiru cut, finish.

ippai haitta full, from ippai (p. 90c) and hairu enter. ki no kiita smart, from ki spirit and kiku be efficacious.c

nen no itta thoughtful, painstaking, from nen thought, attention and iru enter.

assari shita plain, simple.

hakkiri shita clear, distinct.

shikkari shita substantial, trustworthy.d

sube-sube shita smooth, slippery, from suberu slide.

a Shinde iru may be used only of persons or animals which are in the presence of the speaker. In other cases "he is dead" must be translated shinimashita.

b Komiitta is rather more common than irikunda.

c Compare: Kusuri ga sugu kikimashita. The medicine acted immediately. Kono pompu wa kikanaku narimashita. This pump doesn't work any more.

d The beginner may be puzzled by the similarity between hakkiri to distinctly, shikkari to substantially, shikiri ni persistently, sukkari entirely, shakkuri hiccough, etc.

The predicative forms are aite iru(oru), ki ga kiite iru(oru), etc. But some expressions of this class cannot be used predicatively:

tai shita great, important, serious.

tonda surprising, extraordinary, great, from tobu, fly, spring.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

A substantive may be formed from any adjective or adjectival expression by adding the particle no:

Chiisai no ga nakereba ōkii no wo kaimashō.

If you have no small one, I will buy a large one, or,

If you have no small ones, I will buy large ones.

To such substantival forms the particles wa, ga, mo, no, ni, wo, de, etc., may be added. An adjective formed by means of no, like  $hidari\ no$  (p. 119), may without an additional no take these particles and be treated as a substantive. Thus:  $yoroshii\ no\ wa$ ,  $suki\ na\ no\ wa$ ,  $machigai\ no\ \bar{o}i\ no\ wa$ ,  $doku\ ni\ naru\ no\ wa$ , but  $nama\ no\ wa$ . No wa may be contracted to  $n\bar{a}$ .

a Instead of aita heya, one may also say aki-ma.

b The common expression, Are wa nakanaka shikkari-mono desu has a rather slangy flavor.

No no occurs in Chiisai no no koto desu I mean the small one. These substantival forms may denote a concrete object, the no being equivalent to mono, especially before da, desu, etc.

Taihen takai no desu. It is a very expensive article. When a contrast is involved,  $h\bar{o}$  side is substituted for no:

Kore wa takai hō desu. This is the more expensive.

Before da, desu, etc., no is usually contracted:

Taihen takai n' desu. It's a very expensive one.

Takain' ja( =de wa) nain' desu It's not an expensive one.

Taisō rippa na n' desu. It's a very fine one.

Often there is no difference in the sense between a simple predicate adjective and the adjective followed by n'da(n'desu), which simply serves to round off the sentence. Thus there is no appreciable difference between  $M\bar{o}$  ii and  $M\bar{o}$  ii n' da(desu) That'll do (polite:  $M\bar{o}$  yoroshiu gozaimasu).

In many cases the substantival forms are to be translated by means of abstract nouns:

Samui no wa ii ga atsui no ni wa komarimasu.

[I] don't mind the cold, but find the heat oppressive.

The particle ni following a substantivized adjective gives it a concessive sense, unless the particle is directly dependent on the verb:

Samui no ni itsu mo no tōri sampo shite imasu.

In spite of the cold, he is taking a walk, as usual.

Kodomo no rikō na no ni odorokimashita.

[1] was astonished at the eleverness of the child. a

The no may be omited: samui ni, rikō na ni.

The particle de following a substantivized adjective may indicate a cause or reason (p. 104h).

Kyō wa amari samui no de sampo ni dekakemasen.

Since it is too cold to-day, I shall not go out for a walk. By saying samui to iu no de the speaker may avoid asserting explicitly that it is really too cold to take a walk. Compare:

Samui kara to itte sampo ni dekakemasen.

Pleading that it is too cold, he does not go out for a walk.

a The ni in rikō na no ni odorokimashita and in atsui no ni komarimasu is probably related to the ni used to denote the agent with a passive verb, as in Sensei ni (or kara) shikarareta was scolded by the teacher (shikaru to scold).

The de does not indicate a cause in a sentence like:

Yasui no de yoroshii. A cheap one will do (p. 117h). The following idiom must be accepted without explanation:

Atsui no atsuku nai no 'tte (=to itte) yakesō deshita.

Talk about heat! It seemed as if I were burning.

Itai no itaku nai no 'tte shinu ka to omotta.

I was in such pain—I thought I was dying.

yowaru be weak, debilitated.

a "To perspire," the subject being understood, is ase ga deru; with a subject, ase wo dasu or ase wo kaku.

b From shiba grass and i-ru to sit. Theatrical performances used to be held in the open air and actors were called kawara-kojiki, from kawara (kawa, hara) dry river bed and kojiki beggar.

c From this are derived such words as gin-zaiku (shirokane-zaiku) silver-ware, zōge-zaiku ivory-ware, urushi-zaiku lacquered ware, etc.

a In a reply the verb of a question is repeated: O wakari deshita ka. Wakarimashita. Did you understand? Yes. Expressions like hei, hai, sayō, sayō de gozaimasu, so desu ne, etc., may precede the reply, but are really noncommittal (p. 17h). But sō desu implies very definite assent.

nano de = as hecoure CHAPTER XXXVIII.

There are no inflections corresponding to our degrees of comparison.

The comparative degree d may be expressed by means of such words as motto, mō sukoshi, mō chitto, mō isso (sō layer), nao, nao-sara, etc.

Motto yoroshii no wa gozaimasen ka.

Have you no better ones?

Sore mo ii ga are wa nao ii.

This will do, but that is still better.

a The word  $hak\bar{v}$  is the plain or familiar future of haku. It is not polite, being used in speaking to a servant.

b Motto atsui. For the comparative degree see the following chapter.

c In this case we have a contrast, not of predicates, but of subjects and must, accordingly, use ga, not wa. If willing to accept the tea, one may say: Ippai chōdai itashimasu; if not, Dōzo, o kamai kudasaru na.

d Hikaku-kyū, from hi-kaku comparision and kyū degree. The superlative is saijō-kyū (sai = mottomo,  $j\bar{o} = ue$ ).

Sometimes the word  $h\bar{o}$  side conveys the idea of comparison: Dochira ga o ki ni irimasu ka; nagai  $h\bar{o}$  desu ka, mijikai  $h\bar{o}$  desu ka.

Which do you like better, the longer or the shorter? Ikusa no nai hō qa ii. It is better not to have war.

If the object which serves as the standard of comparison is stated, as when we use "than," the adjective does not require any modifier to indicate the comparative degree. "Than" is to be rendered by yori, yori mo, or yori wa. This yori is the literary equivalent of kara "from" (Compare the Latin ablative as used with comparatives):

Chōsen wa Itaria yori ōkii (hiroi).

Korea is larger than Italy.

Watakushi no zaisan wa ano hito no yori mo sukunai.

My property is less than his.

Anata wa ano hito yori mo kanji wo yokei go zonji de gozaimasu. You know more characters than he.

In the last example yo-kei is an adverb meaning "in excess." Notice: Nani yori ii. [It] is better than any [other]. Nothing could be better (for nani see p. 47). One may also say: Sore wa nani yori desu.

When there is a choice between two evils, mashi, from masu to increase, may be used:

Kono sake wa warui keredomo, mizu yori wa mashi desu. This sake is bad, but still preferable to water.

Isso (no koto) shinda hō ga mashi desu.

It were better to die.

No sign of the comparative is required in such sentences as: Dandan (oioi, masumasu) ōkiku narimasu.

[It] is gradually growing larger.

Dochira ga yō gozaimasu ka. Which is better?

"The more the better" and similar expressions may be translated by the use of hodo following the adjective or verb:

Oi hodo yoroshii. The more the better.

Ano musume wa mireba, miru hodo kirei desu.

The more I look at that girl, the prettier she seems. (lit. If I look at that girl, to the degree that I look she is pretty).

The superlative is expressed by means of ichi-ban before the adjective (classical: mottomo). Notice also other idioms:

Himaraya-san wa sekai-jū de a ichiban takai yama desu. The Himalayas are the highest mountains in the world.

Nihon-ichi no kosui the largest lake in Japan.

Tōkyō-jū de no bijin the most beautiful woman in Tokyō. Kwantō-kitte nob kanemochi the richest man in Kwantō.

"Most," "mostly" is to be rendered by the adverbs tai-gai, tai-tei, ō-kata, ōku wa, or by the adjectival expressions taigai no, taitei no.

THE VERB. a

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1. The Japanese verb differs in many respects from the English.

(1.) There are no inflections to distinguish number or person. Both must be determined from the context. Ordinarily pronouns are used only when perspicuity requires them (p. 27). But in polite conversation the first and second persons are often plainly indicated by the nature of the verb or auxiliary used, a humble verb like itasu being used only in the first (or third) person, while the corresponding honorific verb nasaru is used only in the second (or third) person.

(2.) The Japanese language having no negative adverb corresponding to "not," negation is expressed by special inflections.

(3.) Peculiar to the Japanese verb are the subordinative form<sup>b</sup> ending in te (negative zu), the alternative form<sup>c</sup> in tari (dari), and the desiderative form in tai.

(4.) The use of the passive is much more limited than in English. It may not be used except when the subject is a living thing.

(5.) By means of certain terminations derivative verbs may be formed. There are potential forms indicating ability or possibility, and also causative forms.

(6.) There is nothing corresponding to our infinitive, which is variously rendered. "To eat" is taberu koto wa or taberu no wa. "Go to see" is mi ni iku. Verbs are named by their present form.

a Dō-shi, from dō (c) to move, act.

b This may be a clumsy word, but its meaning is plain. The other terms proposed, "participle" (Aston) and "gerund" (Chamberlain), are not calculated to enlighten a beginner. The subordinative is not an adjective like a participle; much less is it a "past" participle, for it may also indicate an act simultaneous with that of the principal verb. The subordinative is not a noun like a gerund. Moreover the Latin gerund never indicates an act completed with reference to the principal verb, while the subordinative is never future with reference to the principal word of the sentence.

c Called also "frequentative" in other grammars.

2. There are two classes of verbs. In the first the stem remains unchanged; in the second the final vowel of the stem (p. 10) undergoes changes in conjugation. There are also a few irregular verbs.

Stems of verbs of the first class end in c or i; those of the second class end always in i, which in conjugation may be changed to a, e or u.

To derive the stem from the present form in the case of verbs ending in e-ru or i-ru, like tabe-ru eat, mi-ru see, drop ru. In the case of verbs of the second class, like kau buy, substitute i for  $u:kai.^a$  One must be careful not to mistake the verbs described in Ch. XLVIII., which, ending in eru and iru, apparently belong to the first class, but really belong to the second, like shaberu chatter, hairu enter, whose stems are shaberi, hairi. A few verbs have forms of both classes; like aki-ru or aku be surfeited, kari-ru or karu borrow, tari-ru or taru be enough. Distinguish further:

kae-ruexchange.kaeru (kaeri) return.i-rube, dwell.iru (iri) enter, be needed.he-rupass through.heru (heri) decrease (intr.).ne-rusoften, train.

3. Stems of verbs may be used as substantives (Ch. LXV.). It must be remembered that in polite conversation with one's equals or superiors be the plain forms of the conjugations now to be studied are not used when the verb occupies an important position (pp. 10, 55d). Ordinarily politeness requires that masu be added to the stem. In the second (or third) person the honorific o may be prefixed and nasaru (nasaimasu) or ni naru (narimasu) added: o kaki nasaimashita (ni nari-

a In the cases of verbs ending in su and tsu the stems end respectively in shi and chi, thus: machi, from matsu wait; hanashi, from hanasu speak.

b Servants in the house of a friend, clerks in a store, employees in a hotel, etc., are to be addressed politely. Even in speaking to one's own servants, riksha-men, coolies, etc., the tendency is to soften the forms of speech. The plain forms seem destined, like the German du, to become characteristic of conversation among intimates.

mashita) you (or he) wrote. Similary itasu<sup>a</sup> or mōsu may be used with the stem to denote the first person when the act affects other persons: o susume itashimashita I exhorted, o ai mōshimashita I met.

But in speaking to intimate friends or to inferiors these embellishments may be dispensed with. Men are more free in this respect than women. In monologues, proverbs, etc., the plain forms only are used (See also p. 126d).

4. The tenses of verbs of the first class are inflected thus:

Present tabe-ru eatb mi-ru see

Past tabe-ta ate, have eaten mita saw, have seen

Future or Probable  $tabe-y\bar{o}$  will eat  $mi-y\bar{o}$  will see

Probable Past tabeta- $r\bar{o}$  probably ate, mita- $r\bar{o}$  probably saw, might have eaten might have seen

5. A few explanations concerning the uses of these tenses may be helpful.

(1.) The present is used (a) in general statements, in which case it may be rendered "is wont to," etc.; (b) instead of the future when one means to speak of an event as certain to occur; (c) instead of the past in narratives (the historical present) and in dependent clauses (p. 88e).

(2.) The past is to be translated as a pluperfect in such phrases as meshi wo tabeta ato de (nochi ni) after he had eaten. It sometimes stands for our present: arimashita there it is (when one has been looking for a thing), kimashita there he comes. This is especially the case when the present denotes a process:

Sugu ni dekimasu. It will soon be done.

Mō dekimashita. It is now done.

(3.) Taberu darō ( $desh\bar{o}$ ) and tabeta  $dar\bar{o}$  ( $desh\bar{o}$ ) are common periphrastic forms, used chiefly in the third person. Tabe-

a What is here said about the use of itasu with the stems of verbs does not apply necessarily to its more common use with Chinese compounds: ben-kyō itash-mashita I (or he) studied.

b For brevity's sake the first person only is given in the translation. The verb taberu is properly transitive and requires an object. In the first (or third) person it is a polite word; but in the second (or third) agaru or meshiagaru is better.

 $y\bar{o}$  is future rather than probable, and is used only in the first person, except in questions or dependent clauses :

Ano seiyōjin wa sashimi wo tabeyō ka.

[Do you think] that European would eat sashimi?

To the future or probable forms such adverbs as  $\bar{o}$ -kata or ta-bun "probably" may be added. Often to omou is added:

Kane wo ginkō ye azukeyō to omoimasu.

I will deposit my money in the bank.

Notice that in dependent clauses the plain forms without such auxiliaries as masu, etc., may be used even in polite conversation if the principal verb is polite.

6. In classical Japanese the attributive termination of verbs which in colloquial end in e-ru is uru, and the conclusive is u, thus: akuru, aku from ake-ru to open. Forms in uru are heard not infrequently:

Akuru hi gakkō wo yasumimashita.

The next day (lit. opening day) I stayed away from school.

a The English word "moxa" is derived from the Japanese mogusa, which designates a preparation of the dried and pulverized leaves of the yomogi, a species of Artemisia. Physicians of the old school (kam-pō-i Chinese-method-physician) apply small portions of mogusa to the skin and then set fire to it. This sort of cautery is called kyū.

b It may be neccessary to remind the student once more that the use of a verb in its simple form as a final predicate is permissible only in conversation between those who are on terms of intimacy. But in the following exercises it may be well to use them for the sake of practice.

a For mita bakari de wa naku one may substitute mita no wa mochiron no koto (mochi-ron without dispute, of course). The latter is somewhat supercilious. ...bakari de wa naku...mo = not only—but also—.

b May be said to one who does not work, hoping to get rich through some lucky accident.

c A proverb apropos when one has been treated to an exaggerated story. For ja, uma may be substituted.

d Dekite iru or dekita (in the next sentence) corresponds to the English " is made of." For de one may substitute kara. In dekite iru the second i is almost silent: dekiteru.

e The difference between wo deru and kara deru (dete kuru) is slight, as between the English "leave" and "come out of."

f Said when one has been called: What is it?

g The uguisu is usually associated with plum-blossoms in art and poetry.

h No one was hurt. Comp. kega (wo) suru to hurt one's self, kega-nin an injured person.

i Or, de-yō ga osoi (p. 16a).

The riksha-man appearing (miete) to be very tired (that he was very tired), went to bed early. Why did you get up so late? To-morrow (wa) I will get up early, as I am going on a journey (tabi ni deru). Who put this into the bookcase? This is not to be put into the bookcase; it is to be put up (agete oku) on the bookshelf. I will put the bedding a into the closet presently. The foreigners living (iru) in Japan now number about (hodo da) 10,000, it is said. In this cage there were three birds until recently (konaida made). Recently 2,000 houses were burned in Tōkyō, it is said. Where did the fire originate (was the origin of the fire)? It started (deta) from Oyster Shell Street ( $Kakigarach\bar{o}$ ), it is said. That (sono) region, is often (yoku) burned, isn't it (ne)? Have you ever seen a Japanese monkey? Yes, I have seen two or three. The flowers which you put [into the vase] immediately spoiled (ikenaku natta). The Japanese usually go to bed early. This is made of tortoise-shell. Breakfast is probably ready. The maidservant went out (soto ye) some time ago (sakki). He is a very forgetful person (a person who forgets things well).b Japanese often apply the moxa. To whom did you (kimi) entrust the money? On New Year's Eve (ōmisoka no yoru) in (of) 1874 I saw the burning (yake-ru no wo) of the temple called Zōjōji.c The plectrum of a samisen is usually made of ivory.

b This may be translated yoku mono-wasure wo surn hito. If the sense is that he forgets not facts, but things, such as umbrellas, etc., (wasure-mono), it must be wasure-mono wo surn hito. Compare mono-morai and morai-mono, etc., p. 16.

c A temple with mausolea of some of the shoguns in Shiba, Tokyo.

1. In ordinary conversation periphrastic conditional forms like tabern nara(ba) are rather more common than tabereba etc.<sup>a</sup> But tabetara(ba) is not so often displaced by tabeta naraba. Another substitute for these forms is taberu to. Notice that to is used only with the present tense. Moshi or moshi mo also may be prefixed to a conditional clause.

(1.) For the use of the conditional forms compare p. 99. It is sometimes a matter of indifference whether tabereba or tabetara ba) be used. In some cases the past conditional occurs where we should expect the other form:

Watakushi wa yoru yokei tabereba (tabetara) neraremasen.

If I eat too much in the evening, I cannot sleep.

Taikutsu shitara hon wo yomimashō.

If time hangs heavy (lit. tedium have done), we shall read.

O ai nas'ttara sō itte oite kudasai.

If you meet him, please tell him so.

Go zen ga dekitara sugu ni tabemashō.

If dinner is ready, I will eat at once.

In the last sentence dekireba would mean: "if it is possible" (to prepare a dinner).

(2.) A conditional inflection may be used in lieu of a connective, especially when the principal verb is in a past tense:

Nochi ni kiitara uso de gozaimashita.

I inquired afterwards and it proved to be (was) a lie.

Kesa no yōsu de wa ame ga furu ka to omottara sukkari haremashita.

By the looks [of the sky] this morning I judged that it would rain, but it cleared off entirely.

Observe the peculiar use of the conditional in:

Uketamawareba go byōki de atta sō desu.

I hear that you have been sick.

(lit. If I hear, you were sick, it is said)

Tōkyō mo kawareba kawaru mon' da.

How Tökyö has changed!

(lit. Tōkyō, too, if it changes, changes.)

a The conditional clause may be made somewhat indefinite by using the probable.form: Sono kwashi wo tabeyō mon' nara, okka san ni shikararemasu yo, You will be scolded by your mother, if you eat that cake(to a child).

Akunin mo areba zennin mo aru.

There are good men as well as bad men (comp. p. 104f).

It is a peculiarity of the Japanese language that a conditional clause may include an interrogative word:

 $D\bar{o}$  oshiemashitara yoroshiu gozaimash $\bar{o}$ .

How shall I explain it to them?

(lit. if how I have taught, will it be well?)

(3.) In a sentence containing a conditional clause, ga, no ni, or mono wo may be added to the principal verb or adjective. These have an adversative or concessive sense and, if the ellipsis were filled out, would introduce a statement of a contrary fact, a declaration of doubt concerning the possibility of fulfilling the condition, or an expression of regret:

Tabako wo yamereba ii ga.

It would be well for him to give up tobacco.

(lit. if be should give up tobacco good, but...)

Here ya may imply not only that the man is not likely to give up tobacco (yamemai), but also that he will hardly be able to do so (yameraremai). It suggests personal interest on the part of the speaker, while no ni indicates a rather nonchalant attitude. Accordingly no ni is rarely used with the first person. The no in no ni may be dispensed with after ii and yokatta, and is usually omitted after the probable forms  $yokar\bar{o}$  and  $yokattar\bar{o}$ .

Mō sukoshi hayaku dekaketara yokatta (yokattarō) ni.

He ought to have started a little earlier.

In this sentence by substituting yokarō we get the sense "he ought now to be on the way," but has not yet started).

By means of ga or mono woa following ii or yokatta one may render optative expressions beginning with "If only", "Would that," "I wish that," etc.:

Mō sukoshi yoku koshiraereba ii ga.

If only he would make [it] a little better!

Ame ga harcreba ii ga. If only it would clear off!

Togamereba ii ga. If he would only warn [him]!

Togametara yokatta ga. If he had only warned [him]!

a Compare also the use of mono wo with a verb in the past tense: Yurushite yatta mono wo. Would that I had forgiven him!

Mō sukoshi hayaku dekaketara yokatta ga. If we had only started a little earlier!

Shineba yokatta mono wo. Would that [I] had died!

2. In the case of verbs of the first class the plain imperative is identical with the stem. The honorific o may be prefixed; e.g., o kure (p.37d). There is a tendency to make the final vowel long: tabei, mii. But it is usual to add ro, in which case the honorific must not be used. The particles yo and na are not pronounced like regular suffixes, the stem of the verb being strongly emphasized, while the particle comes in after a very slight pause as a distinct but unaccented word. The forms o tabe na and o tabe yo are used mostly by women. Occasionally men may be heard to say tabe na.<sup>a</sup>

But in general the plain imperative forms characterize the speech of the lower classes, or of men who have lost their temper, or of those who choose to speak to their inferiors peremptorily. Compare further p. 126d. What has been said in the previous chapter about the use of plain forms of speech among intimate friends does not apply to the imperatives. A father may, however, say to a child who has through disobedience met with a calamity: Sore miro. The form in ro occurs also in proverbs:

Narau yori narero. Practice rather than study.

Among comrades tamae, from tamau, an honorific auxiliary, is added to the stem:

To wo shime tamae. Shut the door!

The form (o) shime nasai is scarcely more polite than (o) shime na, assuming that the act is to be done for the benefit of another. But the case is different when the request is made in the interest of the person addressed: O kake nasai. Take a seat! But o shime nas'tte kudasai is under any circumstances sufficiently polite.

As in English, a request or suggestion may be expressed in the form of a question: To wo shimenai ka; shimeru n' ja nai ka. Note also: To wo shimeru ga ii; shimeta hō ga ii; shia Observe that kure na is vulgarly contracted to kunna. Compare sonnara, from sore nava.

mereba ii; a shimetara yokarō; shimetara dō desu ka. expressions are rude or familiar. To wo o shime nas'ttara yō gozaimashō is quite elegant.

The subordinative enters into a great variety of imperative expressions. We add a partial list, placing the least polite first and the most polite last:

shimete ii shimete mo ii shimete kure b shimete kurenu ka shimete moraitai shimete o kunnasai (o kure nasai)

★ shimete kudasai shimete kudasaimasen ka shimete chō-dai shimete itadakitai shimete itadakitai mon' desa ne shimete itadakimashō

shimete itadakaremashō ka

shimete itadakitō gozaimasu

The subordinative alone may also be used elliptically as a substitute for the imperative; e. g., Katazukete. Take that away!

b Omizu ga deru there is (will be) a flood. By is a mo shirenai (see p. 109a) one may often render the English "may," "likely," "possibly."

d Notice that the particle is ga, not wa (comp. p. 109b): He would be the man to write a grammar.

e Compare p. 136.

f Instead of the past conditional, one may also use the past tense with  $h\bar{o}$  (p. 136).

If that picture falls (past), it will be a terrible smash (taihen). Hang the picture on the wall. I wish I could become accustomed to foreign food. When you awake (p. 91g—past), get up at once. The form tabenai is more common than tabenu. As has been observed before (p. 100), the form ending in nai may be inflected, the adverbial form in naku being used with especial frequency before naru to become; e. g., mienaku naru to become invisible. Compare nakunaru, p. 108a.

In some provinces tabenanda is more common than tabenakatta, but the latter is the usual form in most parts of the country.

For the future or probable tense taberumai also occurs.  $Tabenakar\bar{o}$  and such periphrastic forms as tabenai  $dar\bar{o}$ , tabenakatta  $dar\bar{o}$ , etc., like the corresponding positive forms, are used chiefly in the third person and denote a mere conjecture. The form in mai differs from the corresponding positive form in  $y\bar{o}$  in that it is not so strongly predicative and may be used in the third person. Thus in reply to the question Ano seiyōjin wa sashimi wo tabeyō ka one may say, Tabemai; but if the reply were positive, it would be, Taberu darō, not Tabeyō.a

The present is often used as a substitute for the past:

Neta ka nenai ka wakarimasen.

I don't know whether I slept or not.

Kesa no shimbun wa mada mimasen.

I have not yet seen this morning's newspaper.

Notice the use of negative verbs with mae, uchi and kagiri: Shimbun wo minai mae ni shitte imashita.

I knew it before I saw the newspapers.

Minai uchi wa wakarimasen.

I can't judge until I see it.

Minai kagiri wa shinjiraremasen.

I can't believe that unless I see it.

Observe further that with mae and uchi when a fact is stated, ni is used; but when the predicate is negative, wa is the correct particle. Kagiri always refers to a future or supposed event.

Tabenai nara(ba) a may be substituted for tabenakereba; tabenakatta nara(ba) for tabenakattara. Instead of the conditional forms tabenai to may be used.

By means of the conditional with naranai (narimasen) or ikenai (ikemasen) the English "ought" or "must" may be rendered:

Minakereba narimasen [I] must see it.

There is scarcely any difference between naranai and ikenai. The former conveys the sense of obligation, while the latter rather suggests the inconvenient consequences that will follow in case the condition is not fulfilled.

Taberu na corresponds to the positive tabero; o tabe de nai yo, to o tabe yo. But a student may say to another, To wo shimeru na (or shime tamau na), though he would hardly say shimero. Other periphrastic forms are:

a The negative probable form is occasionally found in this position: tabe-nakarō mon' nara (Com. p. 148a).

b For ikenai see p. 29b. Naranai it does not become. Dō mo naranai I can't manage it in any way. Compare: Fishigi de naranai. It is too strange (lit, being marvelous, it does not become). From what is said above it appears that there is really no equivalent for "ought" or "must" in Japanese. Compare also the use of beki and hazu (p. 111).

shimete kudasaru na shimete kudasaimasu na, etc. For shimenaide see p. 106a. A distinction may be drawn between (o) shime nasaru na and shimete kureru na. The former implies that the speaker makes the request in behalf of the person addressed or of others; the latter, that the speaker himself is the one for whose benefit the act is to be done. Compare what is said about o shime nasai (p. 150).

b Compare: Tokei ga susunde imasu. The clock is fast (susumu advance). Tokei ga atte imasu. The clock is just right (au meet). To set the clock is tokei wo awase-ru,—awaseru being the causative of au.

c Nikkō, from nichi sun and kwō light, is famous all over Japan not only for its beautiful scenery, but also for its magnificent temples. Kekkō to in na don't say "splendid." You have no right to use the word kekkō until the temples and gates of Nikkō have taught you its meaning.

d Jibiki de miru look up in a dictionary. Jibiki wo hiite miru (p. 88c) is the usual idiom.

e Here to in before koto may be omitted. The accumulation of many negative words in one sentence is more common than in English.

f Observe that wakaru and dekiru are really impersonal (pp. 17d, 34d) verbs and that the subject of the English sentence accordingly takes the postposition m.

If [we] don't eat that (sore wa), it will spoil (become bad). & If I don't inquire a of some one (hito ni), I shall not understand. 7If I had not put a plaster on the wound (wa), it might have become worse (bad). As I get up early, I must go to bed early. Ton't go out (soto ye) while I am absent (in the time of my absence). MThe maidservant must go out to buy things (p. 52d). 11 The farmers must now (kore kara) plant their [rice] seedlings. 12 Since somebody has come, I must get up. (7) When (from when) must I begin my studies (keiko)? Must [I] fix the hours of study at once  $(m\bar{o}\ jiki\ ni)$ ? I hope there are no mosquitoes.e

a The most common expression for "inquire" in the colloquial is kiite mi-ru, b In sentences like this and the one following, wa must be used with the subject, because logically it is the subject of the whole sentence, and not merely of the conditional clause.

c The precise equivalent of "at nine o'clock" is ku ji ni. Of a performance which begins at nine we may say ku ji kara. Kisha ga ku ji ni tō-chaku shimasu. The train arrives at nine o'clock. Ku ji kara enzetsu-kwai wo hirakimasu. We will open the lecture-meeting at nine o'clock.

d" By New Year's" is to be rendered: shinnen made ni. Distinguish: Ban made hon wo yomimasu. I will read the book [continuously] until this evening. Ban made ni hon wo yomimasu. I shall have read the book by this evening.

e This is to be translated like the examples in Ch. XL.: If there are no mosquitoes, good, but... Sentences beginning with "I hope" "I fear," etc., must always be paraphrased in some such manner: O kega de mo nakereba ii (ga). I hope you are not hurt. Wakatta tsumoridesu. I hope I understand. Hayaku naoshitai mono desu. I hope I shall soon be well. Fune ni yowanakereba ii (ga). I fear I shall be seasick. Kimi wa kondo no shiken ni rakudai suru ka mo shirenai. I fear you will fail in the examination. Sometimes the simple probable or future form of the verb suffices: Dekimashō (to omoimasu). I hope it may be accomplished. Dekimasumai (to omoimasu). I fear it may not be accomplished.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The positive subordinative of the verb, as of the adjective, ends in te; e. g., tabe-te, mi-te. a

1. It is a peculiarity of the Japanese colloquial that of two sentences which in English would naturally be coördinate one is subordinated to the other by means of te:b

Mado wo shimete kimashō ka.

Shall I go and shut the window? (p. 88g)

Tokiwa wa c kodomo wo san nin tsurete nigemashita.

Tokiwa took the three children and fled.

The second sentence may also be translated: Tokiwa fled with the three children.

2. Subordinatives are frequently to be translated by means of adverbs or adverbial expressions; e. g., nen wo irete carefully, hajimete for the first time, soreni hiki-kaete on the contrary.

3. Often in cases where the English employs a simple verb the Japanese combines the verb in the subordinative form with another verb.

tsurete kuru bring (a person or domestic animal). tsurete yuku take (a person or domestic animal).

dete kuru come out (making one's exit come).

kurabete miru compare (comparing see).

tamete oku save (saving put).

karete shimau die (withering finish - of a plant).

oshiete yaru teach (teaching give).

oshiete ageru inform (a superior).

oshiete kureru (kudasaru) instruct (an inferior).

Sanzan shikatte yarimashita. [I] scolded [him] severely.

4. The subordinative with iru or oru denotes continued or unfinished action, especially action that is in progress at some definite time:

a This te combined with ni, mi, bi of stems of verbs of the second class becomes nde; shinde, from shinu die; yonde, from yomu read; yonde, from yobu call.

b In the classical language the stem performs the same function as the subordinative in the colloquial. This usage appears in the speech of the learned, in orations and in long stories.

c Tokiwa was a famous beauty, concubine of Yoshitomo and mother of Yoshitsune.

Gozen wo tabete orimasu. He is (now) eating.

Gozen wo tabete imashita. He was eating (at the time). In this construction iru or oru is a mere auxiliary and may be used also of inanimate things (p. 63c).<sup>a</sup> Notice contractions like kiiteru or kiitoru am listening, or inquiring, yonderu or yondoru am reading, or calling. In kiite iru the i is elided; in kiite oru, the e.

5. The subordinative with iru or oru may denote a condition that is the result of an action and may in some cases be translated by means of the perfect tense.

Ochite iru. It is down (having fallen).

Kite iru. He is here (having come).

 $Y\bar{o}$ fuku wo kite imasu.

He is wearing foreign clothes (having put them on).

Megane wo kakete imasu.

He is wearing glasses (having put them on).

Shinja ni natte orimasu.

He is a believer (having become one).

But in the case of transitive verbs aru is more commonly used with the subordinative to express a condition, the completed act rather than the agent being the object of attention.

Irete aru. They are inside  $(=haitte\ iru)$ .

Tomete aru. I have a note of it (tome-ru make a note of).

Kaite aru. It stands written.

Isu wa koshiraete arimasu.

The chairs are finished. I have made the chairs.

Daidokoro ni mizu wo (ga) hiite aru.

Water is brought (in pipes) to the kitchen.

In the last sentence observe how wo may be used in this construction.

6. If ii or yoroshii follows a subordinative, the idea of permission or acquiescence is conveyed:

Kyō asobi ni dete ii.

You may take a vacation to-day (go out to play).

a Students of the English language have revived an obsolete idiom in order to translate progressive forms like "I am going," etc., using tsutsu aru with the stem of the verb: iki tsutsu aru is going. This construction is not infrequently heard in speeches, etc. The subordinative of an intransitive verb may be progressive or perfect, as explained above; but iki tsutsu aru is free from ambiguity.

7. The postposition kara may follow the subordinative (p. 96c), giving the clause a temporal meaning. In the following sentence kara may also be omitted:

Konna koto wa umarete (kara) hajimete da. [a thing. It is the first time since I was born that I have seen such

8. The subordinative may be used elliptically:

Yoku ki wo tsukete Take good care!

Cha wo irete Make the tea!

Yume bakkari mite (yoku yasumimasen).

I did nothing but dream.

Notice also shitte no tōri as you know.

CHAPTER XLIV.

The subordinative followed by wa generally a has a conditional sense (p. 102):

Keiko wo yamete wa dō desu.

How would it be if we gave up the study?

If then a negative word like naranai or ikenai b is added, the whole phrase is to be translated by means of "must not" (pp. 92d, 130g):

Ima keiko wo yamete wa narimasen.

You must not give up the study now.

Akete mite wa ikemasen. You must not open it.

As in the case of adjectives, te wa may be contracted to cha; but such contractions are avoided in polite or formal discourse. Followed by mo the subordinative has a concessive sense and must be translated by means of "even though," "even if" (p. 117f). If yoroshii or a similar expression follows, the sentence has a permissive sense like the English "may." Such a sentence is often a polite command.

Sō nas'tte mo yoroshiu gozaimasu.

There is no objection to your doing so.

Nete mo yoroshiu gozaimasu ka. May I go to bed?

For the subordinative with mo the past tense with 'tte (to itte, tote) may be substituted:

Dare ni kikaseta 'tte hontō to omoi wa shinai.

No matter to whom you tell it, no one will think it true. Kikase-ru is the causative of kiku to hear. Kikaseta 'tte is equivalent to kikasete mo. Omoi wa shinai, often pronounced omoya shinai, is a very emphatic way of saying omowanai.

a The rule does not apply to sentences like the following: Kimatte wa imasen It is not fixed (regular). Komban watakushi nouchiye tomatte wa kuremai ka Would he (you) not stay at my house to-night?

b When reference is made to one's relations with other persons, sumanai is inexcusable, from sumn to be ended, settled, composed, may be used: Omae sonna ni namakete ite wa o tottsan ni sumanai zo It is unfilial to your father to be so idle.

a By means of this negative expression one may translate the English "keep" or "preserve."

b Itsu tabete mo every time I eat it. Similar constructions occur frequently: nani wo tabete mo no matter what I eat, dare ga kite mo no matter who comes,  $d\bar{o}$  kangaete mo thinking it over in every possible way. Compare the last two sentences in the exercises, also p. 45b.

c The verb kamau generally occurs in the negative form. Kamaimasen I don't mind; it makes no difference. Kamaiwanai hō ga yokatta It might have been better not to pay any attention to it. Dōzo o kamai naku Please do not trouble yourself.

d With katsu, ni is ordinarily used to denote the object: teki-gun ni katsu to defeat the enemy. But here it is exactly equivalent to the English "in."

e Sageru to hang lower; azeru to hang higher.

One must not break a promise. As there is nothing more to do  $(y\bar{o}\ ga\ nai)$ , you may go to bed. Leven if he gives up sake, he will hardly save anything (money will hardly accumulate). HI will take an umbrella: it is unpleasant (komaru) to get (if one gets) wet through and through. a AAs the weather is dubious (difficult), you must not forget [your] umbrella. 70 Though I sleep well at night, when I awake I feel as if I had not slept (nenai yō na kimochi ga shimas').

CHAPTER XLV.

Negative Subor-	tabe- $zu(shite)$	mi- $zu(shite)$
dinative	tabe-zu ni	mi-zu ni
	tabe-naide(-nde)	mi-naide $(-nde)$
	tabe- $nakute$	mi-nakute

For the uses of these forms compare the preceding chapters.

1. In the literary language zu is the termination of the negative conclusive, as well as of the connective or inconclusive, form of verbs:

Chū-shin ni kun ni tsukaezu.

A loyal subject does not serve two masters.

a When one has actually been wet, one may say: murete komaru. But wa added to nurete indicates a general supposition.

Atarazu to iedomo tōkarazu (tōku, arazu).

Though it did not hit [the mark], it is not far [from it]. This use occurs in proverbs and other sentences adopted from the classical language. But in the colloquial the last predicative verb in a series of coördinate negative clauses must take one of the endings given in Ch. XLL., ro, if itself subordinated, naide.

Chikagoro wa hima ga nakute hito wo mimau koto mo dekizu sampo suru koto mo dekinaide komatte imasu.

I have had a hard time of it lately because for lack of time I can neither visit people nor go out for a walk.

In formal addresses shite may be added to the form in zu.<sup>a</sup> But in general the use of this form smacks of the literary style. In the colloquial the forms in zu ni and naide are more commonly used to indicate the subordination of a clause.

2. The form in zu (ni) may be used adverbially:

nokorazu all, none being left (p. 50). tarazu elosely, from taru be enough.

mono mo iwazu silently, from iu to say.

omowazu shirazu unintentionally, unawares, from omou think, shiru know.

mukō mizu ni blindly, from mukō what is in front of one. Compare shirazu shirazu no aida before [I] knew it.

3. As in the case of the positive subordinative, iru or oru may be added to denote continuance or a condition. Only the forms in zu ni and naide may be so used:

Tabezu ni oru have eaten nothing, or, Tabenaide oru continue to eat nothing.

4. By the addition of wa the negative subordinative acquires a conditional sense:

Tabezu ni wa oraremasen. [I] cannot exist without eating. Such words as naranai and ikenai (p. 158) may follow only the forms in naide wa and nakute wa.b In Tōkyō the latter is preferred:

a Compare the use of shite with kara: sore da kara shite since that is the case.

b May be contracted to nakucha (nakutcha), as also naide wa to naija. In the next example also otte wa may be contracted to otcha; ite wa to icha.

Tabete minakute wa wakarimasen. I must first taste it. While naranai, etc., cannot follow tabezu ni wa immediately, one may say:

Mono wo tabezu ni otte (ite) wa narimasen.

[You] must not continue to fast.

(lit. must not be without eating something).

5. The particle mo gives the negative subordinative a concessive sense. The idiom is tabezu to mo, not tabezu ni mo.<sup>a</sup> One may also say, tabenaide mo, tabenakute mo:

Minakute mo ii. It is not necessary to see it.

(lit. it is good though [I] do not see.)

Sore wa iwazu to mo shireta b koto desu.

It is unnecessary to speak of it.

(lit. though none says it, it is a thing that one could know.)

nodo ga itō gozaimasu.

My throat hurts even when I neither speak nor eat. Shinaide is the negative subordinative from suru to do. For the sake of emphasis suru is often used with the stem of a verb, as here.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Desiderative	$tabe ext{-}tai$	mi- $tai$
	wish to eat	wish to see Negative "	tabe-taku nai	mi-taku nai
	do not wish to eat	do not wish to see Alternative	tabe- $tari$	mi- $tari$
	at times eating	at times seeing Negative "	$tabe ext{-}nakattari$	mi-na $kattari$
	$tabe{-}nandari$	mi-nandar $i$
at times not eating at times not		at times not seeing

1. As has been observed before (p. 100), the desiderative is an adjective and may be inflected as such:

Tabetaku narimashita. I have become desirous to eat. b Tabetakute komarimasu. I am very anxious to eat.
Tabetakereba, tabete mo ii. You may eat, if you wish.
The adverbial ending taku becomes tō before gozaimasu (p.

a Sanetomo, son of Yoritomo, was appointed shōgun in 1203, and in 1219 was murdered by his nephew  $Kugy\bar{o}$ . Hachiman is the name of the god of war. For Kamakura see p. 122c.

b The word "hungry" is hardly a correct translation for tabetai. "I have become hungry," literally translated into Japanese is, Himojiku narimashita, or, Knfuku ni narimashita. The idea of "hungry" and the idea of tabetai usually coincide, but not always. See the last of the English sentences.

100). To the form in tai may be added mono desu, no desu, or simply desu. By adding to omoimasu (to omotte imasu) the speaker may avoid expressing his wish too bluntly or committing himself too definitely.

It is to be noted carefully that the desiderative cannot be used of the third person except (a) when one speaks in behalf of another; (b) when a derivative verb is formed by adding garu to the desiderative stem (comp. hoshigaru p. 152a); or (c) when to iu is added:

Kono kodomo wa Amerika ye ikitai no desu.

This boy wants to go to America.

Watakushi no otōto wa Amerika ye ikitagatte oru ga ; tsurete itte kudasaru koto wa dekimasumai ka.

My younger brother is desirous to go to America; could you not take him with you?

Mairitai to itte orimasu. He says he wants to go.

The word which is the object in the English sentence may take ga in Japanese (p. 103e): Gozen ga tabetai desu. In this case the personal subject takes wa. Desideratives may also be used attributively with the nouns which are their objects.

2. The alternative is used when acts or states occur by turns (comp. p. 99):

Heya wo haitari fuitari shite orimashita.

[I] was sweeping and wiping [the floors of] the rooms. Alternatives may be translated by means of "at times—at times," "now—again," or, in some cases, simply by "and."

They cannot be inflected and ordinarily are not used except with forms of suru to do. Notice the following elliptical construction:

Sore wa negattari kanattari desu.

It is just what I want (lit. desiring, obtaining).

Vocabulary.

oboe memory. yume dream.

hatsu-yume first dream of the year. a a This hatsu is the equivalent of sho, in sho-han (p. 93), much used as a prefix in the sense of "first," It must not be confused with the Chinese hatsu to start, originate.

b These words are attached to a noun immediately, and precede such particles as wa, ga, etc.

c Kesshite is used of a firm resolution or of a statement for which the speaker makes himself personally responsible: Kesshite sonna koto wa arimasen. I assure you there will be nothing of the kind. Totemo is not so positive and indicates merely that there are serious difficulties in the way: Totemo tasukarimasumai. There is almost no chance of his recovery.

d O ato kara afterwards, after you.

e Mono is indefinite (p. 47). Mono wo tabetaku naru become hungry.

I should like to learn the conjugation of Japanese verbs. As I have [some] leisure to-day, I wish to go out for a little recreation chotto asobi ni). [Our] neighbor wishes to build a house in European style, but probably [his] money does not yet suffice for that (sore ni wa). I should like to eat Japanese food (cooking) once. He wants to learn Chinese characters, but his memory is bad and he immediately forgets (forgetting finishes) the characters he has learned (osowatta). Look! yonder a ship is at times visible and at times out of sight (hidden).

a Here ageru and sageru have the derived senses of "praise" and "blame".

b It is considered a sign of good luck to dream of Mount Fuji on the night of the second of January. — no yume wo miru to dream of (lit. see a dream of). Ha ga nuketa yume wo mimashita. I dreamed that I lost a tooth (a tooth was extracted). Notice that de no may be added to nouns as well as pronouns (Ch. XVII.), making the sense indefinite: a dream of Fuji or a dream of that kind. Compare the sentence p. 172a The hawk (taka) and the egg-plant (nasubi) are also favorable omens in a hatsuyume. Hence the proverb: Ichi, Fuji; ni, taka; san, nasubi.

c Oide wo negainasu Please come to see me (lit. I beg your presence). Sake we is understood with intai.

The children want to fly kites. As I have become hungry (stomach has decreased), I want to eat (p. 143a).

CHAPTER XLVII.

Verbs of the second class (p. 142) may be divided into groups, according to the consonants which precede the u of the present tense. To the first group belong verbs in ru.

1. Paradigm of toru (stem tori) to take:

	Positive	Negative
Present	toru	toranai, toran(u)
Past	totta	toranakatta, -nanda
Future or	$tor\bar{o}$	torumai b
Probable	toru darō	toranai darō, toran darō
Probable Past	$^{ au}tottarar{c}$	toranakattarō, —nandarō
	totta darō	toranakatta darō
Conditional	toreba (toraba) toru nara(ba)	ctoranakerebad (toranakuba) toraneba toranai nara(ba)
Past ,,	tottara(ba)	toranakattara, —nandara(ba)
	totta nara(ba)	toranakatta nara(ba)
Imperative	tore .	toru na
	(o) tori na o tori (yo)	o tori de nai yo
Subordinative	totte	torazu (shite), torazu ni
	1	toranaide, torande
		toranakute
Desiderative	toritai	toritaku nai
Alternative	tottari	toranakattari, -nandari

a If the kurumahiki is standing with the shafts in his hands, one may say: oro-shite kure, from orosu to let down.

b Forms like toranakarō (comp. tabenakarō p. 154) are sometimes heard, but the propriety of including them in a paradigm is disputed.

c Toraba, as also the negative toranakuba, are classical forms.

d Forms like toranakereba are variously contracted: torankereba, toranakerya (emphatic: toranakeryā), toranakya, toranya.

2. The characteristic vowels are i, a, e and u.

1

The forms totte, tottari, totta are derived by elision and assimilation from the stem tori and te, tari, ta. The ending ta is a contraction of the elassical taru (attributive) or tari (conclusive). Such uncontracted forms as torite and toritaru (in the attributive position) are sometimes heard in speeches and occur in proverbs. Observe that the i of the stem does not suffer elision in the desiderative.

A

The form  $tor\bar{o}$  is a contraction of toram(u), which in the classical language becomes toran.<sup>2</sup> Such forms as toran creep into speeches, especially with to suru: shinan to suru hito a man about to die. Observe that the vowel of the stem is changed to a in the positive future and in all the negative forms except the future and the imperative.

E

In the positive imperative and conditional the vowel of the stem is changed to e: tore, toreba.

U

In the negative imperative and future, as in the positive present, the vowel becomes u: toru na, torumai.

3. The verbs aru to be and naru to become are included in this group.

There are many verbs ending in aru which are passive or intransitive  $(ji-d\bar{o}shi)$  and correspond to transitive verbs  $(ta-d\bar{o}shi)$  in e-ru, both being in most cases represented by the same ideogram.

agaru go up, take (food, etc.).
ataru strike, meet (p. 71c).
atsumaru assemble.
azukaru take charge of.
haimaru begin (intr.).

hajimaru begin (intr.). kakaru be hung.

ageru lift up, give. ateru apply, hit, guess. atsumeru gather. azukeru entrust. hajimeru begin (tr.). kakeru hang.

a From verbs of the first class similar forms may be derived: taben, min.

b But it must not be supposed that this is a general rule or that the list here given is complete. See interesting tables in Imbrie's Etymology p. 27ff.

magaru be bent, turn.
mazaru be mixed.
osamaru be governed, pacified.
osamaru be paid (of taxes).
sagaru descend, return.
shizumaru become calm.
tamaru be accumulated.
tasukaru be saved, recover.
tomaru stop, be entertained.
wakaru be divided, understood.
kawaru be changed, vary.
suwaru sit (in native manner).

mageru bend.
mazeru mix.
osameru govern, pacify.
osameru pay (taxes).
sageru take down, suspend.
shizumeru tranquillize.
tameru accumulate.
tasukeru save, help.
tomeru stop, entertain.
wakeru divide.
kaeru change.
sueru set.

In some cases forms in aru are contractions of potential or honorific forms (see also Ch. XLIX.).

makaru be able to come down on the price, from makerareru.
nasaru do, from nasareru.

kudasaru bestow, from kudasareru. irassharu be, come, go, from iraserareru. ossharu say, from öserareru.

b Notice that azukaru in the sense of "to take charge of" takes 700. In the next sentence it means "to participate in" and takes ni. In the latter sense azukaru is not used so much in the colloquial, and smacks of the epistolary style.

c For euphony's sake the ending masu here becomes masuru, but masu also would be correct.

d The man in charge has left the office. Here we have another very common use of kakaru in the form of its stem. Kakari no hito may also mean all the officials in a department. As a suffix kakari forms many compounds; e. g., kwaikei-kakari treasurer, from kwai-kei finance. The verb sagaru is used of men leaving an office at the close of the day's work or of pupils returning home from school, the office or school being regarded as an exalted place.

e The imperative of damaru is of course not polite. To be polite one must say: Chotto kiite kudasai.

f The verb tasukeru is used in a case of peril, distress or poverty. To help one to do a task is tetsudan, tetsudatte.

Too many sailors run the ship aground (The sailors being numerous, the ship ascends the mountain). ### CHAPTER XLVIII.

There are a few verbs which, ending in eru or iru, are often mistaken for verbs of the first class. A partial list of them is here given with the recommendation that the student as he goes over it pronounce the subordinative distinctly, thus: asette, chitte, etc.

a The verb tatoeru appears in the phrase, tatoete mireba. The regular conditional form in the colloquial would be tatoereba. The form tatoeba is borrowed from the classical language. "An example" is tatoe or rei. To "give an example" is rei wo toru, hiku or ageru. Sore wa ii rei de wa arimasen, or, Sono rei wa yoku atehamarimasen. That is not a good illustration.

A  $r\bar{v}-nin$  is a samurai without a master ( $r\bar{v}$  wave, vagrant, nin man). The Forty-seven are called also  $Ak\bar{v}$  on gishi. At Sen-gaku-ji (fountain-mountain-temple) in Shiba, Tokyo, was the grave of the  $daimy\bar{v}$  of  $Ak\bar{v}$ , the lord of the Forty-seven.  $K\bar{v}$  cuke-no-suke was originally an official title which later came into use as a given name. Compare Kura-uo-suke, Wakasa-no-suke, etc. In this sentence the stem is used for the subordinative, as is often the case in narratives (p. 162b).

a Naze naraba is elliptical for Naze ka to naraba if [you ask] "why." An explanation is frequently introduced by this phrase or naze to in ni. The expression Oya Shirazu Ko Shirazu often occurs as a designation of a dangerous place. The most noted place that bears this name is a rough part of the coast of Echigo.

1. The polite verbs nasaru, kudasaru, and irassharu are used in the second (or third) person both independently and as auxiliaries. Usually masu is added, and ari in nasarimasu, kudasarimasu, irassharimasu is contracted to ai.<sup>d</sup> So also are in a The gohei (see Vocabulary p. 129), made of white paper or metal, is the characteristic decoration of a Shinto shrine. Its significance is not clearly known: some say that it is a symbol of divinity or purity.

b In such a list conjunctions may be dispensed with. See p. 2, middle.

c A kai-ri (kai = umi sea) is a knot - about 1.15 miles.

d In the same manner ossharimasu and gozarimasu are contracted.

the imperatives nasare, kudasare and irasshare is contracted to ai. The imperative of masu is mase or mashi. Thus the imperatives of these verbs are nasai or nasaimashi, kudasai or kudasaimashi, irasshai or irasshaimashi. The a before tta, tte ttari, etc., is commonly elided: nas'tta, nas'tte, nas'ttari; kudas'tta, kudas'tte, etc.; irassh'tta, etc.

(1.) Nasaru is used independently. It is also used with Chinese compounds or with the stems of verbs as the polite equivalent of suru:

Go katte ni nasai.

Consult your own convenience.

Nani wo go kembutsu nasaru o tsumori desu ka.

What do you intend to see?

Sukoshi o make nasai. Make the price a little lower.

Oidea nasaimashita. You (he) went, came, were.

(2.) Kudasaru as an independent verb means "grant condescendingly." As an auxiliary it is used with either the stem or the subordinative of a verb (but generally with the latter), and may be literally translated "condescend to", "deign to":

Kono shashin wo kudasaimasen ka.

Will you not be so good as to give me this photograph?

Go men kudasai. Please excuse me. I beg your pardon.

Oyomi (or yonde) kudasai. Kindly read it.

Shinsetsu ni oshiete kudasaimashita.

He was good enough to explain [it] carefully.

Go ran nas'tte kudasai. Condescend to look at it.

Constructions like o yomi nas'tte kudasai are formal and polite. Familiarly one may substitute kureru for kudasaru, but only with the simple subordinative, not with the stem: oshiete kuremashita.

(3.) Irassharu means "go", "come", "be". Irassharu and oide nasaru are practically synonymous. In speaking of persons de irassharu=de aru (p. 78b). As an auxiliary irassharu is used with the subordinative of a verb and is the polite equivalent of iru or oru:

Sura, Masu, nasaru-dolhumble forfra

a From the honorific o and the stem of the classical izu, the older form of deru (p. 144, 6). Notice that the honorific o or go is required in the above examples (p. 72f).

Kyō sampo ni irasshaimasu ka.

Will you go for a walk to-day?

Kochira no hō ye irasshai. Come this way, please.a

Go buji de irasshaimasu ka. Are you well?

Danna sama wa go zaitaku de irasshaimasu ka.

Is the master at home?

Tōkyō ni sumatte irasshaimasu. He resides in Tōkyō.

Itte irasshai is the polite equivalent of itte koi (lit. go and come) Go! Good bye!

2. Negative forms of aru, such as aranai, etc., are not used, being replaced by forms of nai (p. 100). The only exception is the future or probable arumai, which is used along with  $nakar\bar{o}$ ,  $nai\ dar\bar{o}$ . In the classical language arazu=nai,  $ni\ arazu=de\ nai$ .

For de aru, de atta, de  $ar\bar{o}$  the contractions da, datta,  $dar\bar{o}$  are usually employed; for de arimasu, etc., desu, deshita, de- $sh\bar{o}$ . The uncontracted de aru is heard only in speeches. The use of ja as a contraction of de aru survives in Buddhist sermons and in some dialects.

The very formal equivalent of aru is gozarimasu, usually pronounced gozaimasu. The simple gozaru c(negative: gozaranu) is rarely used in conversation, but may be heard in theaters.

It should also be noted that such expressions as ni natte oru (p. 163, 5) are often used where we should expect aru.

Vocabulary.

kat-te one's own convenience.d

a The simple imperative irasshai has been somewhat vulgarized by doorkeepers of places of amusement, etc.

b The particles de wa are also contracted to ja, which occurs with special frequency in ja nai ka: Chotto mi ni ikō ja nai ka. Shan't we go to see it? Sō osshatta ja arimasen ka. You said so, did you not?

c This word is derived from the honorific go and za (c) seat. It is of course unusual to form verbs by adding ru to Chinese elements, but there are analogous instances. The native equivalent of gozaru is owasu or owashimasu, an honorific verb used like oide nasaru or irassharu. Another form of the same verb, omasu, is still used in the Kyoto dialect as an equivalent of aru:  $s\bar{o}$  de omasu or so dosu = so desu. If this is not the explanation of the origin of gozaru, it is at least an instructive analogy.

d Comp. kattegamashii p. 110. The adjective katte na means selfish, inconsiderate. In speaking to a person, go may be prefixed to katte.

The fact that the Japanese modify the sound of it before i and u, saying not ti, tu, but chi, tsu, must be remembered in conjugating verbs of this class. With te, tari, ta, etc., the chi of the stem naturally unites to form tte, ttari, tta.

The verbs belonging to this class are not numerous. Besides

A stone may be wrapped in paper, paper may be cut by shears, and shears must yield to The players extend their hands simultaneously, each representing one of these three things. For instance, if A makes the sign of the stone, he wins in case Binakes the sign of the shears, but has to yield to the paper. Another variety is mushi-ken, in which the characters are hebi snake, kaeru frog and namekuji slug. It seems that the snake fears the slug. Still another is kitsune-ken, or tōhachi-ken, in which appear shō-ya (old word for son-chō head of a village), teppō gun and kitsune The fox is regarded as having power to be witch a man. ### CHAPTER LI.

To the third group belong verbs in su. As in the case of verbs in tsu, the u is hardly audible.

Paradigm of hanasu (stem hanashi) to speak, or, to separate:

Verbs of this group are very numerous. They are all transitive.a In most cases the corresponding intransitives are derived from the same root, b

Many are synonymous with regular causatives: awasu = awaseru cause to meet, introduce, join, from au meet. kawakasu=kawakaseru dry, desiccate, from kawaku. narasu=naraseru sound, ring, from naru resound.

The transitive derived from waku boil is wakasu, never waka-The form in sw often differs in sense from that in serv. Thus chirasu means scatter, from chiru, while chiraseru means to see — fall down (poetically used of leaves and blossoms). So korobasu, from korobu tumble, means roll, while korobaseru means cause to tumble. From meguru = mawaru go round, we have two verbs, megurasu revolve in the mind, used in the semi-classical compound omoimegurasu reflect, and meguraseru cause to go round.

In some cases su is simply substituted for the ru of an intransitive verb:

amasu leave over.

amaru be in excess.

a One exception is masu increase, which may be transitive or intransitive. conjugation is regular, while that of the auxiliary masu (see the next chapter) is somewhat irregular. The mashi of mashi desu (p. 136, middle) is the stem of this

b The following lists are by no means exhaustive. The words given are selected simply with a view to prepare the student for further observation. For the regular causatives see Ch. LNI.

hesu (herasu) decrease. hitasu immerse, soak. kacsu(kayasu) send back, repay. kacru come or go back. kasu lend, rent. kawasu exchange. kudasu cause to descend. mawasu turn round, pass round. mawaru go round. modosu send back, vomit. naosu mend, heal. nosu(noseru) place on, record. okosu raise, start, begin.  $t\bar{o}su$  cause or allow to pass. watasu take across, hand over. watasu cross.

heru decrease. hitaru be immersed. karu (kariru) borrow. kawaru change (intr.). kudaru descend. modoru come or go back. naoru be mended, healed. noru be on, ride. okoru arise, break out. toru pass through or by.

The eru or iru of verbs of the first class may become asu; iru often becomes osu:

chirakasu scatter about. dasu put out, give. fuyasu augment, multiply. fueru increase. kogasu scorch, burn. makasu defeat, beat down. narasu train, tame.a nigasu allow to escape. nurasu wet. samasu cool. tokasu dissolve, melt. tsuiyasu spend, waste. nobasu extend, postpone. horobosu overthrow. hosu dry, ventilate. okosu waken. orosu let down.

chirakeru be scattered about. deru issue forth. kogeru be scorched. makeru yield, come down. nareru become accustomed. nigeru escape. nureru get wet. sameru become cool. samasu waken, recover from. sameru become awake, sober. tokeru be dissolved, melted. tsuieru be spoiled, spent. nobiru be extended, postponed. horobiru be overthrown. hiru dry, ebb. okiru get up. oriru descend, alight.

ochiru fall (p. 165b). otosu drop, lose, omit, take. To some transitives in su correspond intransitives in reru. hanareru be separated. hanasu separate. hazusu displace, miss, avoid. hazureru be displaced, fail.

a Besides narasu tame and narasuring, we have also narasu from naru become or be produced (of fruit) and narasu level or grade (land).

kakusu hide. kobosu pour, spill. konasu pulverize, digest.

kuzusu tear down (p.116b). kuzureru go to pieces. nagasu let flow, forfeit.

taosu prostrate, kill.

kakureru be hidden. koboreru overflow.

konareru be digested.

kowareru be broken.

nagareru flow.

taoreru fallover (of tall things).

Finally it is to be noted that some transitives are formed by means of the termination kasu, which is often interchangeable with su or seru:

hiyakasu, a hiyasu cool, from hieru become cool.

jirakasu, jirasu tease, tantalize, from jireru be irritated. magirakasu, magirasu confuse, bamboozle, from magireru (magiru) be mixed up.

nekasu, neseru put to sleep, from neru sleep.

CHAPTER LII.

1. The auxiliary masu (masuru) is in some respects irregular:

Positive Negative

Present masu, masuru masen(u) Past mashita masen deshita

masen(a)katta, —nanda

a The verb mesu has a wide range of meanings. The riksha-man says to his passenger: (Jinrikisha ni) o meshi nasaimashi. Please seat yourself in the riksha. Notice the use of mesu in compounds: meshi-agaru eat or drink, oboshi-mesu think,

Subordina- mashite tive

masezu (shite), masezu ni masende

Desiderative —— Alternative mashitari

masen(a)kattari,—nandari

The conditional masureba, etc., and the negative imperative masuru na are derived from the longer form masuru, which often occurs also in the present tense, especially in formal speech.

In the negative forms the characteristic vowel is e, not a.

In the present tense the form in nai is wanting.

The desiderative is wanting; in its stead the desiderative of the plain verb with gozaimasu or omoimasu is used:—not hanashimashitai, but hanashitō gozaimasu or hanashitai to omoimasu.

2. This masu is used only as an auxiliary attached to the stems of other verbs. It indicates that the speaker wishes to be courteous. See p. 142, 3. It is quite proper to use masu in speaking to inferiors. But many foreigners make their speech too monotonous by using masu with all verbs indiscriminately. For variety's sake verbs in inconspicuous positions should ordinarily be plain. Further masu may be more readily omitted with verbs that are in themselves honorific than with common verbs. One must be more careful to add masu to verbs in the first person than in the third, The use of masu is incongruous: (a) in a monologue or in repeating something previously said to the speaker; (b) in a conversation where the speaker is boku and his hearer kimi; (c) in clauses dependent on a verb which is plain. When moved with indignation or in the heat of debate the natural tendency is to use curt forms.

3. In formal speech one uses as auxiliaries special verbs such as nasaru, kudasaru and irassharu (Ch. XLIX.). The verb  $m\bar{o}su^a$  is also used as an auxiliary, chiefly in the first person, when the hearer is the direct or indirect object of the action. It follows the stem of a verb, the honorific o being prefixed:

O negai mõshitai koto ga gozaimasu.

I wish to ask a favor.

O tanomi mosu. I request your assistance (p. 125b).b Masu may be added to honorific verbs: nasaimasu, kudasaimasu, irasshaimasu, o negai mõshimasu, etc.

But a judge speaking as a representative of the Sovereign may say: Sono hō no mōsu tokoro wa (moshi-tateru tokoro wa, or moshi-tate wa) tatanai. What you say is not valid. A master may speak similarly to a servant. One may say to a friend: Sato san ni yoroshiku moshita to osshatte kudasai. Please say to Mr. Sato that I wished to be remembered. Elliptically one may say: yoroshiku mõshite kudasai.

b At the door of a house or at a telephone one may say simply moshi! moshi! to attract attention. The answer is hai or ai. In former times the reply to such a call was dore.

The terms kyō-yu and kyō-ju are official titles, the former being applied to those who are duly qualified to teach in ordinary Middle Schools, Normal Schools, etc., while the latter are of a higher grade. Those who have simply graduated from a university and have not taken the post-graduate studies necessary to secure the degree of haku-shi or haka-se are called gaku-shi; e. g., i-gakushi graduate in medicine, ri-gakushi graduate in natural sciences. The American A. B. is rendered Beikoku bun-gakushi (bun letters). The degree of hakushi being given only by the Government, our "doctor" cannot be translated hakushi without qualification. ## CHAPTER LIII.

1. The verb suru (stem shi) is also irregular:

The briefer form su appears in the literary language and in the adjectives su-beki that ought to be done (p. 111), su-beka-razaru that ought not to be done (conclusive, su-bekarazu).

The only forms derived from suru are the conditional sureba and the negative imperative suru na.

In the negative conjugation the characteristic vowel is e, as in the case of masu; but suru differs from masu in having a form in nai. Semai is irregular. Sumai is rarely heard:  $S\bar{o}$ sumai zo. Don't do so! (You wouldn't do so.)

2. Sometimes suru is to be rendered "make," as, for example, with the adverbial forms of adjectives: yoku suru make good, correct: waruku suru make bad, spoil.a

3. Notice also the following idioms:

Dō shimashō ka. What shall I do?

Dō shite sono sara wo kowash'ta ka.

How did you break that plate?b

 $D\bar{o}$  shite mo dekimasen. It is utterly impossible.

 $D\bar{o}$  shita n' da. What have you done?

Dō shita mon' darō. What shall I (we) do?

Do shita hito desu. What kind of a man is he?

Sō shite (p. 198a), sō suru to, sō shitara(ba) and so shita tokoro gac may mark a transition in a narrative, like our "then," "so," "and," etc. So shite is often used pleonastically after a subordinative. See also p. 171a.

4. The following are examples of the use of suru taking an object with wo.

Hen na kao wo shite imasu. He makes a peculiar face.

Shosei wo shite iru aida kane ga nakatta.

While I was a student I had no money.

Yōshi wo shimashita. He took an adopted son.

Similarly many verbal expressions are derived from substantives. The wo may be omitted:

ikusa wo suru make war. tabi wo suru make a journey.

shitaku wo suru make prep- shigoto wo suru work. arations.

akubi wosuru (ga deru) yawn.

kushami wo suru (ga deru) sneeze.

kega wo suru be wounded (p. 159a).

a "To make" in the ordinary sense is koshiraeru or tsukuru. Distinguish yoku suru and jozu ni koshiraeru construct well, waruku suru and heta ni koshiraeru construct poorly.

b When do shite is strongly emphasized it means rather "why."

c The expression tokero ga here has the same sense as the conjunction ga. sometimes means "when." One may say so shimashita ga, but not so shita ga. A master may, however, say to a servant so shita ga ii. It may be well to do so. See p. 150, bottom.

Verbal stems are used in the same way, alone or in combination:

kake wo suru wager, from kakeru (p. 173, Voc.). seki wo suru cough, from seku. tsuri wo suru fish with hook and line. nui wo suru embroider. nui-mono wo suru sew. shirabe-mono wo suru make an investigation. mi-nage wo suru drown one's self (p. 58). te-narai wo suru practice penmanship.

5. It is by the use of suru that numerous Chinese compounds are made to serve as verbs. With these wo is more commonly omitted than with the expressions given above:

an-shō suru memorize. ben-kyō suru study, be diligent. shim-bō suru persevere. chō-dai suru=itadaku.a i-jū suru emigrate. jō-dan suru jest. ken-chiku suru build. ken-yaku suru economize.  $k\bar{o}$ -gy $\bar{o}$  suru perform (theatrical plays, etc.). — $tok\bar{o}$ -saisuru associate with.  $s\bar{o}$ -ji suru clean.

— nikwan-kei suru have relations with.

an-nai suru guide, invite. san-jō suru make a call (san  $= mairu, j\bar{o} = agaru$ ).

shitsu-mon suru ask a question.

shitsu-rei suru be impolite.

shō-bi suru praise.

shō-chi suru be aware, consent.

shū-zen suru repair.

sotsu-qyō surugraduate (from a school).

man-zoku suru be satisfied. yō-jin suru take precautions.

Almost all compounds of this kind are used also as substantives: go shōchi no tōri as you know; benkyō desu is diligent, To some of them negative prefixes may be attached (p. 124). In this case suru may not be used: fu-benkyō desu; fu-manzoku desu; bu-yōjin desu, etc.

- 6. In some cases an object with no is made to limit the substantive:
  - no hanashi wo suru speak of.
  - no uwasa wo suru gossip about.

a Both chōdai suru and itadaku have the sense to receive from a superior or from a person considered as such and are used of gifts, refreshments offered to a guest, etc. For a fuller discussion see Ch. LV.

- no jama wo suru be in the way of.
- no samatage wo suru hinder, from samatageru.
- no mane wo suru imitate, from maneru.
- no sewa wo suru assist, take care of.
- no tomo wo suru accompany.

But in most cases the substantive unites with suru to form a true verbal expression, which may then take a direct object with wo (or indirect with ni):

gwaikoku wo tabi suru travel in foreign countries.

yome wo sewa suru secure a wife (for another).

te wo kega suru (te ni kega wo suru) get a wound in the hand.

hashi wo shū-zen suru repair a bridge.

gakkō wo sotsu-gyō suru graduate from a school.

benshi ni shitsumon suru ask the speaker a question.

In some cases either construction is allowed. One may say shakkin no saisoku wo suru or shakkin wo saisoku suru; but in the former case wo must not be omitted after saisoku, while in the latter it must not be used.

7. With some monosyllabic words derived from the Chinese suru coalesces:

bassuru punish, from batsu.

kessuru decide, resolve upon, settle, from ketsu.a

sassuru conjecture, sympathize with (sentiments, etc.), from satsu.

After n, or a long vowel, by nigori su becomes zu and shi, ji: anzuru be anxious, be concerned about.<sup>b</sup> füzuru seal (a letter).

kenzuru offer as a gift.c

kinzuru prohibit, forbid.

sonzuru be injured (p. 85a).

a In ketsu-gi, which denotes a resolution of a public assembly. From kessuru is derived the adverbial kesshite positively (p. 177c).

b Anzuru, like sassuru, may not take a personal object: Watakushi no kokoro wo sasshite kudasai, Sympathize with me. Oya wa shiju kodomo no koto wo anjite iru. Parents are always anxious about their children.

c Ikkon kenjimashō. Have a cup! (of sake). Kon, the numerative for cups of sake, is really a variant reading of ken in kenzuru.

tenzuru change (tr. and intr.), remove (intr.). zonzuru think, know (polite 1).

Since the stems of these verbs are anji, faji, etc., they are in the colloquial frequently inflected as though they belonged to the first class: anjiru, anjireba, etc.

Observe also the euphonic changes in the following verbs. These are, however, more common in the literary style than in true colloquial:

omonzuru esteem, from omoku suru (omoi heavy, important).

karonzuru despise, from karoku suru (karui light, insignificant — classical karoshi).

8. Many intransitive verbs are formed by adding suru to adverbs. Most of the adverbs so used end in ri or belong to the duplicatives, largely onomatopoetic, in which the language abounds (comp. p. 128, bottom):

bikkuri suru be astonished, frightened.

bonyari(to) suru be vague, distracted, stupid.

sappari (to) suru become clear (p. 187b).

bishibishi (mishimishi, gishigishi) suru creak (of timbers). chirachira suru flicker, flutter, become dim (of eyes). ukauka(to) suru be heedless, lazy.

- 9. In some expressions suru is used just like aru:
  - no aji ga suru there is a taste of, taste like.
  - no nioi ga suru there is a smell of, smell like.
  - no oto (koe) ga suru there is a sound of, sound like. inabikari ga suru it lightens.
  - yō na kokoromochi (kimochi) ga suru feel as if. naqamochi ga suru last a long time.

ji-shin ga suru (yuru) there is an earthquake.

zu- $ts\bar{u}$  ga suru have a headache.

10. The expression ni suru may mean "determine upon" (p. 134g). The same idiom may also correspond to the English "make — of —"

Kono bunshō wo hon ni shite dashimashō.

I will issue these essays in the form of a book.

- wo yōshi ni suru make an adopted son of, adopt.
- wo yome ni suru make a wife of, take to wife.
- wo ki ni suru take to heart, be concerned about.

Kono go konna koto wo shinai yō ni shimashō.

I will see to it that he does nothing of the kind hereafter. With a verb in the future tense to suru means "be about to," "intend to" (p. 180,2A). In other cases to suru means "regard as"; to sureba may be translated "taking it to be," "assuming that," "if":

Amerika ye ikō to shite Yokohama made mairimashita.

Intending to go to America, I went to Yokohama.

Kimi ga iku mono to sureba, kō iu baai ni dō suru ka.

If you were going, what would you do in such a case?

The idioms ni shite (wa) and to shite (wa) are equivalent to the English "for" and "as" in some of their uses:

·Kodomo ni shite wa yoku kaite arimasu.

It is well written for a child.

Anata wa daihyōsha to shite o hanashi ni narimasu ka.

Do you speak as a representative?

- 11. The formal, polite equivalents of suru are itasu in the first (less frequently the third) person and nasaru in the second (less frequently the third) person. Accordingly  $d\bar{o}$   $itashimash\bar{o}$  ka is more formal and polite than  $d\bar{o}$   $shimash\bar{o}$  ka;  $d\bar{o}$  nasaimashita ka, than  $d\bar{o}$  shimashita ka.
- 12. It has been stated (pp. 142, 3 and 190a) that the honorific should be prefixed to the stem of a verb with itasu or nasaru. The honorifics are naturally prefixed to any substantive that denotes the action of a person for whom respect is shown. Even in the case of the first person honorifics are in order when the act concerns a person for whom one wishes to show respect.

$o\ tomo$	ivo	suru	(itasu)	go along.

go hō-mon	"	,,		pay a call.
go shō-kai	,,	,,		introduce.
go shō-tai	:1	,.		invite.

When the personal object is stated it may take ni (or no).

But shōkai suru and shōtai suru take a direct object with wo. Observe also:

(Anata wo) Itō san ni shōkai itashimashō ka. May I introduce you to Mr. Itō? (Anata to) go issho itashimashō. I will go with you.

Vocabulary.

(Include the verbs in the above lists.)

koto-gara nature of the thing, matter, circumstances.a tori-i the characteristic portal of a Shintō shrine. uri-zane-gao oval face. b kitto surely.

a The suffix gara denotes "kind," "quality," as in gara no ii shina stuff of good quality, cloth of a good pattern, ie-gara no yoi hito a person of good family, a person of quality. With ji-setsu season gara forms an elliptical expression: Jisetsu gara o daiji ni nasai. It being such a season, take good care of your health. The following example illustrates the use of kotogara: Kotoba wa wakarimasu ga kotogara wa wakarimasen. I understand the words, but don't know what it is all about.

b See p. 15. The word sane denotes only such seeds as those of the melon or peach. The general colloquial word for "seed" is tane.

c A common notice on the streets: "Closed!" "No thoroughfare!"

d The week was used even in old times as a measure of time: hito mawari, futa mawari, etc. See Ch. XXIV.

e In the second sense kaneru is added as a suffix to the stems of verbs: mairikanemasu cannot go (or come).

shikiri ni persistently, constantly (p. 128d). tsui(ni) at last, finally. - ni tsuite in regard to.

i-rai since (following a noun or a verb in the subordinate form).

oya exclamation of surprise.

Subordinative	10 /	kikazu (shite), kikazu ni kikanaide, kikande kikanakute
Desiderative	kikitai	kikitaku nai

Alternative kiitari kikanakattari, —nandari
The double i in kiite, etc., arises from the elision of the k in kikite. Compare the following: kaku, kakite, kaite; tsuku, tsukite, tsuite; maneku, manekite, maneite; oku, okite, oite.

2. The verb yuku or iku, to go, is somewhat irregular. Such forms as yuite, yuita, etc., are not in use. From iku are derived not iite, iita, but itte, itta, etc.<sup>a</sup>

3. Some intransitive verbs of this group correspond to transitive verbs in keru. Thus the expression hi ga tsuku fire kindles corresponds to hi wo tsukeru; ki ga tsuku be attentive, to ki wo tsukeru; akai iro ga tsuite iru have a red color, to akai a These must be carefully distinguished from the corresponding forms of iru to enter, or to parch (p. 185). Also iu to say and  $y\bar{u}$  to dress (the hair) take the same inflections ordinarily, though iute, iute, iute, are also current, iro wo tsukeru to color red; ki ga ochi-tsuite iru the mind is composed, to ki wo ochitsukeru. Observe also:

kuttsuku adhere firmly.
aku open (intr.).

muku face.

katamuku incline, lean. todoku reach, arrive.

tsuzuku continue, hold out.

kuttsukeru attach firmly. akeru open (tr.).

mukeru turn.

katamukeru incline, bend. todokeru deliver, report. tsuzukeru continue, keep up.

But quite as often the relation is just the reverse, the verb in keru being a passive or intransitive form derived from the verb in ku:

hiraku open, begin, clear. kudaku break, crush.
muku peel, skin.
muku draw, extract.
saku tear, rip.
toku melt, dissolve.
toku loose, explain.
yaku burn, roast, bake.

hirakeru become civilized.
kudakeru be broken, crushed.
mukeru peel (intr.). — nukeru be extracted, escape.
sakeru be torn, ripped.
tokeru be melted, thawed.
tokeru be loosed, solved.
yakeru be burned, baked.

4. The suffix-verb meku to resemble, appear, usually in the form meite iru (oru), deserves passing notice in this connection: kodomomeite iru is childish, harumeite oru is spring-like, etc.

a From an grasp, ma rub. To shampoo or perform massage is amma wo toru or momu (rub). Professional shampooers are usually blind men or women. A shampooer who is not blind is called me-aki no amma. The amma piping shrilly in the streets to advertise his presence, especially at night, is a characteristic feature of Japanese life. In the Tokugawa era the Government organized the blind into guilds. Officially recognized blind minstrels or shampooers were called za-tō (lit. seat-head, i. e., head minstrel). "Blind person" is more exactly mō-jin; colloquial me-kura; classical me-shii.

b The ō-ban (p. 15) was a larger coin equal to ten koban.

c To lose the way is michi ni mayou, rarely michi wo mayou. One may also say: michi wo machigau.

CHAPTER LV.

The verbs oku and itadaku are often used in combination with the subordinatives of other verbs.

Oku to set, put, place, with a subordinative means "leave in that condition":

irete oku put it in (intending to leave it in).

kane wo tamete oku lay money by (tameru accumulate).

azukete oku deposit (azukeru entrust).

utchatte oku let it alone (utcharu throw away).

Sono mama ni shite okimashō. I shall let it be as it is.

Sono mama sutete okimashita.

I let it be as it was (suteru cast away).

Shitaku shite okimashō.

I will (make my preparations and) be ready.

Rusui ni kahi wo oite okimashō.a

We will put the maidservant in charge of the house.

a Oite okn is occasionally heard in the sense of "to employ," but tsukatte oku, yatotte oku, tanonde oku, etc., are more natural in this connection.

Itte oku (ittoku) koto ga aru. I have something to tell you. When oku follows a negative subordinative, it may be rendered by means of "leave" with a passive participle (p. 173d).

Itadaku (or chōdai suru) "to receive from above" with a subordinative indicates that the act denoted by the subordinated verb is for the benefit of the speaker. It may be rendered in some cases by means of "have" with the infinitive. But to bring out the deference expressed by itadaku a paraphrase is usually necessary:

Anata ni sore wo oshiete itadakitō gozaimasu.

Please teach me that (I wish to have you teach me that). The verb morau (p. 92h, Ch. LX.) is used in the same way, but itadaku is more respectful. For the use of these verbs in preferring requests compare also p. 151.

Alternative kitari konakattari, konandari kinakattari, kinandari

The briefer form ku appears in ku-beki (compare su-beki). From kuru are derived the conditional kureba and the negative imperative kuru na.

The ko in koyō, koeba, koi and the negative forms is irregular.

- 2. The imperative koi (pp. 34e, 37d, 48c) is peremptory. Familiarly one may say oide, oide na, oide yo; politely, oide nasai, irasshai.
- 3. Polite equivalents of kimasu are: for the first (or third) person, mairu (mairimasu) or agaru; for the second (or third) person, irassharu (irasshaimasu), oide nasaru, oide ni naru...
  - 4. Kuru often follows the subordinatives of other verbs:

dete kuru come out haitte kuru come in kaette kuru come back nagarete kuru come floating hette kuru decrease mashite kuru increase

Sometimes kuru with a subordinative may be translated "begin" (p. 92b):

Ame ga futte kimashita. It has begun to rain. Samuku natte kimashita. It begins to be cold.

For such expressions as "Shall I go and shut the window?" "Go and buy it," kuru with the subordinative is used (p. 88g): Mado wo shimete kimashō ka. Sore wo katte kite kure. Notice the frequent idiom: motte (tsurete) kuru (mairu, etc.) bring.b

a Notice that the stem of the verb may not be used here as in other paradigms. b A polite expression is ji-san suru (ji=motsu, san=mairu): Jisan itashimashita. I brought. Go jisan nasaimashita. You brought.

b Also aka san, or aka chan, chan being the children's equivalent of san. A baby may be called polifely o chiisai no. The term  $b\bar{o}$  is a designation common to priests, blind men and boys (p. 15a) and as a suffix means "fellow": kuromb $\bar{o}$  negro, kechimb $\bar{o}$  miser, asaneb $\bar{o}$  a late sleeper.

c Men do not now require the services of a kamiyui, since the custom of wearing the cue has been abandoned. A barber-shop is called also ri-hatsu-ten (dress-hair-shop) or zam-patsu-ya (zan cut).

d Also hi-gure, from kureru set (of the sun). The sunset itself is nichi-botsu; sunrise, nishutsu or hi-no-de. Ban-gata and yū-gata are synonymous with kure-gata.

e In the post office the technical term is  $sh\bar{u}$ -hai-nin ( $sh\bar{u} = atsumeru$ , hai = ku-baru).

To the sixth group belong verbs in bu or mu. Paradigm of yobu (stem yobi) to call:

Subordiyondenative

yobazu (shite), yobazu ni yobanaide, yobande yobanakute Desiderative yobitai yobitaku nai Alternative yondari

yobanakattari, —nandari

In forms like yonde, derived from yobite, after the elision of the i, the b is changed to n. The same change occurs in the case of verbs in mu: so that the subordinative and alternative, together with the past and its derived forms, of yomu to read are homonymous with the corresponding forms of yobu (p. 162a).

There are some verbs belonging to this group to which correspond verbs in eru having a transitive or causative sense:

itamu ache, be hurt. komu be crowded. shizumu sink, be immersed. shizumeru sink, immerse. susumu advance.

itameru injure, afflict. komeru force into. a susumeru promote, urge.

a In compounds komu may be transitive: kugi wo uchi-komu drive a nail in. Compare the verbs komoru be shut up (in hiki-komoru) and komaru be perplexed, tsumu be packed. yamu cease (as rain). yasumu rest, retire. yurumu be loose, moderate. narabu bein a row, be parallel. naraberu arrange. ukabu float.

tsumeru pack. a yameru stop, give up. yasumeru cause to rest. yurumeru loosen. ukaberu launch. b g., momu rub, momeru be rumpled, troubled.

To some transitive verbs correspond passive forms in eru, e.

The stem of the verb shinu or shinuru die is shini. In the subordinative, the past, etc., it is conjugated like the above verbs: shinde, shinda, etc., In the present ru may be added to nu (compare masuru, suru), and in derived inflections there are longer and shorter forms. Thus the probable is shinu darō or shinuru darō; the conditional, shinureba or shineba; the negative imperative, shinuru na or shinu na: adding beki we have shinu-beki or shinuru-beki. The other inflections are derived regularly from shinu: e.g., shinitai, shinō (shinan), shinanai, shine, shinumai.

b Kokoro ni ukanda it occurred [to me].

a Compare tsumaru be clogged, oppressed. These verbs must be distinguished from tsumu pile up, to which corresponds the intransitive tsumoru.

c Tsuna means a strong rope, made usually of hemp (asa). The lighter rope made of straw is nawa; if made of hemp, asa-nawa. Cord or twine is hosonawa. String or thread is ito.

d The thumb is oya-yubi, from oya parent; the index finger, hito-sashi-yubi, from hito wo sasu point out a person; the middle finger, naka-jubi, or taka-taka-jubi (children's word), from takai; the ring finger, kusuri-yubi, alluding to its use in applying salve, or beni-sashi-yubi (women's word), from beni wo sasu apply rouge; the little finger, ko-yubi. a Lit. plum-rain, i. e., rain that falls when plums are maturing. The conventional date for the rainy season is the last three weeks of June. The most common name for it is  $ny\bar{n}$ -bai  $(ny\bar{n}=iru)$ , a word which originally meant the beginning of the rainy season. Another word for bain is tsnyu, derived from tsnyu dew.

b The latter is a little more elegant than the former. The words rui and zoku form collective nouns. Comp. kin-rui, kin-zoku metals.

c Hakobu is also used intransitively in the sense of "to make progress." Tenki ga yoi to, dō shite mo shigoto ga hayaku hakobimasu. The work naturally makes rapid progress when the weather is fine. Nakanaka hakobi ga tsukimasen. Progress is slow.

a The point is that ginseng is extremely expensive. By the time a man has consumed enough to effect a cure there will be nothing left in life but a hopeless struggle against poverty.

b Known among us as the Analects of Confucius.

c Very polite: Go sompu sama wa mada go zommei de irasshaimasu ka, d Compare the proverb, p. 184a.

Imperative	kae	kau na
------------	-----	--------

The vowel preceding the u of the present tense may be a, o or u. Compare omou think, kuu or  $k\bar{u}$  eat. In the negative inflections the characteristic vowel a becomes wa. The positive subordinative, as also the past tense, etc., has two forms, omotte or  $om\bar{o}te$ , kutte or  $k\bar{u}te$ . The forms with the long vowel, such as  $k\bar{o}te$ ,  $om\bar{o}te$ ,  $k\bar{u}te$ , are more common in Kwanzei, the western provinces, than in  $Kwant\bar{o}$ . But even in  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$  a verb like tou ask is conjugated  $t\bar{o}te$ ,  $t\bar{o}ta$ , not totte, totta.

The only verb in which i precedes the u is iu say. It is conjugated itte or iute, itta or iuta, etc. The forms itte, itta are homonymous with the corresponding inflections of iku go and iru enter or iru parch (p. 221a). The verb yuu or  $y\bar{u}$  bind (the hair) is in  $Kwant\bar{o}$  inflected just like iu say.

The form iwaba (lit. if I say) has peculiar uses. It may sometimes be rendered "so to speak," "in a word," "for instance"; in some cases it is untranslatable:

Tatoete iwaba to speak by way of illustration.

Tennis wa iwaba Nihon no dakyū no yō na mono desu.

Tennis is, one might say (for instance), like Japanese  $daky\bar{u}$ .

Chanoyu wa iwaba hitotsu no nagusami no yō ni miemasu ga hontō wa seishin wo ochitsukeru jutsu desu.

Chanoyu seems like a kind of amusement, but in reality it is an art by which one composes the mind.

Forms of iu enter into many idioms in which the original sense of "say" has been obscured: — to iedomo "although" (p. 171, top); —to iu koto wa or —to iu mono wa "the" (p. 126

a Negative alternatives in naidari, such as tabenaidari, toranaidari, shinaidari, kawanaidari, etc., are not infrequently heard.

b Observe the pun in the saying: Yoku iute waruku iwaruru goke no kami. A widow is ill spoken of when she does up her hair nicely.

b); — to iu no de "on the ground that" (p. 132 bottom); a — to itte, tote, 'tte (pp. 133 top, 167 bottom); — to iu to=to, etc. Samui 'ttara nakatta. It was indescribably cold.

To the seventh group belongs also the auxiliary tamau used by students, etc., to form an imperative (p. 150): Oki tamae. Get up! If the action is requested for the benefit of the speaker kure tamae must be used: Kono tegami wo yūbinbako ni irete kure tamae. Drop this letter into a mail box, will you?

This being the last chapter on the conjugation of the verb, the student's attention may be directed to a distinction which he is now prepared to appreciate. Besides the past conditional in tara (ba), one may rarely hear a form in tareba. The two forms are commonly confused, but properly the latter indicates the connection of actual events or conditions, while the former is truly hypothetical:

Kinō hanami ni ittareba mō sakari ga sugite orimashita. Yesterday I went to see the blossoms, but they were already past their prime.

Seinen ga Tōkyō no yō na tokoro ye ittaraba yohodo chūi wo senu to tokaku shippai wo shimasu.

When a young man goes to a place like Tōkyō, he is apt to be ruined if he is not very careful.

CHAPTER LX.

The verbs morau receive, and shimau finish, often follow the subordinatives, positive or negative, of other verbs.

Morau is used just like itadaku (Ch. LV.), but is quite informal and its use should be avoided in speaking of what has been done or is to be done by the person addressed, unless that person is a subordinate or a familiar friend:

Machi ye iku nara, kono tegami wo dashite moraimashō. If you go down town, please mail this letter.

Sono hako wo akenaide moraitai. Don't open that box. Common expressions are isha ni mite morau be examined by a physician, hito ni oshiete morau be instructed by a person. The latter, however, is used rather of casual explanation or information than of regular instruction at a school. In speaking of teaching in the ordinary sense of the word osowaru or narau take the place of oshiete morau or the passive oshierareru:

Nihongo wa dare ni osowarimashita ka.

By whom were you taught Japanese?

Amerikajin ni butsurigaku wo naratta.

I studied physics under an American.

Shimau with a subordinative may sometimes be rendered by a word like "finally" or "completely"; but generally it only adds emphasis and can not be translated. Its very common use is due to the disposition of the Japanese to prefer compound verbal expressions to simple verbs. <sup>a</sup>

When I have finished writing (past-cond.) this letter, I will go out a little for a walk.

CHAPTER LXL

In Ch. LI. we gave various examples of irregular causatives. Regular causatives may be derived from any verb, excepting the auxiliary masu.

In the case of verbs of the first class saseru is added to the stem:

tabe-saseru cause to eat, allow to eat, give to eat.

In the case of verbs of the second class the characteristic vowel becomes a (wa), as in the negative conjugation, and seru is added:<sup>a</sup> shiraseru, from shiru, let — know, inform.

sumaseru, from sumu, cause — to come to an end, settle.
mataseru, from matsu, let — wait, make — stay.
motaseru, from motsu, have — hold, let — carry. b awaseru, from au, cause — to meet, join, add together.
kuwaseru, from kuu, cause — to eat, feed.

Some verbs of the first class have also a form in seru, besides the one in saseru:

misaseru let — see. miseru show. abisaseru have —bathe (intr.). abiseru pour (water) over.

a In Shintō and Christian prayers shimeru, from the classical shimu, may be substituted for seru; e. g., arashime tamae cause to be! In the classical language the common causative inflection has an honorific use: tasukeşase tamae save! b Motasete yaru send (by a person).

The shorter forms have, however, come to have special meanings and may properly be regarded as independent verbs.

The causative of suru is saseru; of kuru, kosaseru; of dekiru, dekisaseru or dekasaseru.a

The causatives are inflected like verbs of the first class; but sometimes seru may become su, the conjugation following in part the paradigm of hanasu (Ch. LI.); e. g., tabesasu, tabesashite, tabesashita for tabesaseru, tabesasete, tabesaseta.

The above examples show that causatives may be variously translated, using such words as "cause," "make," "have," "let," "allow," "see," etc. The meaning ranges all the way from the active agency expressed by "cause a man to drown" to the passive attitude indicated by "see a man drown."

Jibun wa oyogi wo shiranai mono desu kara, tasukeru koto mo dekinaide misumisu ano kodomo wo oboresasete shimai-mashita. As I don't know how to swim, I was unable to save the child and saw it drown right before my eyes.

In the case of a causative derived from a transitive verb whose direct object is expressed or clearly understood, the agent becomes the indirect object with ni; otherwise the agent takes wo:

Shafu ni niwa wo sōji sasero.

Have the rikshaman clean the garden.

Hito wo warawaseru make a person laugh.

Oya wo nakaseru cause the parents to weep.

As in English one may use language inexactly; e. g., ie wo tateru build a house, for ie wo tatesaseru have a house built, kimono wo koshiraeru make clothes, for kimono wo koshiraesaseru, etc.

CHAPTER LXII.

The passive and the potential forms of Japanese verbs are usually the same, both having been formed originally by adding the syllable e, stem of eru (classical uru, u) to get.<sup>2</sup> The identity of the two forms may be illustrated by means of the English sentence: "Silk sells well," which may be understood to mean either that much silk is sold or that one can easily sell silk. The original Japanese idiom in both cases is: "Silk gets sale." Kinu wa yoku ureru (for uri-eru).<sup>b</sup>

Attention has previously been called to intransitives in eru derived from transitive verbs, as hirakeru become civilized, from hiraku (p. 222). Such verbs may for the purposes of this chapter be classed as irregular. They are, like irregular verbs in any language, very much used, and for this reason are easy to memorize.

It is to be observed, by the way, that verbs of this kind as passives may be predicated of inanimate things, while regular passives are naturally used when the subject is a person. Some of them are also used in a passive potential sense; e. g., toreru be taken, be obtainable, from toru. shireru be known, be evident, from shiru. ureru be sold, be salable, from uru. kaeru be bought, be purchasable, from kau. kikoeru be heard, be audible, from kiku. mieru be seen, be visible, from miru.

Generally they may also be used of a personal subject as active a The verb eru is not much used in the colloquial, being usually replaced by other verbs, such as morau, ukeru, kōmuru, tamawaru, etc. It occurs in: Mata ori wo ete ukagaimashō. I will call again when I have an opportunity. Go sansei wo etai to omoimasu. I desire your approval.

b Compare the adverb yamuoezu unavoidably, from yamu wo ezu (lit. not getting stop).

c In dealing with the Japanese language such a distinction must be made with some allowance. As has been hinted before (p. 116a), the genius of the language does not demand the expression or even the clear conception of the subject of a sentence. Moreover, as has been suggested, a sentence may have a double subject, a personal subject with wa and a subordinate impersonal subject with ga. But what is said above is correct if we have in mind the true subject of a passive verb, that is, the direct object of the action denoted by it.

potentials in the senses "can get," "be in a position to know," etc., a but as passives they cannot be used of a personal subject. b The following examples illustrate the manner in which they are used:

Yohodo tema ga toremasu ka. Will much time be required? Tetsudō-kōfu wa taisō kane ga toremasu.

Railroad laborers earn a great deal of money.

Jōzu na ryōshi (ni) wa sō iu sakana de mo toremasu.

An expert fisherman can catch even such fish.

Yoku shirete iru koto desu. It is a well known fact.

Shimbun ni de mo kwōkoku wo dasanakereba hito ni shiremasumai. If we do not advertise in a newspaper or something, it will hardly become public.

Watashi ni wa tōtei sō iu komakai koto wa shiremasumai. I am hardly in a position to know such details.c

We will now confine our attention to the regular passive forms, used only when the subject is a person. In the case of verbs of the first class the passive is derived by adding rareru to the stem, i. e., substituting it for the ru of the present tense:

togame-rareru be blamed, from togame-ru.

In the case of verbs of the second class the characteristic vowel becomes a (wa), as in the negative and causative forms, and reru is added:

nusumareru be robbed, from nusumu. shikarareru be scolded, from shikaru. kirawareru be disliked, from kirau.

There is no passive form of the suffix masu.

a See the following chapter. When kikoeru and mieru are used as active potentials it is natural for them to take a subordinate subject: mimi ga kikoeru, me ga mieru. The verb kikoeru may be used also of other than physical possibility: Sore wa domo kikoeuai koto desu. Really, that is unreasonable talk.

b The verb mieru in some of its senses is an exception. In the sense of "to be present" it may be used of a person, though not of the speaker himself: Sensei ga miemashita ka. Has the teacher come? Kinō o mie nasaimasen deshita, ne. You didn't put in an appearance yesterday. In the sense of "to look" it may be used in any person: Taisō fukete miemasu deshō. I presume I look quite old. O toshi hodo ni wa miemasen. You don't look as old as you are. The verb shireru may be used of the discovery of a criminal.

c In these examples observe the tendency to use ni wa with the personal subject and to avoid making the thing an object with wo. The verbs are properly neither passives nor potentials, but intransitives.

The passive of suru is serareru or sareru:

Shakkin wo saisoku sarete komarimasu.

I am annoyed by being dunned for debts.

The passive of such a verb as kinzuru or kinjiru (p. 214,7) is kinjirareru or kinzerareru, not kinzareru.

Passives may be derived from causatives; e. g., awaserareru or awasareru, from awaseru or awasu cause to meet, introduce:

Hidoi me ni awascrareta (awasareta).

He (or I) was caused to meet with a dreadful experience. Sake wo ogoraserareta (ogorasareta).

He (or I) was compelled to set up the sake.

The passive of kuru come is korareru. It is a peculiarity of the language that passives can be formed from intransitives:

Kyaku ni korareta had visitors.

Teishu ni shinareta lost her husband (shinu die). Ame ni furaretà was rained upon (ame ga furu).

These examples show also that the person or thing that would be the subject in the active construction takes the particle ni (less commonly kara or no tame ni) in the passive.

A passive verb may have an object:

Suri ni kane wo toraremashita.

He was robbed of his money by a pickpocket.

Mune wo uchi-nukareta was shot through the breast.

The passive is not used as much in Japanese as in English. As has been said above, regular passives cannot ordinarily be predicated of inanimate things.<sup>a</sup> An active verb often takes the place of an English passive:<sup>b</sup>

Mada Tōkyō wo Edo to mōshimashita koro.

When Tōkyō was still called Edo.

a This does not apply to the literary language: Waga kōshikwan wa Shinajin ni yakaretari. Our legation was burned by the Chinese. A few exceptions are to be found also in genuine colloquial: Shiro ga torareta. A castle was taken. Sono ki wa tōtō kirarete shimaimashita. That tree was at last cut down. Tetsu de mo ensan ni wa tokasarete shimaimasu. Even iron can be dissolved by hydrochloric acid.

b Compare the examples on p. 53. In English the passive is often preferred to the active because it is unnecessary or inconvenient to name the agent, as in the case of the small boy who tells his mother: "My pants got torn." An active verb in Japanese requires no subject and in this respect may be quite as vague as a passive.

Again, English passives are often represented by intransitive verbs or Chinese compounds.

Ya ni atatte uchijini shimashita.

He fell struck by an arrow.

Fune ga hasen shimashita. The ship was wrecked (p.89h). An intransitive verb often differs in sense from the regular passive derived from the same stem. Thus, tasukaru means "escape with one's life," but tasukerareru means "be saved":

Sendō wa tasukebune de tasukarimashita.

The sailors escaped in a lifeboat.

Tasukebune ni tasukeraremashita.

They were saved by a lifeboat.

In some cases a verb like ukeru or  $k\bar{o}muru$  may perform the function of a passive inflection: hazukashime (or bu-joku) wo ukeru be insulted = hazukashimerareru or bu-joku sareru.

yobi-dashi wo ukeru be summoned (by a court of justice). i-rai wo ukeru be requested.

kō-qeki wo ukeru be attacked.

shi-ken wo ukeru be examined.

meshi wo kōmuru be called (Christian phrase).

batsu wo kōmuru be punished.

go men wo kōmuru be excused.

kan-kwa wo kōmuru be influenced.

Some substantives like those with which suru is used to form active verbs may with ni naru convey a passive sense:

(o) sewa ni naru, (go) yakkai ni naru be assisted. men-shoku ni naru be discharged.

go chisō ni naru be entertained (polite 1, 3).

The verb omowareru in the sense "the thought occurs to me" may be construed either as a potential or as a passive. Compare "methinks." It is also used as an ordinary passive:

Hito ni yoku omowareru hito desu.

He is a person well thought of by others.

CHAPTER LXIII.

The regular potential, denoting possibility, is identical in form with the regular passive described in the previous chapter:

a The pronouns, of course, are not to be translated.

b An island between Japan and Corea.

c In Chikuzen, the province on the south side of the Straits of Shimonoseki. In ancient times Dazaifu was the residence of the governor of Kyūshū.

d Along the coast of Chōshū, near Shimonoseki. It was in 1185 the scene of a decisive naval battle between the houses of Gen.ji (Minamoto) and Hei-ke (Taira).

tabe-rareru be able to eat, from tabe-ru.
mi-rareru be able to see, from mi-ru.
urareru be able to sell, from uru.
tatareru be able to stand, from tatsu.
itadakareru be able to receive, from itadaku.
awareru be able to meet, from au. <sup>2</sup>

Besides the form in (a)reru there is, in the case of verbs of the second class, <sup>b</sup> a shorter one in (e)ru derived by changing the characteristic vowel to e and adding ru. Thus from iku go we have ikareru or ikeru; from iu say, iwareru or ieru. The longer form is rather more polite in speaking of another person. The longer form is especially to be preferred when the idea of being permitted to do a thing is to be expressed:

Kono tabako wa karakute nomemasen (or nomaremasen). This tobacco is so strong that I can't smoke it.

Tetsudōbasha no naka de wa tabako wo nomaremasen (not nomemasen). One may not smoke in a street car. d

The potentials of kuru and suru are also identical in form with the passives. But there is not much use for serareru (sareru), the construction with suru koto ga dekiru or simply dekiru taking its place.

Anshō (suru koto) ga dekimasen. I can't memorize it.

While uncontracted potential forms are inflected like verbs of the first class, contracted forms like makaru (p. 181) and mōkaru, from mōkeru gain, belong to the second.

The subject of a potential verb is naturally a person (or animal), because the idea of will is involved. In speaking of things a The most explicit and emphatic expression of potentiality is found in the idiom koto ga (wa) dekiru.

b In some of the provinces verbs of the first class too have two potential forms; e. g., from obseru remember, learn, observareru and observeru.

c Kikoeru and mieru (p. 260b) are irregular. The form kikeru belongs to the verb kiku be efficacious (p. 221). Itō wa kuchi ga kikeru mono da kara, ano mura de wa ibatte imasu. Ito, being eloquent, is carrying himself high in that township. In the sense of "tolerable to the ear" kikeru may also serve as a potential of kiku hear: Piano wo are gurai hikeba, mā, kikeru sa, ne.

d In previous treatises on the grammar of the colloquial the fine distinction between physical possibility and moral possibility, between "can" and "may," has received more emphasis than the facts warrant. Very few Japanese are aware of the distinction.

the simple indicative is sufficient: Kore mo hairimasu. This too can go in. But one may also say:

Ki ga sodatenai. Trees can't grow.

Kisha ga ugokenai (or hashirenai).

The train can't move (can't run).

Fune ga susumenai (or tōrenai).

The boat can't advance (can't pass).

Sonna koto ga araremashō ka. Arareyō hazu ga nai.

Can such a thing be? It can't be. a

With a potential, as with a desiderative (p. 176, middle), the word which is the object in English may take ga instead of wo.

Besides the passive and the potential uses of the longer forms in (a) reru there is an honorific use; e. g., shinareru for shinuru, kinzerareru for kinzuru, korareru for kuru, nasaru for nasu, kudasaru for kudasu, irassharu for iru, kuru, or yuku, etc. The last is from iraserareru, the honorific form of the causative of iru, the causative also having had an honorific use. These honorific forms differ from the corresponding simple verbs only in being used of the acts of exalted personages or of those whom one wishes to honor.

d In solving an English conundrum we usually have to explain why two given things are similar, i. e., may be described by means of the same words. In a Japanese conundrum only one of the two things is named and the other must be found. The question here is: "What is like a poor conundrum?" The answer is: "Tangled hair." Kokoro means "sense," "explanation." It is quite usual to prefix to a negative potential verb the indicative of the same verb with ni. Literally toku ni to karenu may be rendered: "in explaining you can't explain," or "when you try to explain (untangle), you can't explain (untangle).

CHAPTER LXIV.

This chapter will treat of certain peculiar idiomatic uses of the indicative forms of verbs. <sup>a</sup>

1. A verb, like an adjective, may be made a substantive by adding no. A substantivized verb may have either a concrete or an abstract sense.

In the former case the no is is equivalent to mono or koto. b Such particles as wa, ga, ni, wo, mo, de may be added:

Sashidasu no wo te ni totte mimashita.

I took into my hands what was presented and examined it. Sakujitsu itta no wa machigai deshita.

What I said yesterday was a mistake.

Observe the idiom to in no wa (or ga, etc.) "what is called," "the expression," "the assertion that." d

Ainu to iu no wa Ezo no dojin no koto desu.

The Ainu are the aborigines of Ezo.

Konna shigoto de kane wo mōkeyō to iu no wa okashii ja arimasen ka. Is n't it ridiculous to talk about making money in such a business?

A substantivized verb usually has an abstract sense, denoting merely the idea of the action or state expressed by the verb. The no desu, ordinarily contracted to n' desu, which occurs so a Re-read the introductions to chapters XIX. and XXXVII.

b In such expressions as Mita koto ga arimasen. I have not seen it, no may not be substituted for koto. Mita no ga arimasen would mean "There is no one that has seen it."

c In the literary style these particles may be added immediately to the verb. See the second sentence in the Japanese exercises.

d In defining a word or explaining a phrase to in no wa is often contracted to to wa, but this has rather a literary flavor.

often at the conclusion of a sentence is in many instances a mere flourish. But no desu may also add something to the sense. Thus while Ame ga furimashō, furu deshō, and furu n' deshō do not differ appreciably, the expression furu no deshō plainly implies that the statement is meant to be an explanation of a given condition of things, as, for example, of an oppressive atmosphere. Note also:

Amerika ye iku n' desu. He is to go to America.

Amerika ye iku n' deshita. He was to go to America.

Ano toki ni byōki de nakereba watakushi mo itta n' desu.

At that time, if I had not been sick, I should have gone too. Here itta n' desh'ta would indicate still more strongly that it had been definitely decided to go. But itta n' desu may also be a mere circumlocution for itta he has gone.

One may even hear such expressions as:

Sō iu n' ja nai n' da. It isn't so. It is a mistake. a

In familiar talk, especially among women, no may be used elliptically for no desu or no desu ka, the accent showing whether the sentence is an assertion or a question:

Kasa ga aru no. Have you an umbrella?

Aru no (yo). I have.

After an indicative no ni may have an adversative sense (pp. 149 and 193f). But no ni may also have other meanings, as in the following examples:

Koko kara Kōbe ye iku no ni (wa) ōyoso ichi jikan hodo kakarimasu.

It takes about one hour to go from here to Kōbe.

Naze to iu no ni me ga warukute ji ga yomenai kara desu. The reason is that my eyes are so bad that I cannot read. Watakushi ga (or no) omoimasu no ni (wa) go shatei san no hō ga o warui yō desu. In my opinion your younger brother seems to be in the wrong.

a Taking to iu in the sense of "such," this sentence may also be rendered: They are not of that kind. Compare:  $S\bar{o}$  iu  $(y\bar{o})$  na) no ga  $\bar{o}i$ . There are many such.  $S\bar{o}$  iu n' ja nai (yo) may also mean: You must not say so. The writer once heard a man scold a cooly like this: Kisama  $s\bar{o}$  iu koto wo iu mon' ja nai ja nai ka. Don't you know that it is unbecoming for you to talk like that?

Sensei no iu no ni (wa) Doitsu ni mo tsuru ga oru to iu koto desu. According to what my teacher says, there are storks in Germany also.

In these examples no may be omitted.

2. In certain connections verbs may take wa, ga, etc., without koto, mono, or no. In Aru koto wa arimasu the koto may be omitted. <sup>a</sup>

Motte kuru ga ii. You had better bring[it](p. 150, bottom). Yomu ni (wa) tarimasen. It is not worth reading.

Miru ni (wa) oyobimasen. It is not necessary to look at it.

Koraeru ni koraerarenu. One cannot endure it (p. 270d).

Kakusu ni kakusarenai. It cannot be hid.

In ni iwarenai kanashimi. Unutterable sorrow. Desu (rarely da) may be added to a predicate verb:

Sō itte mo wakaru desu. Such an expression is understood. In the same way ja nai ka or de wa gozaimasen ka (p. 191b) may be used. One must not say Wakatta desu or Wakaru deshita. But there is a growing tendency to use expressions like the former; e. g., Sō itta desu. Deshita is regularly used with the negative of the auxiliary masu: Sō iimasen deshita.

It is used only in familiar conversation. In a question kke indicates a conviction that the event occurred even though there is doubt about the exact circumstances. a In this sentence aratamatta toki ni means: when one is serious and formal, i. e., not familiar.

b Notice that when a positive sentence ending in da, desu, etc., is turned into a negative, de may be dispensed with: O wakari ga nakatta kara since you did not understand (positive: o wakari deshita). For a congratulatory gift it is usual to send raw fish, but since raw fish spoils easily (waruku nariyasui) many send other things. What is the difference between wa and ga (What they call wa and what they call ga, what sort of distinction is there)?

CHAPTER LXV.

The uses of the stems of verbs with auxiliaries have been explained in previous chapters. Some other idiomatic uses of stems will now be described.

1. Many substantives are originally stems of verbs; e.g., samurai, from samurau serve,  $t\bar{o}ri$  thoroughfare, from  $t\bar{o}ru$  pass through. Comp. pp. 22, top and 119, bottom. Stems of verbs, a A sentence beginning with — no omou ni wa or — no kangae de wa ends with an expression like yō desu.

b Characters, not Chinese, said to have been used in prehistoric times — in "the age of the gods" (jin god, dai age).

c The middle provinces (chū-goku) are the eight westernmost provinces of the main island.

as substantives, often take the place of English verbs, especially in formal conversation:

O tanomi no hon the book for which you asked (p. 193a).  $\overline{O}$  se no  $t\bar{o}ri$  as you say (p. 209a).

Go zonji no tori as vou know.

Go zonji de wa (or ga) arimasen ka.

Don't you know about it?

Go zonji no hazu desu. You ought to know.

Oide no jibun ni when you (he) were here (were there, came, went, come, go).

Oide wo negainasu. I beg you to come.

Mō o kaeri desu ka. Are you going home so soon? a

O wakari deshita ka. Did you understand?

Stems of verbs often occur elliptically in proverbial expressions; e. g., Setsunai toki no kamidanomi praying to the gods in time of distress.

2. In speaking of the actions of others one may use the stem of any simple verb with the honorific o and ni naru:

O wakari ni narimashita ka. Did you understand? O me-zame ni narimashita ka. Are you awake? Itsu o taehi ni narimasu ka. When do you start?

Jōyaku-kaisei wa o yame ni narimashita.

The revision of the treaty has been given up.

3. With verbs that denote an act done in order that a certain purpose may be accomplished,— such verbs as "go" "come" "send," etc.,— the purpose may be expressed by the stem of a verb with ni. This may have an object. It is to be translated by means of the infinitive:

Isha wo yobi ni iku go to call a physician.

Sumō wo mi ni iku go to see the wrestling.

O kuyami ni agaru come to condole.

O yorokobi ni agaru come to congratulate.

4. When a verb stands in antithesis to another or is to be a A riksha man when he has brought some one home shouts at the gate: O kaerii. One in the house may then say to another: O kaeri desu (yo). The one who has come home is greeted with the words: O kaeri nasaimashi.

b With Chinese compounds the stem of suru is not required. "To come to see the sights" is kembutsu ni kuru, more commonly than kembutsu shi ni kuru.

emphasized, the stem may be used with wa (in rapid speech ya) and suru (p. 249a):

Shini wa shimasumai. He will not die.

Wakari wa shimasu ga ... I understand. but ....

Sonna shina wa arya (for ari wa) shinai.

There are no such things.

In a conditional clause, as in "If you just understand that's enough," the particle sae<sup>2</sup> may be substituted for wa: Wakari sae sureba ii. Ari sae sureba sashiagemasu ga ... I would give it if I had it, but .... Similarly the stem may be used in clauses translated by means of "both—and," "neither—nor":

Nihon no ji wo yome mo suru shi b kake mo shimasu.

He can both read and write Japanese.

Gozen mo taberaremasen shi, nerare mo shimasen.

I can neither eat nor sleep.

Ano byōnin wa nomi mo kui mo shinai kara, shinimashō. That patient will die, since he neither eats nor drinks.

5. Observe the following emphatic expressions:

O kaeri nasaru no wo machi ni matte imashita.

We were waiting and waiting for his return.

Korae ni koraete kurushii no wo gaman shite otta.

I have borne the suffering to the utmost limit of endurance.

Soroi mo sorotte fushigi na hitotachi bakari da.

They are queer people without exception.

6. The stem of a verb may be joined to certain words, such as nagara c or shi-dai (lit succession-order), which are used like conjunctions to form adverbial phrases:

Hon wo yomi nagara while reading a book.

Habakari nagara (or desu ga), kore wo negaimasu.

With great diffidence I make this request.

a Sae may also be used with other substantives: Kane sae areba donna koto de mo dekiru. You can do anything, if only you have money.

b For suru shi the simple stem shi may stand here (comp. p. 14d). Yome and kake are stems of potentials.

c See p. 197c. This nagara is also used with the negative stem in zu: Oyobazu nagara o tetsudai itashimashō. I will assist to the best of my poor ability (lit. though not reaching). The word nagara originally meant "actual condition," as in umare-nagara no mekura one born blind.

Deki shidai motte kimashō.

He will bring it as soon as it is done.

The idiom — to wa ii nagara is equivalent to "though":

Ainu wa yabanjin to wa ii nagara nakanaka shigoto ga takumi desu.

The Ainu, though barbarians, are skilful workmen.

Adjectives are formed by adding sō to the stem of a verb:
 Mō ame ga yamisō desu. The rain seems to be stopping.
 Nan to ka shiyō ga arisō na mon' desu.

I hope it may be managed somehow (p. 115, middle).

8. In long sentences, especially in formal speech or in narratives, the stem may take the place of the subordinative (p. 187d). This feature is derived from the literary language, in which the verbs of coordinated clauses, with the exception of the concluding clause, are in the form of the stem. In negative clauses the form in zu corresponds to the stem (p. 171).

Observe the idioms — wo hajime and — to ii:

Kōchō wo hajime shosei made mo kimashita. The whole school, from the principal down to the students, came. Kotoba-zukai to ii, mi-buri to ii, ketten no nai enzetsuka da. Both in his use of words and in his gestures he is a faultless orator.

CHAPTER LXVI.

Compound verbs are very numerous. Some are derived from a noun and a verb:

katazukeru lay aside, from kata side, tsukeru affix, put.

motozuku be based on, from moto base.

namidagumu be moved to tears, from namida tears, fukumu contain.

negiru beat down the price, from ne price, kiru cut.

toshiyoru or toshitoru become aged, from toshi year, yoru gather, toru take.

Others are derived from an adjective and a verb:

nagabiku be protracted, from nagai long, hiku draw.

tōzakeru kcep at a distance, withdraw from, from tōi far, sakeru avoid (also — ni tōzakaru).

atsusugiru be too hot (p. 106).

amanzuru, amanjiru relish, be satisfied, from amai sweet.

With the last compare omonzuru and karonzuru, p. 215.

The suffix garu is much used to form compounds with the stems of adjectives and desideratives:

hoshigaru desire (p. 152a). omoshirogaru feel interested in. ikitagaru want to go (p. 176). hairitagaru want to enter. The verb buru a "puton airs" enters into some compounds:

gakushaburu pose as a scholar.

takaburu be arrogant, boast, from takai high.

Most numerous are the compounds derived from two verbs. As we have before observed (p. 251a), the Japanese language has no prefixes or prepositions by means of which compound verbs may be formed, as in European languages. Consequently a This buru is related to furi air, appearance, in otoko-buri ga yoi, onna-buri ga yoi is handsome. Note also the suffix baru, from haru stretch, extend: kowa-baru be stiff, from kowai hard, i-baru be haughty, yoku-baru be avaricious, gishiki-baru be excessively formal, etc.

in very many cases one of the two verbs in a compound serves as a kind of auxiliary to the other and in not a few instances is practically meaningless. Accordingly we divide compound verbs, somewhat arbitrarily, into three classes: (a) those in which the components are correlative; (b) those in which the second component serves to modify the sense of the first; and (c) those in which the first modifies the second. One can not always be sure to which class a given compound should be assigned; but the distinction is practically helpful.

A. Usually transitive verbs are joined with transitive, and intransitive with intransitive. But the components often differ and then usage rather than grammar must be consulted in determining the voice (pp. 203a, 239a).

atehameru apply, from ateru hit, hameru fit.
hipparu (hikiharu) pull and stretch, bring along.
iiharu insist, from iu say, haru stretch.
kakitoru note down, write at dictation.
kamikudaku crunch, from kamu bite, kudaku crush.
ketsumazuku stumble, from keru kick, tsumazuku stumble.a surimuku rub off, abrade, skin, from suru rub, muku peel.
tsukikorosu stab (or gore) to death, from tsuku pierce.
ukeau guarantee, from ukeru receive, au meet.
ukeou contract for, from ou carry.

In Kwanzei compounds with oru are formed, corresponding to the subordinative with iru or oru (p. 163): ikioru (also pronounced ikiyoru) is going (but itte oru is gone). This idiom is derived from the literary language.

B. In the second class we include a number of verbs which as suffixes form well defined groups of compounds. In many instances either the intransitive or the transitive form may be used. Thus to "commence to rain" is either furikakaru or furikakeru; "happen to be on hand" is ariau or ariawaseru. The following list is not a complete one.

a In the literary language the stem of keru is ke. Comp. ke-mari football. In the colloquial keru belongs to the second class (Ch. XLVIII.).

b Some apparently simple verbs were originally compounds: dekiru, from deru and kuru; hairu, from hau creep and iru enter; mochiiru, from motsu have and iru be.

1. Ageru, agaru: (a) "up," i. e., "upward"; (b) "up," i. e., "completely"; (e) a polite termination.

kuriageru move up, carry for- kakiageru finish writing. a reel.

miageru look up to.

nobiagaru stretch one's self dekiagaru be finished. up, straighten up.

tobiagaru fly up, jump up. okiagaru rise up.

tsukeagaru "be stuck up."

2. Au, awaseru: (a) "mutually"; (b) "together"; (c) "happen to."

tasukeau help each other (p. ochiau come together (of riv-58).

niramiau glare at each other, from niramu stare.

shiriau be mutually acquainted.

toriau take hold of each other, kikiawaseru gather informapay attention.

tsukiau associate, become acquainted.

miawaseru look at each other (kao wo), forego, give up.

deau meet on the road. komiau be crowded together.

ward, rearrange, from kuru shiageru, yariageru finish.b shibariageru tie up, from shibaru tie.

möshiageru tell.c

kaiageru purchase (on the part of the Government). d meshiagaru take (food, etc.).

ers or of persons), from ochiru fall.

sureau be rubbed together, chafe, be on bad terms, pass in close proximity.

tion, inquire.

moshiawaseru reachanagreement.

dekiau happen to be finished, be ready made.

ariau, ariawaseru happen to be on hand, e

These verbs may be used with the postpositions ni and to. Those into which awaseru enters may also take objects with wo.

a Compare the older compound kakageru hoist, publish, inscribe. The verb kaku means also "scratch."

b Yariageru cannot be used in the sense "put on a finishing touch," Yariageru may also mean "get up in the world."

c Compare o age mosu give.

d The opposite is urisageru, used, for instance, of selling postage stamps. Another verb, haraisageru, is used of selling property which the Government no longer needs. Comp. p. 184d.

e These compounds usually occur in the form of the adjectives dekiai no and ariai no or ariawase no,

3. Chigau, chigaeru: (a) "differently"; (b) "mistakenly." ikichigau go in opposite directions without meeting. surechigau pass closely on the road. kikichigau, kikichigaeru hear incorrectly, mishear. omoichigau, omoichigaeru misapprehend, misconjecture  $(-wo-to\ omoichigau\ mistake-for-).$

nigedasu escape, run awav.

5. Hateru, hatasu: "completely," "utterly."

akirehateru be utterly astonished (and disgusted), from akireru be surprised.

korihateru be taught a good lesson, from koriru be warned, punished (comp. korashimeru chastise).

shinihateru die out (of a family).

yowarihateru be utterly exhausted, nonplussed.

tsukaihatasu use up.

6. Iru, ireru: (a) "in"; (b) a suffix, originally intensive, added to some verbs of feeling (iru only).

semeiru enter forcibly, from osoreiru be much obliged, be overwhelmed by another's semeru assault. condescension (p. 193g). kaiireru buy in, buy up.

kakiireru write in, mortgage. hajiiru be very much ashamed. kanjiiru feel great admiration. shiireru lay in (goods). yobiireru call in.

CHAPTER LXX.

In previous chapters attention has been called to the propriety of using certain special verbs and special inflections in speaking to superiors or to those to whom one wishes to show respect. A little attention to the original sense of an honorific expression is often sufficient to explain its usage. Thus yonde ageru (p. 84f) is more polite than yonde yaru (p. 289c), because ageru means properly "lift up"; oshiete itadaku (p. 227) is more respectful than oshiete morau (p. 250), because the original meaning of itadaku is "put on the head." There are also honorific inflections, as in nasaru, from nasu, and irassharu, from iru (pp.181, 268), changing ordinary verbs into forms which it would be utterly ridiculous to use of one's self.

Polite verbs may be divided into two classes, humiliatives and evaltatives.

1. There are humble verbs which are used properly in the first person.

Such a verb is mosu say (p. 207a). Mosu may also be used in the third person, to show respect to the one addressed. It may even be used in the second person, either when it is desired to impress upon the one addressed the fact that he is inferior or when the one addressed is not a superior and his act concerns a very exalted personage. But these are rare exceptions to the rule that verbs of the humble class are not used in the second person. The student will remember that in the sense of "do" mosu is also used with stems of verbs a together with the honorific o, and that itasu is used with stems of verbs and o, or with Chinese compounds with or without go (p. 216, 12). The very formal tsukamatsuru is used just like itasu, though less frequently; e.g., Do tsukamatsurimash'te (comp. p. 218d). A still rarer variant is tatematsuru (lit. offer), borrowed from the literary language for use (without o) in prayer and in speaking of what is done to or for the Sovereign.

The humble expression for "receive" is itadaku or chōdai itasu, used also in a peculiar way with subordinatives as described in Ch. LV. Another humble term is kōmuru, used of favors or commands. Still another is tamawaru, used of favors or gifts. The compound uketamawaru is used only in the sense of "hear."

"See" is hai-ken itasu, from hai=ogamu, ken=miru, used of the possessions of others, letters from others, etc. b Compare hai-shaku borrow, from shaku=kariru. "Show" is go ran ni ireru or o me ni kakeru (p. 44a). O me ni kakaru means "meet."

Mōshiageru means properly "say." It is used like mōsu. In some localities it may also be used in the sense of "give," but this is a provincialism. "Give" is sashiageru or shin-jō itasu (shin-tei itasu, tei-jō itasu).

"Go" or "come" is mairu; "go" or "come" to the house of a Mōsu differs from itasu in that its use is limited to acts affecting the one addressed. In a few instances it may be used with go and a Chinese compound, but not when the compound is in itself honorific; e. g., go annai mōsu, or go shōkai mōsu, but never chōdai mōsu, or haiken mōsu.

b Haiken itasu may not be used of seeing a person; but a physician will say: Go yōtai wo haiken itashimashō, or even: Go byōnin wo haiken itashimashō. One may also say: Kondo o umare nas'tta o ko san wo haiken itashitai.

the one addressed is agaru; e. g., o rei ni agaru come to express one's obligations, o kuyami ni agaru come to condole, o yorokobi ni agaru come to congratulate. The formal verbs sanzuru (san = mairu) and san-jō itasu are synonymous with agaru, and so is the rather rare makari-ideru, makari being a prefix taken from the classical language.

LXX

2. There are also verbs that are used to exalt the person addressed, or a third person.

The student is already familiar with the uses of nasaru, kudasaru and ni naru (pp. 190, 278). The very formal asobasu (lit. cause to play) or asobasareru is used just like nasaru; especially by ladies. The exaltative corresponding to tatematsuru is tamau (but see also p. 246, top).

"Use" is mesu (lit. summon); e. g., ride in rikshas, etc., is kuruma ni mesu, put on clothes is kimono wo mesu, take a bath is o yu wo mesu or o yu ni mesu. "Eat," "drink" or "smoke" is agaru or meshi-agaru.

"See" is go ran nasaru. The old contracted form gorōzuru or gorōjiru is now rare, except in theaters.

"Say" is ossharu, derived from the now rare verb ōseru. It should be noted that the honorific form of mōsu, mōsareru, is polite even in the second person.

For "go," "come," "be," we have irassharu or oide nasaru (p. 190). Of the Emperor the words (o) mi-yuki or gyō-kō nasaru (ni naru, asobasareru, etc.) are used; of the Empress or Crown Prince, (o) miyuki or gyō-kei (gyō=yuku).

"Retire," "go to bed" is gyo-shin ni naru, commonly contracted to geshinaru, from gyo, a variant of go, and shin = neru go to bed.

Note that there is a limit to the reduplication of honorifies. Thus we may say irasshaimashi and irasshitte kudasai, but not a For the use of mesu as a prefix see the previous chapter. Mesu also occurs as a suffix in the honorific oboshimesu deign to think, which is used in the colloquial, especially in the form oboshimeshi thought. The verb kikoshimesu deign to hear has passed from the sense of "hear," to that of "govern," and from this to the sense of "eat" or "drink," which it now has in the colloquial. One may say ironically: Suzuki kun wa ippai kikoshimeshite imasu kara, nakanaka genki ga yō gozaimasu. Suzuki is animated, having taken a drink. The verb shiroshimesu deign to know does not appear in the colloquial except rarely in the sense of "govern."

irasshari nasai or irasshari ni natte itadakitai. It should be remembered that in very formal speech the ending masuru is more appropriate than masu.

THE ADVERB. 4

CHAPTER LXXI.

Adverbs may be divided into the following groups:

- 1. Adverbial forms of adjectives ending in i.
- 2. Adverbs formed by means of the particle ni.
- 3. Adverbs formed by means of the particle to.
- 4. Duplicatives.
- 5. Substantives used as adverbs of time, place, degree, etc.
- 6. Subordinatives of certain verbs.
- 7. Ordinary adverbs.

In general it is to be observed that the Japanese often employs adverbs where the English does not (Ch XVIII.), and vice versa.

On the formation of adverbs from adjectives proper see Chapters XI. and XXX. Sometimes the contracted form, as, for instance,  $y\bar{o}$  for yoku, is used with other verbs besides gozaimasu, while the uncontracted form in ku is sometimes used with gozaimasu:

Yō oide nasaimashita. Welcome! b

Takaku wa gozaimasen. It is not at all dear.

The adverb yoku is used in various senses:

Yoku irasshaimashita. I am glad you came.

Yoku kimasu. He comes often.

Yoku wa shirimasen ga I don't know exactly, but...

Yoku nite imasu. It is very much like it.

Yoku anata wa Nihongo wo wasuremasen.

It is remarkable that you don't forget your Japanese.

The adverb yoku enters into a few compounds:

hodo-yoku agreeably, satisfactorily, moderately.

ori-yoku opportunely (opp. ori-ashiku).

shubi-yoku successfully, from shu-bi head and tail. tsugō-yoku conveniently.

a Fuku-shi, from fuku = soeru add,

b The particle koso is often inserted here for emphasis: Yo koso oide kudasaimash'ta.

Adverbial expressions are frequently formed by combining naku with substantives. The addition of mo "even" makes them emphatic:

ma-mo-naku immediately, from ma interval.

hodo (mo) naku "in no time," from hodo quantity.

wake-mo-naku unreasonably, exceedingly, from wake reason. machigai (mo) naku, sō-i (mo) naku without fail, surely. itashikata (mo) naku, ze-hi (mo) naku (comp. p. 160a) perforce, of necessity.

omoigake (mo) naku unexpectedly, from omou and kakeru. oshiqe-mo-naku ungrudgingly, from oshii regrettable and ke in keshiki appearance.

oyami (mo) naku incessantly (of rain), from o little and yami pause.

taema (mo) naku uninterruptedly, from tae-ma cessation. (go) en-ryo (mo) naku without reserve.

tohō-mo-naku extraordinarily, outrageously, from to way  $h\bar{o}$  direction.

zō-sa (mo) naku without trouble, easily.

Corresponding adjectives in nai are also in use. a Note also nan-to-naku, for nan to iu koto (or wake) mo naku, without any special reason, not knowing why or how.

In the cases of some adverbs in ku the corresponding adjectives are wanting or occur only in the literary language:

shibaraku (=classical shibashi) for some time, for a while. sukoshiku=sukoshi a little, somewhat.

kotogotoku altogether, entirely, thoroughly.

 $gotoku = y\bar{o} \ ni$  as, like (an no gotoku as was expected).

The particle ni is often added, pleonastically, to gotoku.

Observe the idiom in osoroshii takai shina, tohōmonai takai mono, where we should expect the adverbial forms osoroshiku, tohōmonaku.

The adverbs  $t\bar{o}ku$  far and chikaku near are often used like a The expression wake mo nai has, however, the sense of "not difficult": Sore wa betsudan wake mo nai koto desu. That is not specially difficult. The idiom - ni sõi (ga or wa) nai or - ni chigai nai is often used at the conclusion of a sentence to add emphasis: Kuru ni sōi nai. He will certainly come. Compare: Ano hito no iu koto ni wa machigai ga nai. There is no mistake in what he says.

substantives: tōku ga, tōku ye, tōku made, etc. Compare ōku no many (p. 50), ōku wa for the most part.

The frequent idiom Mattaku deshō is apparently elliptical for: Mattaku sō deshō. It is probably quite true.

The particles to mo added to an adverbial form give it a concessive sense (p. 102, 5).

Note further the following idioms:

bakarashiku omou consider foolish.

- wo waruku iu speak ill of.

mutsukashiku ieba to use difficult (precise) language.

Yoroshiku itte kudasai. Please speak a good word for me. For yoroshiku negaimasu and kokoroyasuku negaimasu see p. 104, b and e; for yoroshiku mõsu, p. 207a.

The adverbial form of an adjective is regularly used with naru (p. 24) and with suru (p. 212, 2): kuroku naru become black, kuroku suru make black; nakunaru disappear, nakusu(ru) lose, etc. The inflections of the adjective are derived from the adverbial form and aru. From the imperative are we have osokare hayakare sooner or later (lit. be it late, be it early)  $= s\bar{o}$ -ban  $(s\bar{o} = hayai, ban = osoi.)$

The Hakkenden composed (ts'kuru) by Bakin is written very interestingly.a (chijimeru) this sentence and make (write) it a little shorter, as it is too long. I don't know exactly, but it is probably quite true. As this mountain is low, one cannot see (miemasen) far. Please explain it minutely once more; Ldo not yet clearly (hakkiri) understand. Japanese ladies often apply rouge to their lips. As that is a newly made (dekita) word, ordinary (atarimae no) people will hardly understand it. . That is outrageously dear. He used up (entirely) all the money, he had (aru dake no kane). Isn't it exceedingly cold to-day? A friend coming opportunely, I was helped [out of my difficulties].

CHAPTER LXXII.

As we have observed (Chapters XXXIII., XXXIV.), substantives which with na or no form adjectives may with the particle ni serve as adverbs; e. g., omo ni mainly, chiefly.  $\bar{o}ki \ ni$  greatly.  $muyami \ ni$  recklessly.

a Bakin, the great novelist, died in 1848. The Hakkenden, from hachi eight, ken = inu dog, den biography, narrates the adventures of eight heroes, each of whose names contained the word inu.

saiwai (ni) happily, fortunately.

tashika ni certainly. a yatara ni carelessly.

katte ni, ete-katte ni, jibun-katte ni selfishly, inconsiderately, as one pleases (p. 191d).

waga-mama ni waywardly, without restraint.

omake ni besides, into the bargain.

zatsu ni confusedly, not neatly, coarsely.

zoku ni commonly, vulgarly, colloquially.

gō-gi ni enormously, extraordinarily.

hi-dō ni unjustly, wickedly, cruelly.

mu-ri ni unreasonably, in spite of every thing.

tei-nei ni carefully, politely.

yō-i ni easily.

kari ni temporarily, provisionally.

(o) tagai ni mutually, reciprocally. b tsugi ni next.

tsune ni always.

sasuga (ni) under the given circumstances, as one would naturally expect.

massaki (ni) at the very first.

betsu ni, betsu-dan (ni), kaku-betsu (ni) exceptionally, particularly, specially. c sen ni formerly.

choku-setsu ni directly, immediately (opp. kan-setsu ni).

hi-jō ni unusually, extraordinarily.

hon-tō ni, honto ni, hon ni really.

ippan ni generally, at large.

sei-sai ni, shi-sai ni (komaka ni) minutely, in detail.

ten-nen ni naturally, spontaneously.

Konna ni, sonna ni, anna ni (p. 39), donna ni, are irregular.

In many cases there is no corresponding adjective:

a The ni may be omitted when tashika is used with a verb in the probable form and has the weaker sense of "most likely": Tashika iku deshō. He will probably go. Tashika ni ikimasu. He will certainly go.

b O tagai ga (wa, no, etc.) is often used familiarly for the pronoun "we."

c "Specially" in the stricter sense is toku-betsu ni.

koto ni especially.

metta ni seldom (with negatives). a nobetsu ni continuously.

sugu (ni) immediately, at once.

tama ni occasionally, once in a while.

tende ni severally, each.

tsui (ni) at last, finally, unconsciously. b tsuide ni incidentally.

hi-mashi ni day by day, every day (masu increase).

hito-kuchi ni at a mouthful, in a word. c hitori-de (ni) of itself, spontaneously. d jiki (ni) immediately, at once. c om-bin ni quietly, peaceably, in a private way.

shi-dai ni gradually.

Sometimes the particle ni is omitted, as the parentheses show. In a few cases mo may be added for the sake of emphasis; e. g.,  $saiwai\ ni\ mo$ .

It remains to observe a few suffixes and words by means of which adverbial expressions may be formed.

One is goto ni, which added to a substantive means "every": iegoto ni in every house, toshigoto ni every year. But such expressions as doko no ie ni de mo, ieie ni, kengome ni, from ken (p. 86, 5) and komeru comprise, maitoshi or mainen (p. 50,top), etc., are more common in ordinary colloquial.

The suffix gake may be added to stems of verbs: ikigake ni on the way, kaerigake ni or modorigake ni, kigake ni, mairigake ni, tōrigake ni. Compare: Amerika kara kitate ni just after my arrival from America.

In like manner  $t\bar{o}ri$ ,  $y\bar{o}$  and  $f\bar{u}$  are used with limiting words:

a There is also an adjective metta na, but this means "heedless": Metta na koto wa ienai. It will not do to speak (lit. one cannot speak) heedlessly (anything heedless).

b The particle ni is never added to tsui when it means "unawares."

c Hitekuchi as a noun means a bit (of food), a little (of a speech).

d From hitori and the postposition de.

e This jiki is a variant reading of the character choku in chokusetsu ni. It is used commonly of immediateness in time. A corrupted form, jika ni, is used in the sense "without anything between," "without intervention," being synonymous with chokusetsu ni,

Kono yō ni koshiraete o kure.

Make it like this (kono tōri ni exactly like this).

Uma no yō ni kuu eat like a horse.

Nihon-fū ni kurashite imasu.

He is living in Japanese style.

Pleonastically one may even say: anna yō na fū ni.

a "Pardon me for neglecting to call. This often amounts to nothing more than the expression of a wish to be friendly. The answer, O tagai sama desu, means: "I have been equally remiss." One may also say: Watakushi koso. I am the one [who should make excuses].

b In this sentence soko wa serves as a sort of connective: "in that predicament." The sasuga ni — desu kara may be freely rendered: As was to be expected just because it was —. Compare sasuga no Bis'mar'k' mo even such a one as Bismarck. In the following sentence the common idiom sasuga ni —dake atte may be rendered: As is to be expected in the case of —.

a The feudal system,  $h\bar{e}ken$  seido ( $h\bar{e}$  fief, ken=tateru), is distinguished from gun-ken seido (gun county, ken prefecture), the modern form of government centering in the Emperor. The whole country is divided into ken or fu; the ken, into gun ( $k\bar{e}ri$ ) or shi (cities); the gun, into son (mura) or  $ch\bar{e}$  (machi).

CHAPTER LXXIII.

The particle to is used with a large class of adverbs. Many of this class end in ri:

bikkuri (of a shock or fright).

bonyari dimly, perplexedly.

burari, burabura (of dangling or idling).

chirari with one glance, cursorily.

dossari abundantly, plentifully.

garari, garagara (of a clattering noise).

hakkiri distinctly.

hirari like a flash.

honnori (of redness in the sky or a person's face).

horori, horohoro (of teardrops).

karari completely.

kitchiri, kitchinto tightly, precisely.

kossori, kosokoso on the sly, stealthily.

mekkiri(of a fact that suddenly becomes noticeable).

nikkori (of smiling or laughing). [unwieldily.

nossori, nosonoso at a snail's pace, in a strutting manner, patchiri (of large, bright eyes). [manner].

sakuri (of a thing that splits open readily or of a frank sappari clearly, wholly, at all (p. 187b).

sarari entirely.

shikkari firmly, faithfully, substantially.

sukkari entirely.

surari (of a slender form or of a smooth motion).

tappuri abundantly, fully.a

tokkuri (toku to) attentively, thoroughly.

ukkari (uka to), ukauka thoughtlessly, inattentively.

yukkuri leisurely, slowly (p. 33e). yururi, yuruyuru slowly, leisurely.

Many of the above are of onomatopoetic origin. The freedom with which such words are formed and used is a characteristic of the Japanese language. Like interjections, they are hard to define.

a Tappuri (taputapu) futotte iru, or, Deppuri futotte iru. He is very fat.

As indicated, there are in many cases corresponding duplicatives (see the following chapter). These, as a rule, are more strictly onomatopoetic. Thus, surasura is used of a smooth movement, not of a slim figure. The duplicative also implies the idea of repetition. Thus, nikkori is used of a single smile, while nikoniko indicates smiling continually. The duplicative often has an entirely different sense; e. g., bikubiku (of heşitating fear), chirachira (of a fluttering motion), hirahira (of a waving motion), karakara (of a rattling noise, as of wine glasses, = yarayara, or of laughter), sarasara (of a rustling sound, as of a river). The adverb as a whole may be doubled: burariburari to aruku saunter.

Properly to should be added to all, but it is generally omitted. The adverbs in ri may also be used with suru (p. 215, 8), and, accordingly, shite may be added to or substituted for to. In shikiri ni "persistently" to may take the place of ni. Yahari or yappari "still," "too," does not belong to this class. b

The particle to is also used with shorter words of the same general character. The etymology of some is doubtful. The particle to is never separable and often coalesces with the word to which it is attached.

bōtto (of beclouded vision or unconsciousness).

chitto a little.

choito, chotto just a moment (choichoi occasionally).

don to (of a loud noise).

dotto (of sudden applause, laughter, etc.).

gyotto (of a state of consternation).

hatto (of surprise).

hyoi to, hyotto accidentally, suddenly.

a We may also say: Sonna koto wa sarasara zonjimasen. I don't know anything at all about it.

b Notice the old, rather slangy expression: Ikiatari battari tabete aruita. I journeyed eating wherever I happened to be (iku go, ataru strike). Others say ikinari battari.

c The adverb fu-to (= hakarazu) unexpectedly, from fu not and to = hakaru calculate, belongs to a different category. There is also an onomatopoetic futo or futto used of a breath: Futto rampu wo kesu to extinguish a lamp with a puff.

jitto firmly, steadily, with concentration.

pin to (of cracking glass or crockery).

shika to firmly, certainly, exactly.

sotto softly, gently.

tonto totally, at all (with negative words).

zutto all the way, direct, very much.

With some words belonging to the class described in the previous chapter to also is used.

sugu (to or ni) immediately, at once.

waza to (ni) purposely, intentionally (wazawaza specially, not incidentally).

yōyatto, yatto (from yōyaku) with difficulty, finally.

 $zatto = zatsu \ ni \ coarselv$ , briefly.

shi-zen (to or ni) naturally, spontaneously.

totsu-zen (to or ni) suddenly, abruptly.

Note finally: nani-ka to=iroiro in many ways; nan to how! Itsu-nari to may be regarded as a briefer form of itsu nari to mo=itsu de mo. a

CHAPTER LXXIV.

Duplicatives form a large group of adverbs in Japanese. We have here a language within a language, as expressive as it is unique. <sup>a</sup> There are in English a few analogous expressions, such as ticktack, dingdong, rubadub, higgledy-piggledy, little by little, over and over, through and through, so-so.

Most of these words are of onomatopoetic origin, either imitating a sound, or at least voicing a feeling produced by an action. They are used commonly without any particle; or with to, if with any at all. In most cases they cannot be translated into English:

a Translate: Ikaga desu ka, elliptical for ikaga desu ka zonjimasen. Similarly Nan desu ka in a reply may mean: "I don't know what it is."

a An investigation made by Mr. Irie at the instance of the German psychologist Prof. Wundt resulted in a list of six hundred that are in common use.

barabara, barari (of things that scatter about, such as large raindrops, leaves of a torn book, etc.\. betabeta, bettari (of sticky things). bishibishi, gishigishi, mishimishi (of creaking timbers). bombon (of the faint ringing of a bell or the striking of a clock -- bombon-dokei). boroboro, borori (of ragged or crumbling things). buruburu (of trembling or shuddering). butsubutsu, butsuributsuri (of bubbling or grumbling). chibichibi a little at a time but often, in driblets. chirinchirin (of the ringing of a small bell). chokochoko (of short intervals or quick steps). [baby). chorochoro (of the flowing of a brook or the toddling of a daradara, darari sluggishly, languidly, in a slovenly way. dondon in rapid succession, in great quantity (or of the sound of a drum). gasagasa (of a rustling sound; as of paper). gatagata, gatari (of a rattling, slamming or banging noise). geragera, getageta (of laughter).  $g\bar{o}g\bar{o}$ ,  $g\bar{u}g\bar{u}$  (of snoring). gongon (of the sound of a large temple bell). gorogoro, gorori (of a rumbling noise, as of thunder). gotagota (of disorder). guruguru round and round. guzuguzu (of loitering, dawdling or grumbling). hyorohyoro (of staggering). janjan (of the sound of a fire-bell). kankan (of the sound of a bell beaten with a little hammer). mechamecha (of confusion). niyaniya (of a grin). perapera rapidly, fluently. pichipichi (of a floundering fish). piipii (of the sound of a flute, of whining or complaining). pikapika, pikaripikari (of shining, glittering, or flashing). pimpin in a vigorous or lively manner. pokaripokari (of tobacco smoke or of mild heat). potsupotsu, potsuripotsuri here and there, leisurely.

CHAPTER LXXV.

Many words which are translated by means of adverbs are really substantives used adverbially. This is true of many of the words which we class as ordinary adverbs (Ch. LXXVII.). In this chapter we shall confine our attention to certain words denoting place, time, degree, etc., which are still in use as substantives proper.

Such are koko, soko, asoko (asuko), doko, dokka, soko koko, kochira, sochira, achira, dochira, achi kochi or achira kochira (to), konata here, kanata there, etc.<sup>2</sup> They take particles and postpositions just like neuns:

Doko ga o itō gozaimasu ka.

Where have you pain (Which place is painful)?

Doko wo sagashimashita ka. Where have you searched? Doko deshita ka. Where was it?

a Konata is used politely in speaking of a host's house: Konata sama de wa mina sama go jōbu de kekkō de gozaimasu. I am very glad all are well at your house. It is also used as a personal pronoun of the first person. Go busata wo itashite orimashita. Inc., konata kara koso shitsurei bakari itashite orimasu. I have been quite remiss. No, it is I who am always rude. Compare anuta, sonata, donata, pp. 28, 42,

To the same entegory belong such substantives as mae, saki or omote front, ura or ushiro back, naka or uchi inside, soto outside, ue above, shita below, mukō the place opposite or yonder, hoka another place, a etc., which serve also in lieu of postpositions and will be treated under that head. As has been explained (p. 20a), words of this kind take the particle ni to indicate the place where a thing or person exists and de to indicate the scene of an event or a certain condition of things. This rule applies likewise to such words as empō a distant place, atari, or hen (kono hen, sono hen, etc.), or kimpen vicinity, etc. But we must keep in mind other uses of ni and de. The former may also have the sense of "to" and indicate an indirect object, while the latter often performs the same function as the subordinative of the verb. Compare:

Koko ni orimasu. I am here.

Koko ni okimasu. I shall (will) put it here. Koko de yasumimashō. I shall (will) rest here. Koko de yoroshii. This place will do.

Words denoting time when used as adverbs commonly take no particles. But when a contrast is implied, or when the corresponding adverb in the English sentence takes the first or emphatic position, wa is required (p. 23e). A word denoting time in an unemphatic position, in the few cases when a particle is used, takes ni:  $ima\ ni$ ,  $mae\ ni$ ,  $nochi\ ni$ ,  $asa\ ni$ ,  $ban\ ni$ , etc. There are some apparent exceptions. Thus  $ima\ de\ wa$ ,  $konnichi\ de\ wa$ , etc., are equivalent to  $ima\ ni\ natte\ wa$ , etc. The expression  $ato\ de$ , in contrast with  $nochi\ ni$ , originally denoted position. Also compare:

Atode o hanashi mõshimashõ. I will speak to you afterwards. Kore wo ato ni shita hõ ga ii. It is better to postpone this. Any of these words may by means of the particle no be made a This hoka may mean not only "elsewhere," but also "besides." Note also omoi-no-hoka (ni) = an-gwai (c) beyond expectation, and keto-no-hoka (ni) exceedingly, from the keto in keto ni especially.

b There are a few adverbs formed by means of this de, but they are hardly numerous enough to make a separate chapter; e. g., ato de afterwards, maru de entirely, mina de altogether, tada de gratis, hiteri de alone (in the sense of "spontaneously" ni may be added), kachi de afoot, hisashiburi de after a long interval, jibun de by one's self, tochii de en route.

an adjective (p. 119):  $muk\bar{o}$  no otera yonder temple; ima no seit $\bar{o}$  the present political parties,  $y\bar{u}be$  no kwaji last night's fire. The principal adverbs of time are (comp. p. 66a):

konnen, kotoshi, tõnen this year.

issakunen, ototoshi (otodoshi) year before last.

issakusakunen, sakiototoshi two years before last year.

myönen, rainen next year.

myögonen, sarainen year after next.

kongetsu, kono tsuki this month.

sengctsu, atogetsu, mae no tsuki last month.

sensengetsu month before last.

raigetsu next month.

saraigetsu month after next.

konshū, kono shū this week.

senshū last week. raishū next week.

konnichi, kyō to-day.

sakujitsu, kinō yesterday.

issakujitsu, ototoi day before yesterday.a

issakusakujitsu, sakiototoi two days before yesterday.

myōnichi, asu, ashita to-morrow.

myōgonichi, asatte day after to-morrow.

yanoasatte, shiasatte two days after to-morrow.

aru hi (no koto) on a certain day, one day.

yokujitsu (ni), akuru hi (ni) the following day.

asa (ni) in the morning (asa hayaku early in the morning).

konchō, kesa this morning.

kesahodo, kesagata this morning (used later in the day).

sakuchō, kinō no asa yesterday morning.

- ling.

myōchō, myōasa, asu no asa, ashita no asa to-morrow mornban (ni), banhodo, bankata (bangata), bankei, yūkata (yū-gata),  $y\bar{u}koku$  in the evening (p. 232d).

sakuban, sakuya, yūbe last evening.

komban, konya, konseki this evening a Ototoi or ototsui is derived from ochi, yonder, far, tsu, and hi. This tsu is an old genitive particle. It appears also in onozukara or mizukara, classical for jibunde, With ototoi compare ototoshi, from ochi and toshi.

myōban, myōya, asu no ban, ashita no ban to-morrow evening. hiru by day. yoru by night.

ima (ni) now.a imagoro (ni) about this time.

tadaima now, just now (past), presently (future). b imagata, imashigata a moment ago.

sakki, sakihodo, senkoku a short while ago (less than a day). kono setsu in these days.

sakkon nowadays (lit. yesterday and to-day).

konohodo, konoaida (konaida) lately, recently. c senjitsu, sakigoro a few days ago, the other day.

kinnen in recent years (kin=chikai).

moto originally, formerly.

mukashi in ancient times.

hajime (ni) at the beginning, at the first.

saisho (ni) at the very first.

nochihodo, nochigata after a little while (within the day).

kondo next time (also: this time).

chikai uchi (ni) within a short time, soon.

kinjitsu within a few days (kin=chikai).

nochinochi after some time, after a long time.

shōrai in the future.

itsu, itsugoro when, about when?

Attention may well be called once more to kurai, bakari, dake, hodo (pp. 22b, 36, 43, 48b), words which generally perform the functions of true adverbs, taking no particles, but sometimes are treated just like nouns. Words like mina, ōzei, etc. (Ch. XVIII.), are used both as adverbs and occasionally as substantives. So also:

banji all things, or, in every respect.

daitai the principal part, or, in the main.

tashō many or few, much or little, quantity, or, more or less. taigai, taitei generality, or, for the most part, almost.

a Practically, of course, such a word as "now" must refer either to the immediate future or to the immediate past. Ima may also be used like  $m\bar{o}$  in the sense of "more":  $ima\ ippai$  one cup more. For imagoro note:  $itsu\ de\ mo\ imagoro$  always about this time.

b Tadaima differs from tatta ima in that the latter can refer only to the past.

c Chikagoro and konogoro may be used either of an event in the recent past, like konohodo and konoaida, or, like kinrai, of a state of things continuing to the present.

Taigai (taitei) ni shite oke. Don't take too much pains.

To the same category belong the suffix  $ch\bar{u}$  or  $j\bar{u}$  (p. 137a), as in  $karadaj\bar{u}$  the whole body, and  $ichid\bar{o}$  (lit. one and the same), as in  $ky\bar{o}in$  seito  $ichid\bar{o}$  the teachers and pupils as a body, the whole school. Such compound expressions may be used adverbially, without particles, and also as substantives.

Finally we might include the numerals, with ikutsu, ikura or nanihodo (vulgar nambo), etc. But the numeratives, though originally substantives, never take the particles ga, wo, etc., and are therefore to be classed as adverbs.

CHAPTER LXXVI.

The subordinatives of certain verbs must be rendered by means of English adverbs; e. g., kasanete iu say repeatedly,  $keiy\bar{o}$  shite iu speak metaphorically, etc. The following words have became practically adverbs. A few of them, which we may designate as formal, are heard not so much in common conversation as in speeches:

aete daringly (formal).

aratamete again, anew.

hajimete for the first time.

hatashite after all, really, as was expected. a itatte exceedingly, very.

kaette on the contrary, rather.

a As is not infrequently the case, the native word has become formal, in the sense of "as was expected," while an no gotoku generally takes its place in the colloquial.

kanete previously.

kiwamete extremely (formal). a kozotte all (formal).

narashite on an average, from narasu level (p. 201a).

The etymology of these words in all cases where it is practically helpful will readily be guessed by the student. But it should be noted that the following verbs are obsolete, in the colloquial: aeru dare, kozoru assemble, suberu bring together, govern, and naberu or nameru = naraberu put in a row.

Both hajimete and subcte are used with no as adjectives: hajimete no koto the first instance, subete no mono all things. Note also motte-no-hoka = omoi-no-hoka or koto-no-hoka very (always used in a bad sense).

The following are derived from negative subordinatives:

a The verb kiwameru to determine, or to carry to an extreme, is best translated by means of the adverb "extremely": ogori (or zei-taku) wo kiwameru to be extremely luxurious.

b The adverb asatte day after to-morrow is derived from asu and satte, from saru leave; sendatte, from seu and tatte, from tatsu pass, elapse.

c The expression yaya-mo-sureba (or yaya mo suru to, "quite often," derived from yaya gradually, considerably, is also practically an adverb, though it is usually to be rendered "is apt to," like tokaku.

hakarazu (mo) unexpectedly. nokorazu all. oboezu unconsciously. omowazu unintentionally. tarazu closely, nearly. kanarazu assuredly, certainly, without fail, necessarily. tōkarazu in the near future, soon. mukō-mizu ni blindly, recklessly. yamu-wo-ezu, yamuoezu unavoidably (p. 259b). ai-kawarazu as always. tori-aezu immediately, in haste. tori-mo-naosazu namely, in other words, the same thing as. shirazu-shirazu unawares.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

There remains a comparatively small class of words used as adverbs which are without any inflection, particle, peculiar structure, or any external mark to indicate what they are.

1. Some are derived from the Chinese. Note compounds with ichi "one" and mai "every":

goku=kiwamete (emphatic shi-goku, from shi=itaru) very.b dai-bu, dai-bun (lit. large part) very, rather.

gwan-rai=moto-yori originally, in reality.

hei-zei ordinarily, usually, habitually.

irai hereafter, since (in the latter sense with a substantive or subordinative).

i-sai minutely, in detail.

kin-rai lately, recently (p. 340c).

mochi-ron, mu-ron (lit. without discussion) of course.

sek-kaku with special pains, kindly (p. 193d).

shi- $j\bar{u}$  (lit. beginning and end) constantly, always.

sho-sen after all, by no means (with negatives).

a Mutsuki, from mutsumashii friendly, sociable, is so-called because January is a month of social festivities.

b Practically kiwamete is more emphatic even than shigoku.

c In the sense of "hereafter": Anata wa irai sō iu koto wo shite wa ikemasen. Osoreirimashita; irai wa ki wo tsukemasu kara, dōzo go kamben wo negaimasu. You must n't do such a thing again. I am very sorry; I will be careful hereafter; please be patient with me.

ta-bun (lit. many parts) for the most part, probably. tō-tei utterly, at all (with negatives).

tō-tō, tōto at length, finally.

 $ts\bar{u}$ -rei,  $ts\bar{u}$ -j $\bar{o}$  usually, customarily.

zan-ji (zan=shibaraku, ji=toki) a little while.

zen-tai (lit. whole body) constitutionally, originally, properly speaking, in reality (zentai ni in general).

zuibun (ni) a good deal, considerably.

 $ikk\bar{o}$  (lit. one direction) entirely, at all (with negatives).

ippai (ni) a whole—, with one's whole— (sei ippai with all one's might).

issai, issetsu entirely. at all. a issō (lit. one laver) doubly, more.b

ittai (lit one body) = zentai.

mai-nen, mai-toshi yearly.

mai-getsu, mai-tsuki monthly.

mai- $sh\bar{u}$  weekly, mai-nichi daily.

mai-asa every morning, mai-ban every evening. mai-do every time, often.

Other adverbs are derived from stems of native verbs:

amari, ammari too, so very, so much, from amaru be in excess. -kiri, giri merely, only, just, from kiru cut.c

tsumari after all, in the end, so to speak, finally, from tsumaru be straitened.

ottsuke presently, soon, from ou chase (p. 297a).

sashi-atari at present, from ataru strike.

yo-dōshi the whole night through, from tōsu cause to pass.

The following, of native origin, may be designated adverbs The list should include  $k\bar{o}$  (kay $\bar{o}$  ni),  $s\bar{o}$  (say $\bar{o}$  ni), proper.

a Sai and setsu are variant readings of the same character. Issetsu is used only with negative words.

b Isso (no koto), which means "rather," is probably a corruption of this.

e See pp. 232a, 233d. Mô kore kiri mairimasen. I shall not come any more. Bakari or bakkari, from hakarn calculate, might be included in the same group with kiri. It is used not only with substantives and numerals in the sense of "about" but also with substantives, subordinatives, etc., in the sense of "only" and with preterits in the sense of "only" or "just"; e. g., asonde bakari iru do nothing but play, sukoshi tott i bakari desu have taken only a little, kaetta bakari desuhave just returned (p. 229c). Note also the idiom - bakari de naku -mo "not only -but also" (p. 146a).

 $\bar{a}$  and  $d\bar{o}$ . From the last are derived  $d\bar{o}zo$  (nani-to-zo),  $d\bar{o}ka$  somehow or other, if possible, please (p. 177f), and  $d\bar{o}mo$ . Note:  $S\bar{o}$  wa ikanai, or,  $S\bar{o}$  de wa ikenai. That won't do. That's the wrong way.

 $d\bar{o}se(d\bar{o} \ shite \ mo), d\bar{o}de(d\bar{o} \ de \ mo)$  any how, at any rate, after all.

hanahada (from hanahadashii) very, very much.

hotondo (from classical hotohoto) almost, very much.

ikaga (from ika ni ka) how?

iku-bun-ka somewhat.

ima-sara (sara ni in addition, again) after so long a time, no more (with negatives).

izure in some way or other, at all events (p. 305b).

ka-nari moderately, passably, fairly.

katsute formerly, once before (formal).

mada still, yet. b

mata again. c

mazu first of all, on the whole, well (hito-mazu once, for a while). [negatives).d mō already, by this time, soon, now, still, no more (with mo-haya already, soon, no more (with negatives).

moppara chiefly, principally, specially.

mottomo most.

nani-bun, nambun (ni) in every way, at any rate, at all (with negatives), by all means, please (p. 208d).

nao still more.

nao-sara all the more.

naze why? e

nomi only (sore nomi narazu=sore bakari de naku).

a This  $\bar{a}$  is used not only in  $\bar{a}$  in but also, rarely, with other verbs:  $\bar{a}$  yatte ite wa totemo seikō shimasumai. If he acts like that, he will never succeed.

b See p. 17d. Mada arimasu ka. Are there any left? Mada ichi ji desu. It is only one o'clock.

c Mata does not mean exactly "again" in: Sore wa mata nanigoto desu ka. And what is that?

d  $M\tilde{o}$  jiki ni now at once;  $m\tilde{o}$  yoroshiu gozaimasu that will do now;  $m\tilde{o}$  takusan enough now;  $m\tilde{o}$  arimasen there are no more;  $m\tilde{o}$  (ma) sukoshi a little more or a little longer;  $m\tilde{o}$  (ma) hitotsu one more;  $m\tilde{o}$  ichi do once more;  $m\tilde{o}$  sukoshi de within an ace of, almost, soon.

e Foreigners should be careful about using naze in direct address. It is rather familiar, and is never heard in polite conversation, except perhaps in naze desn ka. Use do shite instead of naze. For naze naraba and naze to iu no ni see p. 224b.

ō-kata for the most part, probably, a ori-fushi = oriori, tokidoki now and then. oyoso about, approximately. b sa-hodo (ni) so much (with negatives). sate so, then, well (in proceeding with a story or speech). sazo how — you must (with probable form). - shika, shikya but, only (with negatives). sukoshi a little. sunawachi that is, namely. tada, tatta only, merely. c to-kaku in one way or another, almost inevitably, is apt to. d tomokakumo, tomokaku, tonikaku at any rate. totemo, for totemo kakutemo, by no means (with negatives). yagate soon, presently. yahari, yappari likewise. too, still, notwithstanding. yo-hodo, yoppodo a good deal, very (p.174a).

yoppite (yo hito yo) the whole night.  $y\bar{o}yaku$ ,  $y\bar{o}y\bar{o}$  finally, at last, with difficulty, barely.

In the literary language many of these words, especially those derived from the Chinese, are used also as substantives. In the colloquial, too, many of them may be used with no. The student will generally be able to judge from the nature of the adverb whether it can be so used or not. Especially common are: mochiron no koto a matter of course, sekkaku no oboshimeshi your kind intention, zanji no aida for a little while, yöyaku no koto de with great difficulty.

2. There are particles of emphasis, koso, sac, sura and dani, which can hardly be translated, unless by means of the word "even." Koso has on the words which it immediately follows a The learned also say oserakuwa, which may be translated, "It is to be feared that." A similar classical form is negawakuwa, which is equivalent to dēzo or nanitozo.

b The original classical form  $\bar{v}yoso$  also occurs in the sense of "in general." Oyoso may be used pleonastically with kurai, etc. (p. 72c).

c Tada is often used pleonastically with bakari, kiri or shika. Note also tada de gratis. Tada desu. It costs nothing.

d Tokaku occurs with especial frequency in sentences that express regret and is often hard to translate: Tokaku keno setsu wa ame ga furimasu. It rains a great deal these days. Tokaku yasui mono wa hayaku sonjimasu. Cheap things soon wear out.

the same effect as italics in English. It may be added to substantives (p. 323), adverbs (p. 314b), postpositions, conditionals and subordinatives:

Sō yatte koso kōkō to iu mono da.

To act like that is filial piety indeed.

Nihonjin kara chokusetsu ni naratte koso hontō no Nihongo ga oboerareru no ni, S'mis' san wa gwaikokujin ni tsuite benkyō wo shite orimasu. In spite of the fact that Japanese can be mastered best by learning directly from a Japanese, Mr. Smith is studying under a foreigner.

Sae is usually added to substantives or stems of verbs in conditional or concessive clauses (p. 279a), and often occurs in the combination (de) sae (mo):

Kodomo de sae mo yoku wakaru no ni.....

Though even a child can understand.....

Sura is used only with substantives, subordinatives and in the idiom (de) sura (mo):

Issen sura motanai. I have n't even a cent.

Chanto shōko wo misete sura (mo) sō de nai to iimasu.

He denies it even though I show him the evidence.

Naporeon de sura mo Roshiajin no tame ni yaburaremashita.

Even Napoleon was defeated by the Russians.

Dani is used, with substantives, in the same sense as sura.

3. Finally we have the particle mo. It serves to modify the word which it follows and has the sense of (a) "also," "too," "on the other hand," and (b) "even."

Kore mo yoroshii. This also will do.

Anata mo oide ni narimasu ka. Will you go too?

Shōyu wo (o) shitaji to mo iimasu.

Shōyu is also called shitaji.

Ima mo sō iu shūkwan ga nokotte orimasu ka.

Does such a custom persist even now?

Hitori mo orimasen. There is not even one there.

Mono (wo) mo iwazu (ni) without saying anything at all.

Hitotsu mo nokosazu (ni) without leaving a single one.

a Observe the position of me; one never hears shitaji mo to iimasu.

In many negative expressions mo is untranslatable:

kagiri mo nai unlimited, infinite.

kawari mo nai unchanging.

kono ue mo nai unsurpassed (of good things only).

omoi mo yoranai unexpected.

Waruku mo nai. That's not bad.

Arisō mo nai hanashi desu It's improbable (p. 276b).

Compare adverbial expressions like ma-mo-naku (p. 315).

Added to interrogatives mo makes them universal indefinites (Ch. XVII.):

itsu made mo for ever.

doko made mo to the utmost, to the very end.

ika ni mo indeed, very. a ikutsu mo, ikura mo, ikutari mo, etc., very many.

When mo is repeated it has the sense of "both — and," or, with a negative word, "neither — nor":

Kore mo are mo ii. Both this and that are good.

Nomi mo ka mo takusan orimasu.

Both fleas and mosquitoes are plentiful.

Pen mo inki mo arimasen. There is neither pen nor ink.

Mo also serves as a conjunction (Ch. LXXXII.). b

The combination de mo (=de atte mo) or, more emphatically, de sae mo or de sura mo, may be rendered "even." De mo is also used to make the sense of a word vague and may be rendered "such a thing as," "or something of the kind" (p. 178b), or, with a negative word, "exactly" (p. 237a). De mo with interrogative pronouns makes emphatic indefinites (Ch. XVII). It takes the place not only of wa, ga and wo, but also of other particles. Like mo it may be added not only to substantives, but also to particles and postpositions:

Daigakusha de sae mo wakarimasen.

Even great scholars do not understand.

a From the classical ika  $ni=d\bar{v}$  how? Ika ni shite  $mo=d\bar{v}$  shite mo. Ika ni mo meant originally "in every way." It is now often used as a response in conversation like the English "To be sure!"

b Mo also enters into the idiom — ka mo shirenai (p. 109a), concessives like keredomo and to iedomo (pp. 99, 245), yori mo (p. 136), moshi mo, etc., without making any perceptible addition to the sense.

Empitsu de mo yoroshii. A lead pencil will do.

Gakusha de mo gozaimasen. He isn't what you call a scholar. Giin ni naranai (narumai) mono de mo nai (common idiom).

It is not impossible that he will become a representative.

Do de mo kamaimasen. Any way will suit.

Natsu de mo yasumi wa arimasen.

[I] have no vacation even in summer.

Seiyō no yoi shibai wa Kōbe de mo a metta ni miraremasen. One can seldom see a good European play even in Kōbe.

Sore de mo hara wo tatemasen.

He nevertheless did not get angry.

Iya de mo ō de mo kamaimasen. b

I don't care whether he likes it or not.

Mukōjima made de mo ikitai to omoimasu.

I should like to go at least as far as to Mukōjima.

Nan de mo is used adverbially in the sense of "at all events," "probably":

Nan de mo benkyō ga kanjin da.

In any case diligence is the important thing.

Nan de mo jibun de Tōkyō ye ittarashii.

It seems likely that he himself has gone to Tōkyō.

The combination to mo in Nan to mo iemasen needs no further explanation (p. 342b). In other connections to mo appears to be elliptical, as in Kayuku mo nan to mo nai (p. 252b), where to mo = nan to iu koto mo; or,  $S\bar{o}$  to mo (or wa) shirazu, where  $s\bar{o}$  to mo = sonna koto ga aru to iu koto mo. In replies to questions to mo is especially common and has the sense of "most assuredly":

Kimasu to mo. He will certainly come.

Arimasu to mo. Of course there are.

4. Our "yes" corresponds to  $s\bar{o}$  da,  $s\bar{o}$  desu, say $\bar{o}$  de gozaimasu (but see also p. 134a); "no," to  $s\bar{o}$  ja nai, say $\bar{o}$  de wa gozai-

a In this case not Kōbe de de mo. But even this is a possible construction; e. g., Nihon de wa Nichiyōbi de mo kamawazu shōbai wo itashimasu. Yokohama de de mo desu ka. In Japan people do business even on Sunday (lit. even on Sunday not heeding). Is that the case even in Yokohama? De mo may be an ellipsis for ni de mo: Dare de mo dekimasu, for, Dare ni de mo dekimasu, b This ō is the classical form of hai yes.

masen, etc. One may also repeat the verb of the question: Wakarimashita ka. Wakarimashita (or Wakarimasen). Have you understood? Yes (or No). The word hai or hei alone usually means "yes" in the sense that the speaker is attentive to what is being said to him. Hai or hei and iie or iya also precede verbs: Hai, wakarimashita. Yes, I understand. Iie, wakarimasen. No, I don't understand. But it is a peculiarity of the Japanese that these words refer not so much to the objective fact as to the attitude of agreement or disagreement with what has just been said (p. 12a): Kyō kimasen ka. Hai (or Sayō de gozaimasu). Isn't he ceming to day? No (lit. Yes, i. e., as you say). Iie (or Sō de gozaimasen) would have to be translated Yes, he will (lit. No, i. e., you are mistaken). Hence such combinations as Sayō, kimasen, or, Iie, kimasu.

THE POSTPOSITION.<sup>2</sup>

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

Words in Japanese which correspond to English prepositions must be called postpositions, for the reason that they follow the words that they govern. These particles may be divided into two groups: postpositions proper and quasi-postpositions. Postpositions proper immediately follow the words that they govern. Some are particles, like de, ni, and to, while others were originally substantives, which, however, are no longer felt to be such. Quasi-postpositions are really substantives, still used as such, to which dependent words are joined by means of the particle no. There are also certain subordinatives that are used like English prepositions.

Often where the English employs prepositions other constructions are required in Japanese:

Mizu wo abiru bathe in cold water.

Machi wo aruku walk about the town (or walk the streets). Nihon wo (or kara) tatsu start from Japan (or leave Japan). Soko wo ugoicha ikenai. You must n't move from that place.

Gakkō wo sotsugyō suru graduate from the school.

Shina wo tabi suru travel through China.

Hito no koto wo omou think of a person.

Isha wo yobi ni yaru send for a physician.

Zaisan no nai hito a person without property.

Shippo no mijikai neko a cat with a short tail.

Wa often occurs where we should expect a postposition: kono ni san nichi wa in the last two or three days, Tōkyō atari wa in the region of Tōkyō, about Tōkyō, etc.

To the postpositions proper belong de, ni, to, kara or yori, made and ye. These can be used with adverbs: yoru osoku made until late at night. Compare  $t\bar{v}$  kara for a long time, and a "Preposition" is zen-chi-shi; postposition,  $k\bar{v}$ -chi-shi; zen = mae,  $k\bar{v}$  = go = no-chi, chi = oku.

 $t\bar{o}$  ni a long time ago, from  $t\bar{o}ku$ . Sometimes ni is added to another postposition, as in made ni (see the following Chapter). When in English a prepositional phrase is used to modify a noun, no is required in Japanese:

 $T\bar{o}kaid\bar{o}$  ye no  $ris\bar{u}$  distances (in ri) on the  $T\bar{o}kaid\bar{o}$ .

Tōkyō made no kippu a ticket to Tōkyō.

Nihon to no kō-tsū intercourse with Japan.

The remainder of the chapter will be devoted to explaining the uses of de, ni and to.

1. De may be local and instrumental, like the classical nite. It also performs a function similar to that of the subordinative. <sup>a</sup>

(1.) De is used in a local sense, answering the question "Where?" when the verb indicates an action or a certain state of things:

Kochira de wa sonna koto wo shimasen.

Here we don't do anything of the kind.

Nihon de wa dō shimasu ka. What do they do in Japan? Doko de o motome nasaimash'ta ka. Where did you buy it?

Doko de dekimashita ka. Where was it made?

Gwaikoku de shinimashita. He died abroad. b

Chizu de sagashidashite kudasai. Please look it up in a map.

Koko de matte imashō. I will wait here.

Amerika de wa sō iu shūkwan ga gozaimasen.

In America there is no such custom.

De is used in speaking of the mere existence of a thing in a place when the place is contrasted with some other place, as in the example, p. 35a: Tokugawake no o tamaya wa doko desu ka. Tōkyō de wa Shiba to Ueno ni arimasu.

a This distinction between the de's may seem at first sight more subtle than important, but it is certainly a factor in determining the usage. In the subordinative is involved the idea of a cause, condition or circumstance which objectively or in a necessary way modifies the action or state expressed by the principal word of the sentence. Thus a Japanese would not say, Ame ga futte kaerimashō, because the decision to return is not necessarily connected with the rain; but it is natural to say, Ame ga futte komarimasu. Now compare: Kore de wa komarimasu. This sort of thing is annoying. Kore de o wakare mōshimashō. At this point I will take my leave. The connection between kore de and the verb in the former sentence is closer than in the latter.

b "He was killed in the war between Japan and China" may be either Nisshin-sensō de shinimashita, or, more rarely, Nisshin-sensō ni shinimashita.

Some expressions with de have passed over from a local to a temporal sense: ato de afterwards, a soko de now, then. b

(2.) De may indicate cause or means:

O kage sama de naorimashita.

Thanks to your aid, I have recovered (p. 14c).

Kono attaka na tenki de wa kōri ga tokemashō.

With this fine weather the ice will probably melt.

Take de dekita shina wares made of bamboo.

Bō de naguru beat with a club.

Fune de (or fune ni notte) iku go by boat.

Ichi nichi de dekimashō. It can probably be done in a day. Zokugo de wa kō iimasu... In the colloquial they say...

Yume de mita koto ga aru. I have seen it in a dream.

Ichi yen de kaimashita. I bought it for a yen.

Sometimes either de or ni may be used with practically no difference in the sense. Simply to "dream of a thing" is usually mono wo yume ni miru. Ichi yen ni kaimashita (or urimashita) does not differ from ichi yen de kaimashita (or urimashita) any more than the English "buy at one yen" differs from "buy for one yen."

(3.) De may indicate a condition or a circumstance:

Kore de ii. This will do.

Ariawase de yoroshii. What is on hand will do.

Mittsu de takusan desu. Three are enough.

Mina de san jū ni arimasu. There are thirty-two in all. Some of the adverbial expressions into which de enters come under this head; e. g., futari de the two together, etc. (p. 65), hisashiburi de after a long interval (p. 338b). There are many such adverbial phrases; e. g., sono ikioi de (ikioi power) in consequence of the impetus gained, at that rate:

Sono ikioi de susumeba jiki ni Nihongo ga hanaseru yō ni narimashō. If he keeps on at that rate, he will soon become able to speak Japanese.

a Compare: O ato kara mairimashō. I will go after you, i. e., later (p. 257a). O ato ni (tsuite) mairimashō. I will go behind you. Hito no ato ni tatte imasu. He is standing behind some one. See p. 338, bottom.

b Ima de = ima ni shite or ima ni natte under the present circumstances: ima de ieba according to present usage.

Note also: sore de or (with a future verb) sore de wa, sore ja under those circumstances, then, in that case.

There are also conjunctional phrases like tokoro de.<sup>a</sup> Tokoro de, or de alone, often serves as a superfluous connective between sentences in the same way that many use "and" in English.

De is used with predicate substantives in the idioms de aru (de gozaimasu) and de iru (de irasshaimasu): Hei-ki de iru. He's unconcerned.

(4.) De may have the sense "on the part of" and be practically equivalent to ga, especially with words denoting a body or a corporation (p. 126c):

Seifu de o haraisage ni narimashita. The Gov't has sold it. Jimmin no warui no de wa nai; seifu de machigatta no desu.

It's not the people's fault; it's the Government that blundered. So also bakufu de the government of the Shōgun, keisatsu de the police, kwaisha de the company, seken de the world, etc. To the same class may be assigned the peculiar expressions uchi de wa or temae de wa we, yado de wa b or taku de wa my husband, mukō de wa or saki de wa he or they, etc.

- (5.) De with substantives is often equivalent to de atte or deshite (p. 89c): Shimpai de naranai. I am exceedingly anxious (p. 158b). It takes the place of the ending kute with quasi-adjectives: Byoki de arukenai. He is so sick that he can't walk. It is used in the same way with substantivized adjectives or verbs (Chapters XXXVII., LXIV.).
  - 2. The particle ni has a great variety of uses.
- (1.) Ni has a local sense, answering the question "Where?" when one thinks of the mere existence of a thing in a place, that is, when aru, oru, iru, or one of the corresponding polite verbs, constitutes the predicate:

a Tokoro de, like tokoro ga, often has an adversative sense: Yonde mita tokoro de, watakushi ni wa totemo wakarimasumai kara, yoshimashō. Even though I read it I should not understand it at all; so I will give it up.

b The word yado alone may mean "lodging place" or "husband."

c The de in, Byōki de yasemashita, He is emaciated on account of sickness, is felt to be different from the byōki de above.

d The negative subordinative in naide is derived from the negative present form and de.

Tamagawa ni ai ga takusan orimasu.

In the Tama River there are many trout.

Tamagawa de ai ga takusan toremasu.

In the Tama River many trout are taken.

§ Bōshi wa doko ni arimasu ka. Where is my hat? Doko de bōshi wo kaimashō ka. Where shall I buy a hat?

Converge to ni occurs with other verbs or with adjectives when the idea of being in a place is the prevailing one:

Konokawa ni wa unagi ga ōi. Eelsare numerousin this river.

Mukō ni miemasu. Over there it is (appears).

Te ni motte imasu. He has it in his hand.a

Soto ni hito ga matte imasu. There is some one waiting outside.

Soto ni gomi ga tatte imasu. It is dusty outside.

Koko ni suwarimashō. I will sit here.

Tani kusa ga hacta. Weeds have grown in the paddy-field. b

Kabe ni ana ga aite iru. There is hole in the wall.

Shimbun ni kaite aru. It is in the newspaper.

Tonari ni ie ga tatta. A house has been built next door. In the last examples it is a question whether the ni should not be parsed as the particle of the indirect object, especially when the verb is made transitive: kabe ni ana wo akeru, shimbun ni kaku, tonari ni ie wo tateru.c

Such verbs as sumu or sumau dwell, tomaru sit (of a bird) or lodge, noru be on or ride, etc., d naturally take ni with the word that answers the question "Where?"

(2.) Ni is the proper particle to use with words denoting time, answering the question "When?" (p. 338): nichiyō atari ni about Sunday, asa to ban ni in the morning and in the evening (p. 81b). Note also: hi ni san do zutsu three times a day; san nen ni ichi do once in three years. c a Te de motte imasu. He holds it with his hand.

b Compare niwa ni ueta ki, niwa ni dekita imo (p. 342e).

c Tonari de would mean "on the part of my neighbor": My neighbor has built a house. Similarly: Shimbun de kakimashita. The newspaper has reported it.

d We say jitensha ni noru ride on a bicycle, but jitensha de iku go by wheel. Noru may also mean "be induced to take part": södan ni noru take part in a consultation (Comp. nori-ki ni naru, p. 305).

e Ima ni may mean "until now" or "soon": Ima ni kō yatte kurashi wo shite imasu. Up to the present time I have been making my living in this way. Ima ni yoku narimashō. It will soon improve.

- (3.) With aru and similar words ni may denote possession or a close relation (p 9a): Ushi ni tsuno ga aru. Watakushi ni wa imoto ga nai.
  - (4.) Ni (wa) may have the sense of "among":

Kono shina ni kō otsu ga qozaimasu.a

Among these goods there are two kinds, first class and second.

Kuma ni wa ke no shiroi no mo kuroi no mo arimasu.

Among bears some have white fur and some have black.

Ano hito no iu koto ni wa machigai ga nai.

There is no mistake in what he says. What he says is true.

- (5.) Ni may be rendered "in addition to, "besides", "and" (p. 67d); e.g., sore ni besides, moreover. In describing ideograms ni is much used: Meiji no mei wa hi hen ni tsuki to iu ji wo kakimasu. The character mei (明) in Meiji is composed of (written) hi (日) and tsuki (月).b Note the idioms: nen ni nen wo irete taking the greatest pains; korae ni koraete enduring to the utmost (p. 279, 5). Note also proverbial expressions like: Ume ni uguisu. Plum-tree and bush-warbler. i. e., the ume and the uguisu naturally belong together. Urikotoba ni kai-kotoba. Tit for tat (compare: "paid back in your own coin"). In idioms like these the idea of contrast is often involved: Botan ni karashishi. The peony and the lion, i. e., strength and beauty.
- (6.) Ni may mark the thing into which anything enters or to which it is transferred:

 $k\bar{o} = ki$ -no-e tree hei = hi-no-e flame otsu = ki-no-to herb tei := hi-no-to glow bo = tsuchi-no-e earth.

ki = tsuchi-no-to pottery

 $k\bar{o} = ka$ -no-e coin shin = ka-no-to hardware jin = mizu-no-e sea water ki = mizu-no-to fresh water

These signs are used as we use A, B, C, etc. They are also used parallel with the twelve zodiacal signs, the  $j\bar{n}$  ni shi, to name the sixty years of the old cycle. For practical purposes it is sufficient to learn the first four, kō, otsu, hei, tei.

b The part of an ideogram called in English the radical, when it forms the left side of the character, is called hen = kata side. Thus the hen 4 is nimben, from nin == hito; 言 is gomben, from gon == kotoba. The remainder, the phonetic part, of an ideogram is called tsukuri body, from tsukuru make, construct.

a Compare: Kono futari no aida ni wa kō otsu ga nai. There is no difference between the two (no superiority and inferiority). Ko and otsu belong to a series of ten signs called jikkan or eto:

Hako ni ireru put into a box; furo ni hairu enter a bath.

Hito tokoro ni atsumaru assemble in one place.

Yama ni noboru ascend a mountain (also wo).

Nihongo ni honyaku suru translate into Japanese.

(7.) Ni may denote an aim or a result, as in sampo ni deru go for a walk, shippai ni owaru end in failure.

For ni as used with stems of verbs to express purpose see p. 278, 3. In the same sense it is used with substantives and may be rendered "for", "as"; with substantivized verbs, "to":

Kore wo nani ni tsukaimasu ka. What is this used for?

O rei no shirushi (made) ni sashiagemasu.

I offer this as a token of appreciation.2

Gakusha de mo nai ga, kyōshi ni wa taihen ii n' desu.

He is not at all a scholar, but very good as a teacher.

Kome wo tsukuru ni wa mizu ga takusan nakereba naranai. To grow rice one must have plenty of water.

Ni may have the sense "so as to become," often translated "as":

Shichi ni oku deposit as a pledge, pawn.

Kyaku ni iku go as a guest, be invited out.

Yōshi ni morau receive as an adopted son.

In ni ageru appoint as a committee.

Giin ni senkyo suru elect as a representative.

Fujisan no koto wo uta ni yomu compose a poem about Fuji.

Especially common are the idioms ni suru (p. 215) and ni naru (p. 262):

Koko wo niwa ni shimasu. I will make this a garden.

Hito wo baka ni suru make a fool of a person.

Hanashi no tane ni naru afford a topic for conversation (or a story).

Tame ni naru hanashi profitable conversation.

Kwōkoku ni naru make a [good] advertisement.

Mu-chū (mu = yume,  $ch\overline{u} = naka$ ) ni naru become absorbed.

Ate ni naranai hito a person not to be relied on.

Kodomo no byōki ga ki ni natte hitobanjū nerarenakatta.

The child's illness affected me so that I could not sleep all night. With ki ni naru compare ki ni suru, p. 215, 10.

a A common expression employed when a gift is offered.

(8.) Ni is used to form adverbs. In this connection note such phrases as: oshii koto ni wa (p. 117d) sad to say; shiawase na koto ni wa happily; fushigi na koto ni wa strange to say.

(9.) In the following very common idioms ni may be literally translated "in," often having the sense of "according to"

or "in regard to":

Kaeri ni tachiyorimashō. I will call on my way back. Sono koto wa hanashi ni kiita. I heard it in conversation.

Kotowaza ni.....to iimas'. In a proverb it is said that.....

Aru hito no hanashi ni wa ..... to iu koto desu.

Some one has told me that.....

Kotaemasuru ni wa (or kotaete) ..... to mōshimashita.

He replied that .....

Watakushi no omoimasu ni wa ..... (yō desu).

I think that ..... a

Naze to iu no ni ..... kara desu. The reason is that .....

Kaku ni komarimasu. It is difficult to write.

Koraeru ni koraerarenu. One cannot endure it (p. 274,2).

Sono kotoba wa kō iu imi ni (or de) tsukaimasu.

They use the word in this sense.

Tomaru wake ni wa ikanai (or ikenai). [I] may not stay. b

(10.) With causatives and passives ni indicates the agent. Compare: Watakushi ni wa dekimasen. I can't do it.

Honorifically ni wa may take the place of wa with a subject, as in  $Kw\bar{o}g\bar{o}$  heika ni wa (p. 313f).

Ni may also indicate a cause, being equivalent to no tame ni "on account of":

Fune ni you be seasick; sake ni you be intoxicated.

Hi ni yakeru be sunburned.

Namida ni kurete iru be blinded with tears.

Kane ni komaru be troubled on account of money.c

a There is no appreciable difference between watakushi no omoimasu ni wa and watakushi no kangae de wa. A sentence beginning with the latter phrase may end with to omoimasu.

b Note that while one may say, Watakushi wa ikanakereba narimasen, a phrase like itte wa naranai cannot be used in the first person. But — wake ni wa ikanai may be used in any person.

c When the cause of distress is not an external object, a subordinative or de is better: Bimbō de (or ni wa) komaru.

Shujin no kemmaku ni osorete.....

Being afraid of the master's [angry] appearance......

Kao no warui no ni wa odorokimashita.

I was startled by her ugliness.

The verbs kanzuru, kanshin suru, kampuku suru (p. 275), take ni: Sensei no go on ni kanjimashita. I was deeply moved by the master's kindness. When the object is cognate wo may be used: Itami wo kanjimashita. I felt pain. But  $kand\bar{o}$  suru  $(d\bar{o} = ugoku$  move, intr.) takes only ni, never wo.

Ni may even be instrumental:

 $Ry\bar{o}h\bar{o}$  no te ni hiku lead [two] by the hand, one on each side. Hi ni hosu dry in the sun; hi ni sarasu bleach in the sun.

O rei wa kotoba ni tsukusaremasen.

I cannot completely express (exhaust) my gratitude in words.

It appears from the above that the particle ni has more uses than any other postposition. As has been intimated (Ch. V.), it also performs the function of what we call the Dative Case in other languages. With verbs ni indicates the indirect object. While in most cases the usage is analogous to that in other languages and needs no explanation, in some the Japanese is peculiar.

Transitive verbs often take wo with the thing and ni with the person; e. g., hito ni mono wo yaru. Note particularly verbs meaning to "ask," etc., like tou (p. 247d), inoru pray, negau beseech, tanomu request, wabiru apologize, etc. Hito ni tazuneru is to inquire of a person, but to search for or call on a person is hito wo tazuneru. As in English there is a shade of difference between "mix this and that" and "mix this with that," so also in Japanese: kore to are wo mazeru and kore wo are ni mazeru. The verb kaeru change is used in the same way.

The following are examples of intransitives that take ni. It is left to the student to decide to which of the above ten rules any particular case should be assigned:

ataru: tomi ni ataru win in a lottery.

mizu ga hi ni atatte iru water stands in the sun. [fish. sakana ni ataru (aterareru) be made sick by eating spoiled shitsurei ni ataru (p. 71c) be impolite (of conduct).

au: nangi na me ni au experience hardship. [is innocent. mujitsu no tsumi ni au get punished for a crime of which one fureru touch (mono ni te wo), infringe, violate.

kakaru: haibyō ni kakaru get consumption.

isha ni kakaru consult a physician.

- ni o me ni kakaru have the honor to meet.

shigoto ni kakaru (torikakaru) begin work.

michi ni kakatte iru be on the way.

kamau: hito (no koto) ni kamau be concerned about other people's affairs (rarely wo).

katsu: teki ni katsu defeat the enemy (opp. makeru).

masaru excel.

muku, mukau, tai suru face.

Note compounds like han-tai suru or teki-tai suru oppose. otoru be inferior.

oyobu reach (p. 196d): Miru ni (wa) oyobanai. It is not necessary to look.

narau: hito ni narau learn of a person (but koto wo narau). niru resemble (Ch. V.).

sawaru: atsusa (shoki) ni sawaru be affected by the heat.

— no ki ni sawaru offend.

shaku ni sawaru hurt one's feelings (of a thing).

shinobiru endure: Kodomo wo hito-te ni watasu ni shinobinai.
I can't endure it to give the child to another.

shitagau follow, obey.

somuku act contrary to, violate.

sou be joined to, go along with.

sugiru exceed: Nagusami no tame ni yatta ni suginai. He did it only for fun.

takeru,  $ch\bar{o}zuru$  (ideogram  $ch\bar{o}=nagai$ ) be expert:

keizaigaku ni chōzuru be versed in economics.

tariru, taru be sufficient: Kiku ni (wa) tarinai. It isn't worth hearing.

 $tatsu: yaku(y\bar{o})$  ni tatsu be of use; me ni tatsu be conspicuous.

tetsudau: oya ni tetsudau help one's parents (but shigoto wo tetsudau, or shigoto no tetsudai wo suru).

tsukaeru: otto ni tsukaeru serve one's husband, tsutomeru: gwaimushō ni tsutomete iru be employed in the Foreign Office; sensei ni tsutomeru be attentive to the master (but kyōshi wo tsutomeru perform the duties of a teacher). tsuku adhere, arrive, etc.:

sensei ni tsuite keiko wo suru study under a master.

shigoto ga te ni tsukanai be unable to get on with the work. yoru approach, depend.

tsūzuru be proficient in.

kan-shō suru interfere with (but soku-baku suru is transitive). kwan-kei suru have relations with, etc., etc.

The following will strike the student as being very peculiar: mayou: michi ni mayou lose the way (also wo machigaeru). tōzakaru: hito ni tōzakaru keep away from a person (hito wo tōzakeru).

hazureru: kisoku ni hazurete iru be contrary to the rules. wakareru: hōyū ni wakareru part from a friend (also to). a hanareru: used with ni, kara, to or wo. Compare:

Kokyō ni hanarete leaving home. [England. Amerika ga Igirisu kara hanarete America separating from Bōto ga honsen to hanarete the boat parting with its ship. Kuni wo hanarete leaving one's country.

Even adjectives may take ni:

Nihongo ni kuwashii. He is well versed in Japanese. Tanuki wa kemuri ni yowai. A badger can't endure smoke. Tenka ni nadakai hito a man famous all over the country.

- 3. To is exactly equivalent to the English "with," which, however, may be rendered more emphatically to tomo ni, to issho ni. It is used with verbs and adjectives as in the following examples:
  - —to (or ni) hanashi wo suru speak with.
  - -to (or ni) tsuki-au associate with.
  - —to (or ni) yakusoku suru make an agreement with.
  - —to (or ni) onaji the same as (p. 39).
  - -to kokoro-yasui, kon-i da be intimate with.

a Wakareru may also take kara in such a sentence as: Kono uchi wa muko no okii uchi kara wakareta no desu. This house is a branch of that large house.

Kanai to futari de shibai wo mi ni ikimashita.

I went with my wife to the theater.

Watakushi to kyōdai desu. He is my brother.

Go isshin no toki ni nengō wo Meiji to aratamemashita.

At the time of the Restoration the era was changed to Meiji.

To is used with suru as explained on page 216, 10; to naru sounds rather bookish. With au, to is rarely substituted for ni, but with its compounds (p. 286, 2) to is more common. With chigau, to should be used, except in the common idiom—ni chigai nai: Chi-mei ni chigai wa nai. It is certainly a geographical name (compare p. 315a). With majiwaru or kō-sai suru either to or ni may be used.

CHAPTER LXXIX.

4. Kara, yori from, since, after: a koko kara from this place; moto kara from the first; mukashi kara of old; saki kara since some time ago; kore kara from here (= koko kara), after this, next; sore kara from there, after that, then; hiru kara in the afternoon; asa hayaku kara early in the morning; tsune kara, fudan kara usually; ura kara from the back, by way of a hint.

Hata kara kuchi wo dash'cha ikenai. You must n't put in your say (hata kara from a side, as a bystander).

Hachi ji kara hajimarimasu. It begins at eight (p. 161c). Nihonjin no kangae kara ieba.....

To speak from a Japanese point of view .....

Gakumonjō kara iu naraba..... To speak scientifically..... Kara is also used as a conjunction (Ch. LXXXII).

Yori (originally stem of yoru, is in the colloquial less common than kara. Note the expressions moto-yori of course, to be sure = gwanrai (p. 349), kanete yori for a long time =  $t\bar{o}$  kara. In making comparisons (Ch. XXXVIII.) kara miru to is sometimes substituted for yori:

Nani yori kekkō na shina wo itadaite arigatō gozaimasu.

I thank you for the handsome (incomparably splendid) gift. b Yoru osoku made okite iru yori mo asa hayaku okite benkyō suru hō qa yoku oboeraremasu. c

One can learn better by rising and studying early in the morning than by staying up late at night.

Nashi wa ringo kara miru to yohodo assari shite orimasu.

Pears are rather insipid as compared with apples.

5. Made until, as far as to, to: a a In the sense of "after" kara is used not only with substantives, but also with subordinatives (p. 96c). In either case i-rai (p. 349c) or kono-kata may be substituted for kara. The pleonastic idiom — kara irai may be heard occasionally.

b Elliptically one may say: Kore wa kore wa nani yori.....

c In such a sentence the natural predicate is a word like yoi, here converted to yoku observaremasu.

d Made is used inclusively; e. g., Doyōbi made yasunde yoroshii. You may take a vacation until Saturday (inclusive). But compare: Kono hon wo hajime kara hyaku mai no tokoro made yomimashita. I read to [the beginning of] the hundredth leaf of this book.

Doko made oide ni narimasu ka. How far are you going? Tōkyō made iku ri arimasu ka. How many ri are there to T.? Atama no teppen kara tsumasaki made doro ni mabireta. I was covered with mud from the crown of my head to the sole of my foot (lit. tips of the nails).

There is a difference between made and made ni (p. 161d):

-Ban made ame ga furimashō.

It will probably rain until this evening.

Ban made ni fūrimashō.

It will probably rain by this evening.

Made ni is used when verbs like "come", "be finished," etc., form the predicates:

Uchi de o machi mōshimasu kara, yo ji made ni oide nasai.

I will wait for you at home; come by four o'clock. a Myōnichi made ni dekimashō. It will be done by to-morrow. Note the peculiar use of made ni in the sense of "for" or "as" in such idioms as:

O rei no shirushi made ni sashiagemasu.

I offer this as a token of appreciation.

Go san-kō made ni mōshiagemasu. I offer it as a suggestion. Made in some connections means "everything including even," or simply "even," in which case the combination is treated as a substantive and may take case-particles or mo (p. 53a).

Ni made also occurs:

Shujin ga toshiyori wo hajime kodomo ni made o miyage wo katte kimashita. The master bought presents for all, from the old folks down to the children.

Uta ni made utawareru be the subject even of songs.

Note finally the use of made with verbs, as in aku made to the utmost, from akiru be surfeited, and the common idiom iu made mo nai = muron no: Iu made mo nai warui koto desu. It is of course bad(lit. obvious badness).

6. Ye to, toward: gwaikoku ye iku go abroad; waki ye deru go out [of the house];  $Nihonj\bar{u}$  ye hiromaru be spread throughout all Japan. Ye is often substituted for ni or used pregnantly:

a Yo ji made irasshai would mean: "Stay till four o'clock."

 $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$  ye tsuku arrive at  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$ ; tana ye ageru put on the shelf (metaphorically: be oblivious of);  $y\bar{u}binkyoku$  ye yotte iku call at the post office on the way: Teikoku Hoteru ye tomaru stop at the Imperial Hotel. Note: Nihon ye atsuraeru order from Japan.

CHAPTER LXXX.

Quasi-postpositions, as we have previously remarked, are really substantives. They are joined to dependent words by means of no and may themselves take case-particles and postpositions proper. Instead of a limiting substantive with no, the demonstratives kono, sono and ano may be used (p. 36). Either ni or de, according to the context (p. 338, top) may be attached to quasi-postpositions denoting place; with such words as kawari and tame the proper particle is ni. But this postposition is not infrequently omitted; e.g., with mae, aida, hoka, kawari, tame. Quasi-postpositions may be used as predicates:

Yama no mukō desu ka, temae desu ka.

Is it beyond the mountain or on this side?

Mon no soto desu ka, uchi desu ka.

Is it outside the gate or inside?

1. Ue (in some connections kami) on, over, above. Besides the ordinary sense, ue often means "in regard to":

 $Bump\bar{o}$  no ue de wa tadash $\bar{u}$  gozaimasu ga ....

It is correct so far as the grammar is concerned, but .... For expressions like  $tetsugakuj\bar{o}$  no philosophical,  $rigakuj\bar{o}$  no pertaining to physics, etc., see p. 120. In counting, etc., "over" or "above" is usually to be renderd  $ij\bar{o}$ :  $hachij\bar{u}$  yen  $ij\bar{o}$  (no ue) over eighty yen;  $reiten\ ij\bar{o}$  above zero;  $ch\bar{u}t\bar{o}\ ij\bar{o}$  no hito the middle and upper classes.

2. Shita (in some connections shimo) under, below, down: Hashi no shita wo tōru pass under the bridge.

Kama no shita wo taku make a fire under the pot.

Yuki no shita kara deru come out from under the snow. To ijö corresponds ika: reiten ika below zero.

3. Mae before, in the presence of, ago:

Me no mae ni aru mono what is before one's eyes.

Fujin no mae de sonna koto wo itte wa shitsurei desu.

It is impolite to talk like that in the presence of ladies.

O kado no mae (go mon-zen) wo tōrimashita.

I passed (the front of) your gate.

Roku nen mae no koto desu. It happened six years ago. Observe that when mae is used in a temporal sense the particle no is often omitted and that ni also may be omitted: roku nen mae six years ago; sono mae before that, previously.

With words derived from the Chinese, zen may be substituted for mae: go isshin zen before the Restoration; kigen zen B. C. (p. 228a).

Nan nen zen no'koto desu ka. How many years ago was it? In comparing dates izen (ni) is used (p. 129b).

- 4. Ushiro behind, back. But kage is more frequent in such expressions as: yama no kage ni behind the mountain (kage shadow).
- 5. Omote differs from mae in that it indicates the front side of a thing, the surface.
- 6. Ura has a wider range of meaning and is more common than ushiro. It often means the opposite side of a thing, the reverse, the rear.
- 7. Saki may also be distinguished from mae. Both are used either of place or of time. Saki is preferred to mae when there is a movement forwards:  $Kono\ saki\ no\ t\bar{o}ri\ desu$ . It is the street next beyond this. Compare  $mae\ no\ t\bar{o}ri$  the street in front [of the house], or the street just crossed. <sup>a</sup>

In speaking of time saki when used of the past takes ni, but it is more commonly used, without ni, of the future: ima kara a O saki ni (go men wo kōmurimasu) or O saki ni (wo) itashimasu. Excuse me for going ahead of you. O saki ni oide nas'tte kudasai. Please go ahead. Saki in saki de, saki ye, etc., is used as a pronoun of the third person (pp. 28, 3 and 365,4).

sambyaku nen bakari saki ni about three hundred years ago; ima kara sambyaku nen saki wa three hundred years hence.

8. Ato, too, is used either of place or of time (p. 364a):a

Hito no ato ni (tsuite) iku go behind a person.

Hito no ato kara iku follow a person.

The synonymn nochi is used only of time. Note sono nochi (ni), sono go after that, subsequently. To zen corresponds go: go isshin go, kigen go, etc. To izen corresponds igo.

9. Te-mae this side.

10. Mukō, mukai opposite side, beyond.c

Kawa no mukō ye iku go to the other side of the river.

- 11. Soba beside, near, by: torii no soba no chaya the restaurant near the torii. Practically synonymous with soba are hata, kiwa, hotori, atari.
- 12. Waki beside, at the side of. Katawara may be regarded as synonymous.

13. Mawari, gururi, meguri around.

14. Aida between, during (local and temporal):

Yoru no aida (or uchi) ni during the night.

Hito tsuki no aida for one month.

Note that ni is used in defining the time of an incident, but not in speaking of duration of time. The Chinese equivalent of aida is kan:  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$  Yokohama kan no tetsud $\bar{o}$  the railroad between  $T\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$  and Yokohama. The same word enters into such compounds as zok-kan (ni) among the common people,  $issh\bar{u}kan$  one week (p. 76, top), etc.

15. Naka in, within, inside, among, in the middle of:

Hako no naka ye irete o kure. Put it into the box.

Tansu no naka kara dashite o kure.

Take it out of the bureau.

a It is a curious anomaly that ato ni is used chiefly in a local sense, while ato de is temporal.

b It is impossible to decide whether mae, saki, ato, nochi, etc., in some of the expressions given in this chapter should be parsed as postpositions or as adverbs. The Englishman says three hundred years ago (or hence); the German, vor (or nach) drei hundert Jahren. Izen and igo, like irai (p. 349c), are also used alone or with wa as adverbs.

c Mukai is used only in the sense of "opposite side," not in that of "beyond": Köbe no mukā ni beyond Köbe; Köbe no mukai (mukā) ni opposite Köbe. Kawa (gawa) may be added to mukā or mukai.

The Chinese equivalent of naka is  $ch\bar{u}$ , used mostly with Chinese words:

O keiko  $ch\bar{u}$  desu ka. Are you in the midst of a lesson? Mada shiken  $ch\bar{u}$  desu. We are still having examinations. Yasumi  $ch\bar{u}$  (ni) during the vacation.

Gozen  $ch\bar{u}$  (ni) in the forenoon, or, at dinner.

This  $ch\bar{u}$  enters into numerous compounds:  $kan-ch\bar{u}$  season of greatest cold,  $sho-ch\bar{u}$  season of greatest heat,  $d\bar{o}-ch\bar{u}$  journey,  $shi-ch\bar{u}$  the city, etc.<sup>a</sup> The same word in its nigoried form  $j\bar{u}$  meaning "entire" (p. 341,top) is used largely with words of native origin:  $uchij\bar{u}$  the whole house,  $muraj\bar{u}$  the whole village,  $yoj\bar{u}$  the whole night, etc.

16. Uchi b is unlike naka in that it may be used also of time: Hito tsuki no uchi (ni) within a month.

Chikai uchi (ni), sono uchi (ni) within a short time, soon. Note that in the sense of "among" uchi ni cannot be used except when the existence of a thing is in question, that is, when a word like aru, oru, ōi or sukunai is the predicate. Compare:

Kono uchi de donata mo zonjimasen.

I don't know any one among these people.

Kono uchi ni zonjite oru hito wa hitori mo gozaimasen.

Among these people there is not one that I know.

Kono uchi de o ki ni iranai no wa dore desu ka.

Among these which is it that you don't like?

Kono uchi ni o ki ni itta shina wa arimasen ka.

Among these is there no article that you like?

With Chinese words nai or dai may take the place of uchi:  $itch\bar{o}$ -nai within a  $ch\bar{o}$ , i. e., the whole street; shi-nai the city tei-nai the grounds (of a dwelling), kei-dai the enclosure.

17. Soto outside. The Chinese equivalent is gwai: kai-gwai over the sea, foreign countries, an-gwai beyond expectation.

18. Hoka besides, except: sono hoka (ni) or sono ta (ni) besides that; omoi-no-hoka (ni) beyond expectation.

a The word  $joeh\bar{u}$  maidservant, from jo = onna, was originally a collective term. Compare ningen human being, from nin = hito and gen = aida, and kanai wife (or family), from ka = ie.

b The word is identical with nchi house. We don't say nchi no nchi ni, but ie no nchi ni. Uchi ni orimasu. He is at home.

19. Kawari instead: sono kawari (ni) instead of that.

20. Tame for (final or causal): kuni no tame (ni) in behalf of one's country; nen no tame (ni) to avoid mistakes (lit. for the sake of attention);  $y\bar{o}-j\bar{o}$  no tame (ni) for the sake of health;  $b\bar{o}-f\bar{u}$  no tame (ni) on account of the typhoon. Sei de(sei=ikioi) is synonymous with tame ni in its causal sense:

O tenki no sei de zutsū ga shimasu.

I have a headache on account of the weather.

Note such combinations as: ue-shita, kami-shimo,  $j\bar{o}$ -ge; ato-saki before and after, or reversal of the order; zen-go before or after, about;  $ch\bar{u}$ -gwai or nai-gwai home and abroad.

There are other words which might properly be included in the above list of quasi-postpositions.

ni tsuite concerning, regarding, about, with, under (a teacher). Kyōkwasho-jiken ni tsuite concerning the text-book affair.

a Motte is sometimes used pleonastically with de (p. 198a).

b The word tai-in corresponds to tai-yō sun. The Chinese words yō and in denote respectively light and shade, or positive and negative, or male and female. Compare San-yō-dō the region south of the mountains and San-in-dō the region north of the mountains.

Gwaikoku no sensei ni tsuite under a foreign teacher. ni yotte (ni yoreba, yoruto) according to, by the aid of (formal). ni kwan shite = ni tsuite.<sup>a</sup> ni tai shite = ni mukatte.

To this list might be added nakute (or naku) without. For nakute one may substitute nashi ni (p. 98b). To either form wa may be added when a negative verb follows: nakucha, nashi ni wa.

Politer forms may be substituted in some cases; e. g., ni okimashite, ni tsukimashite.

Some of these subordinatives may be used attributively: kore ni tsuite no o hanashi the talk about this; Shina ni tai shite no or (tai suru) sei-ryaku the policy in regard to China.

Reversing the order we might say jū hakku nin no ikino-kotta mono wa.

b Katsu Awa (no Kami) was an official of the Bakufu at the time of the Restoration. By his prudent negotiations for peace he averted the destruction of Edo by the imperial forces.

cording to a letter just received (todoita), he will arrive tomorrow evening (it is said). Under whom did you learn German? He studied ophthalmology under a famous physician in (of) Berlin. As for the apples, put all except the rotten ones into this box. This year there is a famine in Tōhoku. After about a month come again and see.

THE CONJUNCTION. a #### CHAPTER LXXXII.

Conjunctions also are divided into two classes, conjunctions proper and quasi-conjunctions. The latter are simply substantives used in lieu of conjunctions. In general it is to be noted that the essential conjunctions belong to the words or clauses which they follow rather than to those which they precede. Further it should be remembered that where the English loosely connects coördinated clauses by means of such conjunctions as "and" or "or," be the Japanese language usually by means of verbal inflections subordinates one clause to another (p. 162,1); e. g.,

Atsui kimono wo kinakereba kaze wo hikimashō.

I must put on heavier clothing, or I shall catch cold.

1. To is used (a) in the sense of "and" with nouns, pronouns and numerals, but never to connect indicative verbs. c To is used when all the items in a series are enumerated. It is repeated after each word except the last. In formal speech, as in the literary language, it follows the last also. To the final to case-particles and postpositions may be added:

Shōyuto mirin to suto (wo) sambai mazete sambaizuto iimasu. A mixture of soy, mirin, and vinegar is called sambaizu. d On asyndetic constructions see p. 225a.

a Setsu-zoku-shi, from setsu join (compare hito ni sessuru associate with a person), zoku = tsuzukeru connect.

b The student needs to be on his guard against the tendency to carry English conjunctions over into Japanese. Foreigners often disfigure their speech by excessive use of  $s\bar{o}$  shite, etc.

c This does not apply to substantivized verbs: Fusaku de atta no to sumi ga yasu-katta no de konnen wa yama no mono ga taihen komatte imasu. The harvests having been bad and charcoal cheap, the mountaineers are in great distress.

d To vary the expression one may also substitute ni for to: Su ni mirin to shōyu wo mazete, etc. Mirin is a sweet kind of sake.

(b) To after a verb in the present tense may mean "if," "when," "so soon as" (in the last sense also, to sugu ni). It expresses the idea of immediate sequence, either in a hypothetical or in an actual case. Note that the present tense is required even when the principal verb of the sentence is past:

Taikutsu shite kuru to, omoshiroi hon ga yomitaku narimasu. I begin to want to read an interesting book when I get weary. Kodomo ga seichō suru to, haha no tedasuke ni narimasu. When children grow up they are helpful to their mothers.

O kyaku san ga kuru to, sugu ni shokuji wo shimashō.

We will eat as soon as the guests come.

Yokuchō ni naru to, mina dete ikimashita.

The next morning all went away.

 $S\bar{o}$  suru to in that case, then.

(c) To in the sense of "that" connects dependent clauses with verbs meaning to say, promise, hear, believe, etc. It is the only mark of quotation, direct or indirect, and it may not be omitted as "that" may be in English. "I think I'll go" is always Ikō to omoimasu. Not infrequently the principal verb is omitted and the to alone indicates the indirect character of the clause. Sometimes the verb of the dependent clause is omitted, so that the to immediately follows a noun or an interrogative pronoun:

Honto (da) to omoimasu. I think it true.

Honto to wa omoimasen. I do not think it true.

Hirata to iu hito a man called Hirata.

Kore wa Eigo de nan to mōshimasu ka.

What is this called in English?

Note the double conjunction in:

Asu kaette kureru yō ni to tanomaremashita.

I was asked to return to-morrow.

a Mark the position of wa.

b The idiom to in corresponds to a simple apposition in English; e. g., Mikado to in kotoba the word "mikado"; ten to in ji the character "heaven." For to wa=to in no wa see p. 272d. For to in to=to see p. 245, bottom: Watakushi ga dekakern to in to, kitto ame ga furimasu. If I go out, it is sure to rain. Sō suru to in to if we do that.

To may also stand between an indirect question and the verb:

Asu kuru ka to kikimashita.

I inquired if he would come to-morrow.

In, Ikō ka to omou, I think probably I'll go, the ka simply expresses doubt about going. a Often ii ka to omou is practically equivalent to ii to omou. On the other hand ka may stand between a dependent clause with to and the principal verb, giving to either or both a sense of doubt or uncertainty:

Kuru to ka iimashita. He said, I think, that he'd come.

2. Dano (de aru no?) serves to connect nouns when the series is not closed and one might proceed further in the enumeration. It must follow every word in the list, including the last. It may also be translated "or." An expression like iroiro usually follows the last dano:

Bara dano, ajisai dano, tsubaki dano, iroiro arimasu. There are various kinds, roses, hydrangeas, camellias, etc.

3. Ka is ordinarily a particle of interrogation. It is joined to dependent as well as to principal clauses, and is much used in double questions:

Dekiru ka dō ka wakarimasen. b

I don't know whether it is feasible or not.

Dō ka kō ka shiagemashita.

We got it done after a fashion.

A single ka may serve the same purpose as the English "or" with nouns, numerals or sentences:

Kono heya wa hachi jō ka jū jō desu.

This room has eight or ten mats.

Kiku ka ajisai ka nani ka hitotsu uemashō. [of the kind. I will plant chrysanthemums or hydrangeas or something Hairu ka hairanai ni mimashita.

He saw it the moment he came in.

a The idiom to omou to is used in the sense of "when I am about to." Note also the elliptical construction: Miru to wa nashi ni mimashita. I happened to see it unintentionally.

b Note that while one says  $d\bar{o}$  desu ka; in familiar talk there is a tendency to omit da in the expression  $d\bar{o}$  da ka, for the sake of euphony. Sore mita koto ka. Do you see? (= I told you so). Note also that after a principal clause ka may be omitted when the clause contains an interrogative word (p. 17g):  $D\bar{o}$  desu, but  $D\bar{o}$  desu ka zonjimasen.

The idiom to ka is similarly used. A list of items connected by means of to ka may end with  $iu y\bar{o}$  na mono or similar words.

4. The particle ya is in classical language used like ka. In the colloquial it appears in the idiom—ya ina ya, ina being a classical form = -nai: Kiku ya ina ya tobidashite itta. He rushed out the moment he heard it. Note also: Nani ya ko ya to torikonde imasu. I am busy with all sorts of things. Ya is also used like dano, but is omitted with the last noun, which is often followed by nado or nazo. A case-particle may then be attached:

Kujaku ya kiji wa keiro ga utsukushii.

Peafowls and pheasants (etc.) have beautiful plumage.

Aramonoya de wa hōki ya sumi ya tsukegi nazo wo urimasu.

At coarse-goods-shops they sell brooms, charcoal, matches, etc.

5. Yara too was originally interrogative. Its uses are analogous to those of the interrogative particles explained above:

Ima wakarete itsu au koto yara.

We part now: when shall we meet again?

Doko ni oru (koto) yara watakushi ni wa ikkō wakarimasen.

I have n't the faintest idea where he is.

Okumato yara (iu hito) ya korosarekakemashita. An attempt has been made to assassinate some one—Okuma, I think.

Ano o kamisan wa rambō de otoko yara onna yara wakaranai hodo desu. The woman is so unruly that one would hardly be able to tell whether she is a man or a woman.

Shishi yara tora yara iroiro no dōbutsu ga orimasu.

There are lions and tigers and various kinds of beasts.

6. Aruiwa is largely used as an adverb in the sense of "in some cases", "possibly"; especially common is its use before alternatives:

Omu wa aruiwa warattari aruiwa naitari iroiro hito no mane wo itashimasu. A parrot now laughs and again weeps and in various ways imitates people.

Nihon no rekishi ni mo aruiwa sō iu rei ga nai to mo kagirimasen. <sup>a</sup> In Japanese history too there may possibly have been such instances.

a Kagiru limit. I do not assert that there are no such instances. One may substitute wa for me, or say nai to wa iemasen.

Aruiwa kuru ka mo shiremasen. He may come possibly. Aruiwa also serves as a simple conjunction in the sense of "or":

Ushi aruiwa uma nado ga nai to shita naraba....

If there were no oxen or horses....

Note that aruiwa does not connect clauses except when the verb is in the alternative (or inconclusive) form.

7. Matawa is synonymous with aruiwa as a conjunction, not as an adverb, and in a series is often for the sake of variety substituted for aruiwa. It is used like the English "or," at the beginning of a sentence which ends in a question or expression of doubt:

Matawa kondo no hakurankwai no koto de mo hanashimashō ka. Or shall I speak of the recent Exposition?

- 8. Moshikuwa simply connects nouns, like aruiwa or matawa. It is more formal.
- 9. Shi is a disjunctive particle marking the transition from one to another of two coördinate clauses (p. 14d):

Niwa ni wa momo no ki mo aru shi, sakura no ki mo aru. In the garden there are both peach and cherry trees.

10. Ga is mildly adversative: a

Habakari desu ga (p. 279,6), sono fude wo totte kudasai. I am sorry to trouble you, but would you hand me that fude? The second clause is often understood (p. 161e). Not infre-

The second clause is often understood (p. 161e). Not infrequently ga is a mere connective without any adversative sense:

Kesa shimbun wo mite imashita ga, futo myō na koto wo miidashimashita. I was reading the paper this morning when I happened to see a strange bit of news.

At the beginning of a sentence da ga may mean "nevertheless" (=sore de mo), or it may mean nothing.

11. Keredomo, originally the concessive form of the classical auxiliary keri, is more strongly adversative.

12. Shikashi, shikashi-nagara, or sari-nagara, is the strongest adversative. b a Like ga, the particles ni (no ni) and vo (mono vo) are used as adversative conjunctions (pp. 149, 273).

b Shika is the classical equivalent of  $s\bar{o}$ ; shikari =  $s\bar{o}$  desu. In formal speech variants taken from the literary language are much used; e. g., shikaru ni, shikari to iedomo, etc. Comp. shika mo moreover. Another equivalent is to wa in mono no.

- 13. Nara(ba), or, more rarely, nareba (p. 246b), the conditional form of the classical verb "to be," shows its original sense in such idioms as  $oiriy\bar{o}$  nara if you need it,  $Say\bar{o}$  nara Good bye! a (lit.ifitisso...). Note naze naraba "for" (p. 224b). In addition to nara(ba) or a conditional inflection the hypothetical character of a clause may be made more prominent by the use of an anticipative conjunction, moshi or man-ichi.
  - 14. Moshi, moshi mo, moshi ya if.

Moshi dare ka o kyaku ga attara...

If a visitor should come...

Moshi go yō ga arimasu nara...If you need [me]...

- 15. Man-ichi (lit. ten thousand to one) = italicized "if."
- 16. Mo in the sense "even if", "although", "though only," may follow the subordinative (pp. 167, 172) or, rarely, the indicative. With the indicative to mo is more common.

Shinu to mo koko wa ugokanai.

I'll not budge though I die for it.

When repeated, mo is to be rendered "whether—or":

Atte mo nakute mo onaji koto desu.

It doesn't matter whether it is there or not.

On mo-mo in the sense of "both—and", "either—or", "neither—nor," see p. 354. It is thus used, not only with substantives, but also rarely with verbs:

Iku mo ikanai mo watashi no katte da.

I am free to go or not, as I please.

Compare: Iku to mo ikanai to mo whether he goes or not.

Concessive clauses may be emphasized by prefixing moshi, man-ichi, tatoi, or yoshi.

17. Tatoi:

Tatoi shinu to mo yatte minakucha narimasen.

I must attempt it even if it costs my life. [atte mo... Jissai sonna koto wa nai, shikashi tatoi sonna koto ga In reality there is no such thing, but even if there were...

18. Yoshi (ya), yoshimba:

Yoshi ya samui hi ga atte mo hi wo taku hodo no koto wa

a Instead of sayō nara, people sometimes say: Sire ja (o wakare mīshimasu, or shikkei itashimasu).

arimasumai. Even if we have cold days it will scarcely so be cold as to make it necessary to have a fire.

Yoshiya kore kara yōjin shita tokoro ga, mō naorumai. Even if he should be careful hereafter he'll hardly recover.

19. Tote, 'tte (=to itte). The idiom—ta tote or—ta 'tte without mo has a concessive sense:  $s\bar{o}$  itta 'tte= $s\bar{o}$  itte mo; shinda 'tte=shinde mo. Note also:

Gakkō ni haittareba tote amari dekiru yō ni wa narumai. Even if he enters school he will not amount to very much. Compare sareba tote nevertheless. Tote may indicate purpose:

Anokoga kono sakana wo anata ni agetai tote jibun de ryōri wo itashimashita. The little girl cooked the fish herself with the intention of giving it to you.

20. Nagara (mo) "while", "though," is used after the stems of verbs (p. 279, 6) or Chinese compounds. In some connections it has a slightly adversative sense, as in habakari nagara:

Go kurō (mendō) nagara... I am sorry to trouble you, but... Shitsurei nagara... Pardon me, but...

O kinodoku nagara... I am very sorry for you, but...

21. Shidai as soon as (p. 281b):

Konnichi gakkō ga sumi shidai agarimashō.

I will come to-day as soon as the school closes.

22. Kara with an indicative verb is causal:

Sore da kara (shite)... For that reason...

Following a subordinative kara (ni) means "after": Uchi ye kaette kara (ni) tegami wo kakimashifa.

I wrote a letter after I got home.

23. Yori after, since:

Hito me miru yori shitawashiku omoimashita.

I felt attached to him from the time I saw him.

Haha ga byōki ni kakatte yori konokata chitto mo soto ye deru hima ga arimasen.

Since mother became sick I have not had time to go out.

24. Made or made ni until, before (p. 379):

Sensei ga kuru made shitaku shite imashō.

I will study until the teacher comes.

Sensei ga kuru made ni shitaku shite okimashō. [comes. I will have my lesson prepared by the time the teacher

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

In many cases an English conjunction has to be rendered in Japanese by means of a substantive, the accompanying clause being in the attributive position (Ch. XIX.). Many of these substantives have been treated under the heads of The Adverb and The Postposition. The most common are:

- 1. Mae (ni, wa) before: kuru mae ni or, rarely, konai mae ni before he comes. For the use of ni and wa see p. 155. Izen may be substituted for mae, especially in speaking of historical events.
  - 2. Nochi (ni, wa) after. Compare:

Watakushi ga deta nochi ni kimashita. He came after I left. Gakkō kara kaetta nochi de ii.

It will do after you return from school.

3. Saki (ni, wa) before: gakkō ni hairu saki ni before he entered the school. Compare:

Oya ga shinda saki wa dō shite ittara yokarō ka. How shall we manage after father is dead?

4. Ato de after. Compare:

Kisha ga deta ato de kimashita.

He came after the train left.

Gozen wo tabeta ato ni (ye) kyaku ga kimashita.

After we had eaten, visitors came.

Ore ga nai ato de wa after I'm gone.

5. Ue de after, until after (with negatives). Ue ni means "and in addition."

Mita ue de kau ka mo shiremasen.

I may possibly buy it after I have seen it.

Mita ue de nakereba kawaremasen.

I can't buy it until after I have seen it.

Makesashita ue ni kai mo shinaide itte shimaimashita.

He made him reduce the price and then went off without buying anything.

Note also ijō wa:

Makesashita ijō wa kawanakereba narimasen.

After you have beat down the price you ought to buy.

6 Aida (ni, wa) while, as long as: matsuri no aru aida as long as the festival lasts.

- 7. Uchi (ni, wa) while, as long as, until (with negatives):
  Inaka ni oru uchi ni while I was in the country.
  Yome ni ikan uchi until she is married.
- 8. Kagiri (ni wa or wa) as long as, unless, without (with negatives, p. 155):

Gessha wo osamenai kagiri wa kyōjō ni iru koto wo yurushimasen. [Students] are not permitted to attend the classes (class-rooms) as long as they are in arrears with the tuition.

9. Toki when, as, if:

Chōdo neyō to omou toki ni jishin ga yurimashita.

There was an earthquake just as I was about to retire.

For the present tense the past may be substituted. In translating the English pluperfect the past is required:

Ame ga yanda toki ni yadoya ye tsukimashita.

We arrived at the hotel after the rain had stopped.

Toki wa and toki ni wa are often used hypothetically, especially with a preceding moshi or manichi:

Moshi tegami ga nakunatta toki ni wa dō itashimashō ka.

If the letter should be lost, what shall I do?

Substantives or adjectives may take the place of verbs with toki; e. g., kodomo no toki ni when I was a child, wakai toki ni when I was young.

Various substantives denoting time may be substituted for toki, such as ori, koro, tsuide, setsu, ji-bun, hyō-shi: watakushi ga Amerika ni iru (ita) jibun ni when I was in America.

Rondon ye tegami wo dasu tsuide ni o tanomi no hon wo toriyosemashō. When I write to London I will order the book for which you have asked.

10. Tabi (tambi) ni, tabi-goto ni as often as, whenever: ji-shin ga suru tabi ni every time there is an earthquake.

11. Tokoro is often to be rendered "just when", "just as." a a Tokoro desu is often to be rendered "just": Ima dekakeru tokoro desu. I am just going out (to a visitor). Tadaima okita tokoro desu. I have just gotten up. In the literary style tokoro is used like koto: Korc waga hossuru tokoro nari. This is what I desire. The learned sometimes use tokoro in this sense even in the colloquial. Such expressions as the following are quite common: Koronda tokoro wa minakatta. I didn't see the fall. In speeches tokoro no is freely used to connect adjectives or attributive (relative) clauses with the substantives which they modify.

It may take various particles and postpositions according to the nature of the principal verb of the sentence:

Gozen wo tabete iru tokoro ye hito ga kimashita.

A person came just as I was eating.

Kirō to suru tokoro wo hito ga tomemashita.

Just as he was about to cut [at him], some one interfered. For the idioms tokoro ga and tokoro de as adversative conjunctions see pp. 212c and 365a. The latter has three distinct uses:

Makeru (maketa) to shita tokoro ga...

Supposing that we are defeated...

Maketa tokoro de nigemashita.

When defeated they at once fled.

Shōbai wo shiyō to itta tokoro de, motode ga nakereba dame desu. You may attempt to do business, but it is of no use without capital.

Watakushi ga mita tokoro de wa...

According to my observation....

The peculiar idiom dokoro ka or dokoro ja nai indicates that something that has just been said is very wide of the mark:

Ano hito wa uta ga dekimasu ka. Utaeru dokoro ka: yūmei na ongakusha desu.

"Can he sing?" I should say. He's a famous musician. Kuru made matenai dokoro ja arimasen to mo.

There's nothing at all to prevent my waiting till he comes.

12. Kawari (ni) but instead: 2

Kono ryō san nichi wa kumotte imashita kawari ni konnichi wa sukkari haremashita. It has been cloudy the last two or three days, but to-day it is clear.

13. Tōri (ni) just as, as:

Naze iitsuketa tõri ni shinai ka?

Why don't you do as I told you?

Mae ni mo mõshita tõri desu. It is just as I said before. Sakki mo iu tõri as I said before.

14. Tame (ni) in order that, that: wasuren tame ni that I a "Instead of" is usually to be rendered by means of the negative subordinative: Ki wo tsukezu ni hoka no koto wo kangaete orimashita. Instead of paying attention I was thinking of something else.

may not forget. In formal speech the literary idiom of the future tense with ga is occasionally heard: shiran ga tame ni that we may know.

15.  $Y\bar{o}$  (ni) in such a manner that, so that, as if:

Subette koroban yō ni ki wo o tsuke yo.

Be careful not to slip and fall.

Sono ki wo kaze ni fukitaosarenai yō ni yoku sasaete kure.

Support the tree so that the wind will not blow it over.

Especially common are the idioms  $y\bar{o}$  ni suru(p. 216, top) and  $y\bar{o}$  ni naru:

Okurenai yō ni shitai mon' desu.

I should like to arrange so as not to be late.

Shina mo chikagoro wa dandan gwaikoku to majiwaru yō ni narimashita. Recently China too has gradually come to have intercourse with foreign countries.

Jigoku de hotoke ni atta yō ni ureshū gozaimashita.

It was as delightful as if I had met a buddha in hell.

Rampu no abura ga tsukita yō ni miemasu.

It looks as if the oil in the lamp were exhausted.

Aru yō ni iimashita. He spake as if he had it (p. 134d). Yō ni is frequently joined with mieru a and verbs of saying, as above. With verbs of hearing, thinking, etc., it is usually to be rendered "that":

Nani ka sō iu koto ga aru yō ni uketamawarimashita.

I have heard that there is something of the kind.

16. Hodo so that (of result or degree):

Ano ki wa otona ga jū nin kakaranakereba kakae-kirenai hodo futoi. The tree is so stout that it takes ten grown men to encircle it (if ten grown men do not take part, they cannot completely embrace it).

Ano yama wa ten wo tsuku hodo takai.

That mountain is so high as to touch (pierce) the sky.

a With mieru the conjunction to may also be used, especially in the form miete: Tabako ga suki da to miete taisō nomimasu. He appears to be fond of tobacco and smokes a great deal. Are wa kinō sugu ni kane wo kaesu yō na koto wo itte ikimashita ga, hon no mōshiwake to miete ima ni mada motte kimasen. He promised yesterday to return the money at once, but it must have been a mere excuse; he has n't brought it yet. On yō desu in the sense of "it is as though," "it seems that," see p. 117g.

Kutabireru hodo sampo shinakereba narimasen.

You must walk enough to tire yourself.

In these sentences gurai may be substituted for hodo. speaking of a simple fact hodo only may be used: Kutabireru hodo sampo shimashita. 2

17. Yue (ni) for the reason that, because, accordingly. YueNote sore yue ni therefore. belongs to formal speech. narratives the verb of the clause may be omitted so that words like mono, koto, etc., immediately precede yue: — to iu yō na koto yue on the ground that.

THE INTERJECTION. a

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

Interjections may be divided into two groups. The first consists of mere sounds expressive of emotion:

1.  $\overline{A}$  Ah— of a sudden perception or recollection, delight, admiration, alarm, weariness, etc.

2. Ei — of displeasure or contempt: b

Ei, urusai ko da nei.

Don't bother me (you are an annoying child).

3. Mā Well — of pleasure, satisfaction, amazement, hesitancy, exhortation, etc.

Mā, mā, yoku irasshaimashita.

Well, well, I'm glad you've come.

Mā, yokatta. Well, that was fine.

Mā, dō shita mon' darō. Well, what shall we do?

Mā, sonna imi desu. Well, it means something like that.

Mā, ippuku o agari nasai. Come, have some tea.

4. Sa, sā Come—urging, inciting, encouraging:

Sā, ikimashō. Come, let's go.

 $S\bar{a}$ ,  $s\bar{a}$ . Come (or go) on!

5. Ya, yā — of surprise, delight, alarm.

6. Oi, oioi Hello! (used mostly by men in trying to get the attention of others, especially inferiors).

7. Oya, oyaoya—of surprise:

Oya, sō desu ka Indeed! you don't say?

Oyaoya, taihen na arashi desu.

Whew! it's a dreadful storm.

Oyaoya, o cha wo koboshimashita.

Oh dear, I've spilled the tea.

8. Yare, yareyare—of weariness, relief:

Yareyare, go kurō deshita.

It's too bad to have burdened you so.

9. Dokkoi, dokkoisho—encouraging, warning.

a Kan-tō-shi, from kan = aida, i. e., "inter-" and tō - nageru throw, i. e., "-jeet." b Hei (p. 356) is often pronounced ei: Ei, uan to osshaimashita ka. What did you say?

The second group consists of interjections which seem to have been derived from other words:

- 1. Moshi, moshimoshi Hello! Say! (p. 207b).
- 2. Nāni What! Oh no! Nothing at all.
- 3. Kora (kore wa) rebuking.
- 4. Sora Look at that!
- 5. Ara—of surprise, alarm or delight: Ara, taihen na koto ga dekimashita. Oh! a terrible thing has happened.
- 6. Dō-mo—of perplexity:
  Dōmo, ikemasen. Pshaw! it's of no use.

Nakanaka dōmo (=it's exceedingly difficult).

Mā, mā, dōmo (of great astonishment).

7. Naru-hodo I see, quite so, very true, indeed. Naruhodo may indicate the sudden perception of a new thought. It may also take the place of the ha's, he's, ei's, um's etc., with which polite people punctuate a conversation to which they are listening attentively. Sō desu ka may be used in the same way. Older men or provincials say also ikanimo or ikasama (p.354a).

From the English have been imported hiyahiya (Hear, hear) and  $n\bar{o}n\bar{o}$ , exclamations indicating respectively approval and disapproval of a speech. Another expression is  $kin\text{-}ch\bar{o}=tsu\text{-}tsushinde\ kiku\ I$  listen respectfully. <sup>a</sup>

With the interjections should be classed the imperative particles na and yo (p. 150,2) b and ya (vulgar, p. 249f); the interrogative particles ka, ya and yara (Ch. LXXXII.), and the familiar vocative ya (classical yo, p. 34f). O Hana san may be called Hana ya by her superiors. A mother in calling her boy will say  $B\bar{o}$  ya. An aged servant may be addressed Jii ya (or  $B\bar{a}$  ya).

a While the speech of the average Japanese is more refined than that of the average foreigner, execration and the abuse of sacred words are by no means unknown. Vulgar people express their detestation of a person by saying Kutabare (kutabaru die), or Shinde shimae, or Shini-sokonai-me (lit. one who has failed to die). Old people express gratification by saying Namu Amida Butsu (Namu I adore, from the Sanscrit), just as the Germans say Gott sei Dank. Namusambō = Great heavens! Sambō are the three [Buddhist] treasures bup-pō-sō, i. e., butsu Buddha, hō law or doctrine and sō priest.

b Na and yo may follow even regular imperatives of the second conjugation: Ippai agare yo. Kudasai na. Note also: Chōdai na (said by a woman).

Finally we have the particles of emphasis:

1. Ne or nei at the end of a sentence indicates agreement or an appeal for assent:

Nikkō no o tamaya wa kekkō desu ne.

The ancestral shrines of Nikkō are spleudid, are n't they?  $S\bar{o}$  desu ne. That's so (but see p. 1341).

Ne may also follow any word in a sentence to draw attention to it or simply to fill out a pause, like the English "You know." It is thus used in explaining things to a dull hearer. Ne is especially common in Tōkyō. It characterizes the speech of children; e. g.,

Tonari no o bā san ga ne, sakuban kite ne, kyō wa ne, Shintomiza ye ne, tsurete iku to itta n' da kara ne, watasha ne, matte iru n' da yo. The old lady next door said last evening that she would take me to Shintomiza a to-day; so I am waiting for her.

Ano ne, or simply ne, like the English "I say," attracts attention to what is to be said.

- 2. Na, nā is used like ne, but only by men.
- 3. No, no is becoming obsolete in most parts of the country.
- 4. Sa occurs after words like  $say\bar{o}$  and nani and is very common with elliptical constructions:

Ikanai to sa. He says he won't go.

Nani sa, sonna wake wa nai.

What do you mean? That's not the case.

A story often ends with to sa.

5. Yo at the end of a sentence indicates a positive assertion. It is used very much more by women than by men.

Kono jibiki ni wa arimasen yo.

It isn't in this dictionary, I tell you.

Abunai yo. Look out; that's dangerous.

Girls have a fashion of substituting the subordinative with yo for the indicative:

Watakushi mo itte yo. I am going (or, went), too.

6. Zo often follows sentences which contain a command or prohibition. It is the harshest of the interjections of emphasis:

a The name of a famous theater in Tokyo (shin new, tomi wealth).

Sonna koto wo shicha naranai zo.

You must n't do anything like that, do you hear?

Taihen mutsukashiku natte kita zo.

It has become very difficult, I can tell you.

7. Ze is vulgar except in some provinces.

Mono may occur at the end of a sentence, especially when it has a tone of complaint:

Itte mo kikanai n' desu mono.

Though I tell him he won't listen.

Koto following an adjective or a verb expresses surprise, wonder or admiration:

Kono hana no nioi no ii koto. How fragrant this flower is! Samui koto. How cold it is!

Yoku mawarimasu koto. How it spins!

b Compare ari-gachi in: Kō iu baai ni wa arigachi na (no) koto desu kara, sō fukaku togameru ni wa oyobimasen. You need not censure [him] severely; for in such a case [a blunder like that] is very apt to occur.

c Note that verbs like naku-su (ru) and this sha-su (ru) in the negative conjugation usually assume the form nakusanai, shasanai, etc., following not the paradigm of suru but that of hangsu.

REMARKS ON APPELLATIONS.

It is a peculiar feature of the language that in addressing a person or speaking of members of the family of that person or of one's own family, the terms employed vary according to the relative rank of those concerned. These distinctions are due to the careful grading of social classes and to the strict subordination of the members of a family one to another. Frequently a polite term differs from a common one only in having the honorific prefix o or go (Ch. XIII.) or a suffix such as sama or san (p. 14c) or go. In other cases the polite term is a special word derived from the Chinese.

In calling a person one adds san a to the family name or says anata. Teachers, superiors in a profession or an art and older men of culture whom one wishes to treat with regard may well be addressed by the title sensei. Soldiers in addressing superior officers add dono to the title. Among equals or those who are on familiar terms, such as students, officials, merchants, etc., kun takes the place of san. In calling to coolies and one's own servants one usually employs their personal names, which may even be abbreviated (p. 257c). In talking about persons the same distinctions hold good.

For the titles of persons of high rank see p. 311d. The following are the most important appellations:

1. Master of the house.

Go zen Your Grace, His Grace. b [rank].

Tono sama (of former feudal lords and other people of high Danna sama, danna san (to the lady of the house by an inferior, to a servant of the person in question, by a servant to his master).

Go tei-shu the master of the house, your husband.

Go shu-jin (to a subordinate at a store or a hotel).

Shu-jin (by a clerk to a customer).

"Husband" is otto, but among equals a lady commonly speaks of her husband by his surname or personal name without san,

a The younger generation does not use the unabbreviated and very formal sama with surnames.

b Note the homonymns in the nonsensical sentence: Go zen wa gozen ni gozen wo go zen meshiagarimashita. His Grace ate sive bowls of rice before noon.

while her friends use his surname with san. See also p. 365b. To a caller a servant may speak of his master as danna.

2. Lady of the house.

O ue sama Your Grace. Oku gata Her Grace.

Oku sama, oku san (corresponds to danna sama).

Go shin-zō sama, go shin san (shin=atarashii, zō=tsukuru, from a former custom of a new couple's building a new house for their dwelling).

Sai-kun your wife, his wife (among familiar friends). a

O kami san (among merchants and laborers). b

"My wife" is tsuma, sai, gu-sai (foolish wife), ka-nai. A man of the lower classes may say  $kak\bar{a}$ . The word  $ny\bar{o}-b\bar{o}$ , originally elegant, is now used only in speaking familiarly of the wife of a third person or of one's own wife.

3. Parents.

Go ryō-shin sama your parents.

"My parents" is ryōshin or oya.c

4. Father.

Go som-pu sama (son honorable) your honored father.

Go shim-pu sama (shin=oya) your father.

O tō sama, otottsan (from toto), your father, papa!

"My father" is chichi, chichi-oya or oya-ji (p. 58b).

5. Mother.

O kā sama, okka sama (from kaka) your mother.

Okka san your mother, mamma!

"My mother" is haha, or haha-oya. People of the older generation say o fukuro, but this is in most cases a vulgar word.

6. Grandfather: O jii san (jii for jiji). d

"My grandfather" may also be jiji.

7. Grandmother: O  $b\bar{a}$  san  $(b\bar{a}$  for baba).

"My grandmother": baba.

a A man must not speak of his own wife as saikun.

b E. g., kurumaya no o kami san. Expressions like Mrs. Taguchi, Miss Taguchi, must be paraphrased: Taguchi san no oku san, Taguchi san no o jō san, etc.

c Oya-kata means the leader of a gang of coolies or the master of a small inn. Distinguish  $\bar{o}$ -ya (great house) the owner of a rented house.

d O  $b\bar{a}$  san and o jii san are also used in addressing old ladies and gentlemen in general.

S. Elder brother.

Go rei-kei (sama) your elder brother. a

O ani sama, o ani san, nii sama, nii san.

Ani san, nii san (by younger brothers and sisters).

"My elder brother" is ani. Ani-ki is vulgar now.

9. Younger brother.

Go sha-tei (sama) your younger brother (sha house). Otōto san, otōto go (to inferiors). b

10. Elder sister: O ane sama your elder sister.

Ane san, nei san (by younger brothers and sisters).

11. Younger sister: O imoto san your younger sister. O imoto go, imōto go (to inferiors).

12. Son, daughter, child.

Go shi-soku, o musuko sama, o musuko san your son.

Musuko your boy (to inferiors), my boy.

Segare my boy.

O bō san, bō san, botchan (p. 232b).

Go chō-nan your eldest son.

Go ji-nan your second son. Go san-nan your third son.

O jo san your daughter, miss!

O musume san your (or his) daughter.

Musume your daughter (to inferiors), my daughter.

O ko san your child.

Go sō-ryō your eldest child. O chiisai no your baby.

"Father-in-law" or "mother-in-law" is (o)  $sh\bar{u}to$ .  $Sh\bar{u}to$ . me for "mother-in-law" is a literary word. Strictly speaking  $sh\bar{u}to$  are the husband's parents. A man may speak of his wife's parents as kanai no chichi, kanai no haha.

A groom, or a husband from the point of view of the wife's family, is called (o) muko(san); a bride, wife, daughter-in-law, sister-in-law, is (o) yome (san). "Bride" and "groom" in the strict sense are hana-yome, hana-muko. A wedded pair are (go) fūfu: Tanaka san go fūfu Mr. and Mrs. Tanaka.

a From rei excellent and kei elder brother. Kei=ani; tei =otōto. Kei-tei, more commonly pronounced kyō-dai, designates a brother (or a sister), older or younger. "Your brother (or sister) is go kyōdai. Compare shi-mai (shi = ane, mai = imōto) sister.

b Go, moderately honorific. Compare o imoto go, o musume go, o yome go, etc.

SYNTAX.

CHAPTER LXXXV.

The order of words in a clause is rather more simple than in European languages. It is the same in affirmative and in interrogative sentences, in principal and in dependent clauses.

1. The main rule is that all modifying words and clauses precede the governing word. A modifying word is sometimes separated by an intervening modifier from the governing word; e. g.,

Nadakai daigakkō no kyōshi a famous university professor, or, a professor of a famous university (p. 113a).

Furui hyakushō no ie an old farmhouse (farmer's house). Likewise an adverb precedes the verb, adjective, or adverb which it modifies: taihen osoi very late, goku hayaku very soon.

Chotto oide. Come just a moment.

There are a few apparent exceptions to this rule:

Shirimasen yoku. I don't know—at least not well.

Shitsurei shigoku. You are exceedingly rude.

Numerals, together with the numeratives, are not modifiers of nouns as in English (p. 341). a

- 2. Case-particles and postpositions follow their substantives. b All the conjunctions, except the auxiliaries moshi, manichi, tatoi and yoshi (which stand at the beginning of clauses) follow their verbs.
- 3. The order in a complete sentence is ordinarily the following: (1) subject, often understood; (2) indirect object or adverbial modifier; (3) direct object, and (4) verb.

a Numerals are used as substantives occasionally. Like adverbs (p. 352) they may also with no take the attributive position.

b Such words as made, to, ka, nado, etc., take precedence of the case particles. Words like kurai, bakari, may be brought under the same rule, except that they take the place of ga and wo. But they may also follow ni. Watakushi ni bakari kurete tomodachi ni wa yaranai. He gave only to me, not to my friend Compare: Shinu bakari ni natte imasu. He is at the point of death. See also p. 357c.

An indirect object or an adverbial modifier, with or without wa, may take the first position for the sake of emphasis:

Sono hito ni wa nani mo yaranakatta.

I did n't give anything to HIM.

Sukoshi mo shimpai ga arimasen.

I have n't the LEAST anxiety.

Taihen ni hito ga ō gozaimasu.

There are very many people.

The indirect object or adverbial modifier may also stand more naturally between the direct object and the verb: Tokei wo shichi ni okimashita. He pawned his watch. In many cases more depends on the stress of the voice than on the position of the words. Thus we may say either Inochi wo kuni no tame ni sutemashita or Kuni no tame ni inochi wo sutemashita: He gave his life for his country. Compare p. 57a. Ordinarily words denoting time precede words denoting place.

Myōnichi Yokohama ye ikimas'.

I will go to Yokohama to-morrow.

It is a universal rule that the general precedes the particular.

Ashita no asa go ji ni at five to-morrow morning.

Reido ika go do five degrees below zero.

Interrogative words do not necessarily take the first place as in English.

4. The order in a subordinate clause is just the same as in an independent sentence, the only difference being that the principal verb is followed by a conjunction or inflected so as to show the relation of the clause to what follows. All dependent clauses precede the principal clause. In careless speech, however, it often happens that a subordinative or a dependent clause, conditional, concessive or causal, lags behind the rest of the sentence (pp. 85c, 392a) The same construction is sometimes chosen for the sake of emphasis.

Ellipses are very common. Often a verb or auxiliary must be supplied:

Yoku ki wo tsukete. Take good care! (p. 164, 8)

O medetō. Congratulations!

 $D\bar{o}$  itashimashite.

Why, how can you? Don't mention it! (p. 218d).

Senjitsu wa (shitsurei itashimashita).

I was rude the other day.

Kore wa dōmo may mean almost anything, shitsurei itashimashita, or arigatō gozaimasu, or o mezurashii (you are quite a stranger), being understood.

Ellipses are especially common in proverbs; e. g.,

Naki-tsura ni hachi.

Bees sting a crying face (Misfortunes never come singly).

NOTE.

While, as has been said, the construction of simple sentences or clauses in themselves is not so difficult, the foreign student ambitious to master the colloquial will find that it is his most serious problem to join clauses together so as to form a connected, and to the Japanese mind luminous, whole. Japanese poetry is sententious and fragmentary, but colloquial narratives and addresses must be thoroughly coherent. When listening to a Japanese speech or story one need not be surprised to find no conclusive verb and no period until the end of the whole is reached. In reading connected pieces like the following anecdotes it may be a good exercise for the student (1) to rewrite the story, breaking it up into as many short sentences as possible, and then (2) to recombine them so as to make, if possible, one continuous narrative of the whole.

ANECDOTES.

Ōta Mochis'ke no Hanashi.

a This story is well known in Japan. It is found, for instance, in Edo Meisho Zue (p. 281f). The hero is better known now by the name ota Dokwan. In ancient times a man might have besides the family name two or three names: a true name (nanori), a popular name (tsū-shō) and perhaps still another. Since the Restoration it has become the rule to have only one name. In 1456 ota Dokwan founded on the present site of Tōkyō a fortress, which was later transformed by Ieyasu into the great castle of Edo.

b For the honorific inflection of verbs see p. 268. c Totsuka a place near what is now Yokohama.

d This poem is by Prince Kaneaki and is found in the collection called  $G\bar{o}$ -sh $\bar{u}$ -i-sh $\bar{u}$  the "Second Gleaning" (go later, sh $\bar{u}=hirou$ , i=nokori, sh $\bar{u}=atsumeru$ ). The meaning is: Yamabuki wa hana ga yae ni saku keredomo, mi ga hitotsu mo nai no ga zamen desu. Nanae yae (p. 64) sevenfold and eightfold, of the double blossoms (compare yae-zakura double cherry blossoms); sakedomo = saku keredomo (p. 265d); zo after naki (= nai) is emphatic; wabishiki sad (variant reading kanashiki).

a The famous philosopher Meng-tse or Mencius (Japanese Mō-shi) lived B.C. 371—288. Having lost his father at an early age, he was educated by his mother. The stories here told illustrate the great solicitude with which she watched over her boy's education. A version in the form of the written language may be found in Chamberlain's "Romanized Japanese Reader."

b A-sei next to the sage, i. e., the greatest philosopher next to Confucius "the Wise" (sei-jin). This title was first given to Mengtse by one of his commentators and was officially confirmed by the Chinese Emperor Wan-tsung in the year 1330.

e Aoto Saemon, a high official in the second half of the XIII. Century, is famous for his just decisions and his wise and economical administration. Aoto is the family name; Saemon, originally a title (sa-e-mon no jō head of the left gate guard), has become a part of his name. The anecdote here related is very well known and is frequently referred to. For this and other stories of Aoto Saemon see Chamberlain's "Romanized Japanese Reader."
